

ROGUE RIVER MAN TO SEEK JUSTICE OF PEACE PLACE

A petition asking that the name of E. H. Haynes of Rogue River, be placed on the general election ballot as an "independent candidate" for justice of the peace of the Gold Hill district, has been filed with the county clerk. The petition, however, will not be officially recognized until August 1 next, the first day under the Oregon law, when an independent candidacy can be filed. The final date for filing such petitions is 45 days before the election day.

The petition is signed by 21 people all living at Rogue River and Haynes will oppose H. D. (Johnny) Reed of Gold Hill, incumbent justice of the peace. Reed received both the Republican and Democratic nomination at the May primary.

Petitions are the order of the day in Jackson county, circulators being abroad seeking names for nine or ten measures. To date the rural areas have been the favorite hunting grounds, with the invasion of the cities to come later. From the present outlook there will be more measures initiated than candidates.

Petitions have been filed with the county clerk for checking of names, for the state water power and hydro-electric constitutional amendment, which provides for state supervision of all water rights and power development within the state; the tax supervision and conservation bill, which provides for three non-salaried workers empowered to keep an eye on all funds in each county, and later the tax budget, if needed after the budget committee has finished, and the personal income tax bill which provides for the reduction of property tax and increasing the income tax, with no exemptions.

Petitions are also being circulated for the repeal of the Volstead act, the abolishment of auto license fees, higher education merger, and four for remedying the taxes and autos.

No particular difficulty is being encountered in procuring names at the rate of a nickel or dime. A majority of the circulators are from Portland and it is estimated there are a score of them canvassing this county.

FISH CLIMBING SAVAGE RAPIDS

Fish are traveling through the fishway at the Savage Rapids dam on Rogue river at the rate of five per minute, according to Game Warden Ed Walker. This count was made at noon Friday and Warden Walker thinks that the rate is higher in the morning and evening, when a fish feels more like going places. The finny tribe is now headed upstream to spawn. The present run is the heaviest in seven years.

Warden Walker Thursday and Friday directed the removal of between 700 and 1000 fish, stranded in deep pools, when the water was lowered on the south side of the river. A screen had been installed shutting off this portion from fish traffic which now has no place to go but up the fishway, or back to the Pacific ocean. The fish were prone to gather along the south side of the dam where there was a cross current and loaf, but the diversion of the water has eliminated this.

The reports that the fish were running in large numbers sent piscatorial enthusiasts to the river, but they are as hard to catch as ever. This is attributed to the abundance of insect life, the non-clarity of the water, and the intensity with which the fish are hitting for spawning spots.

Christian Church Concert

Seldom has the public been offered such a variety of instrumental music in a single concert as is presented by the Hanna Concert company in a musical program at the First Christian church on Tuesday evening, June 28.

Ever since this organization has been before the public, it has rapidly made its way into the hearts of music loving people because of its merits as a real musical organization. This season they feature a group of Swiss hand bell selections. The bells, over 50 in number, are manipulated by four skilled players and have proven a sensation.

The company is composed of Brown Hanna, director, Earl Hanna, Victor Jacobs and Le Roy Hay. The concert is free and will be of interest to all.

LICENSE SALES AT PAR; HOPE FOR EXTENSION WANES

Purchase of auto licenses, to date, is average, according to the sheriff's office, in this county, Saturday 82 temporary permits were issued by that office and the total to date is on a par with previous years. It is expected, however, that the coming week will see a rush for applicants. New licenses are due Friday, July 1.

The final day for making applications is Thursday, June 30. Traffic officers have announced that adherence to the license regulations will be enforced over the July 4th holidays.

Many autoists of the county have made their license applications either direct or through the banks. Also a number of autoists are "holding off" in the hope that Governor Meier will grant a moratorium. This, however, is said to be a remote possibility.

Even in the most prosperous years there is always a hesitancy among motorists in procuring licenses, and the diffidence is intensified in the present stress. It is estimated that close to 1000 auto licenses have been purchased in the past month, through the various agencies.

OWEN-OREGON TO OPEN WEDNESDAY

The Owen-Oregon Lumber Sales company, which planned to open "one side" of its sawmill tomorrow on the employees co-operative plan, owing to the non-arrival of parts to machinery, will not start until next Wednesday, General Manager James H. Owen said yesterday.

Checking over the equipment, it was found that several portions were unserviceable, and replacements were ordered. They will arrive tomorrow, and will be installed at once. Seventy-five men will be given employment in the sawmill. All are old employees of the lumber company.

COUNTY PEDDLER DIES IN WEALTH

ROSEBURG, Ore., June 25.—(AP)—Hymen Wollenberg, who died last night at San Francisco, following an emergency operation, was Douglas county's largest individual prune grower and one of Roseburg's most widely known and wealthy residents.

He was born in Prussia in 1838, coming to the United States at the age of 21. He walked across the Isthmus of Panama, sailed from there to San Francisco and came to Roseburg, Oregon, in 1860.

HOTEL PATRONS ENJOY PEARS ON PUBLICITY TEST

First reports on the fresh pears furnished by the Oregon-Washington Pear bureau to eight hotels for experimental work show that the pears were well received by the public. The bureau supplied ten boxes of pears to each hotel for test-out work in a plan to widen the channel for Oregon-Washington pears.

In St. Louis, B. P. Case, chief steward and purchasing agent of the American Annex hotel, writes, "We have used these Winter Nells pears in various ways. We have served at the American and Annex hotel restaurants and on civic luncheons and parties a fresh pear to each guest. This service has been a free service. We placed on the menus at both hotels baked pears, pear pie and stewed pears at a price of ten cents, and they were good sellers.

"I believe this was a nice way for the Oregon-Washington Pear bureau to do, as many people remarked they did not know they were so good. This applies especially to the fresh pears served on the tables to eat. Some thought they were not ripe enough to eat, but when they ate them, they found that they were in the right condition."

At the Hotel Statler in Cleveland, Raymond J. Kief, president, says: "We have tried the Nells pears out several different ways and the only real results were obtained by baking and serving them with cream. The public has not been educated to the use of fresh pears either during the local season or winter season, and in my opinion, it is a question of years of advertising before they can hope to gain the desired popularity."

Joseph Hill, in charge of operations at the Hotel William Penn in Pittsburgh, was furnished D'Anjou pears, and reports: "We used them as baked pears, stewed pears and pear pie and same were listed on our menus as 'D'Anjou pear pie' or whatever manner in which they were prepared. We have also used the stickers that were sent us and mailed to the Oregon-Washington Pear bureau several of our menus with the pear items marked thereon. The sales on this item, of course, have been quite good with us for we had been featuring pears long before we received the offer from the bureau. Can only say that everyone who partook of the pears prepared in the several different ways liked them very much and we had quite a bit of repeat business on this item."

MONDAY MARKS ANNIVERSARY OF IMPRISONMENT

Tomorrow, June 27th, is the fifth anniversary of the entrance into state prison at Selem of the DeAutremont brothers—Hugh, Ray and Roy—southern Oregon's most notorious criminals, who eluded a worldwide hunt for three and one-half years. They have served five years of life terms, for the Siskiyou tunnel quadruple murders, and attempted train robbery, which occurred at noon, October 9, 1923. Before their confessions, with which the brothers dickered with the law to escape the noose, the conviction of Hugh was heralded by the sympathetic as a "miscarriage of justice," and in the same issue of the Mail Tribune, that carried the story of the confessions, was a letter to the editor protesting against "the sacrifice of innocence."

Five years behind prison walls, according to local authorities, have wrought deep changes in the DeAutremonts, who are now reconciled to spending all their days in the penitentiary. At first they hoped for freedom—Hugh in ten years, on account of his youth, and the twins—Ray and Roy—in fifteen years. Even this slim hope, according to Jackson inmates recently released, has faded now.

Ray and Roy are employed in the prison barber shops, at the trade they followed in civil life, and Hugh is a prison laundry worker. All are model prisoners, and popular with their fellow-inmates—something in their favor. Hugh is shortstop on the prison ball team, and Ray a teacher of Spanish in their leisure hours. Roy is inventing an "unlockable lock" for gas tanks.

The DeAutremonts, whose crime and confession shocked the state, at the time, have all but been forgotten by the public.

APRICOT HARVEST OPENS JULY 10TH

Picking of the apricot crop of Fern valley, estimated at between 30 and 40 tons, will start about July 10, according to George Aiden, one of the largest growers. It will be an average crop of large size and high quality. The peach crop of the Ashland district will be ready for picking about the same time.

The Fern Valley apricot is in high favor with housewives for canning and preserving. The local market is now plentifully supplied with California apricots, but they will be cleaned up before the home supply is available, according to Aiden. The apricots are expected to ripen rapidly, the first 10 days of next month.

The cherry crop of the valley, below average on account of heavy rains during the period of pollination, will start within the next week or ten days. The Rogue River Canning company has planned to pack a goodly portion of them when the season starts.

The second cutting of hay in the valley will start the first of July, followed by grain threshing. The first cutting of hay was hit by rain, with a minimum damage, growers report.

HEREFORD BREEDERS MEET IN LAKE CREEK

A successful meeting of Hereford breeders of the Lake creek district was conducted in Lake Creek Friday, according to Robert G. Fowler, county agricultural and club agent, who presided over the gathering.

A picnic lunch was served in the new Grange hall, followed by plans being made to organize a branch of the Hereford Breeders' association. Harry Lingren, livestock field man of Oregon State college, Corvallis, spoke, as did Dr. Robert Jay, who spoke on nutrition and control of liver fluke.
