What the Girl Scouts Are Doing

By Mrs. D. J. Wilson, Camp Chaparral, Big Basin, California.

Dear Medford Girl Scouts:

If you can imagine a vast area of big and tall redwoods along a big and sloping hill and down through a valley criss-crossed with bubbling brooks—then you can picture the regional camp down here in Santa Cruz county, called Chaparral!

With so many Girl Scouts and leaders in attendance it seems impossible to count them, for at meal time the tables look as though they covered acres! And speaking of food, you know how good that tastes at camp always, and everyone always does justice to the Camp Chaparral meals, I can assure you!

No one sleeps in tents here. You just encase yourself and your possessions in some little woody corner which is called your "nest," and there you sleep under a tall redwood tree.

Wild animals are in abundance here—real kindies ones so far—and today as I walked through the camp I came face to face with a very much surprised mother deer and her tiny fawn. The fawn was most interested and curious about everything, and I am sure that if my mother hadn't stalked off in evident disgust, that he would have liked to have stayed and visited.

"It's the tall redwoods that are calling me today.

As I take with my packback to the road.

It's the call on me of the forest in west.

As I step with the sunlight for my load."

"To Camp Chaparral, from Boulder and Big Basin I will go.

When you see the deer run shyly 'cross the trail.

If you're thinking in your inner heart there's swag in my step, You've never been along the Redwood trail.

"It's the tall Redwoods that are calling me today.

As I take with my packback to the road."

—Official camp song.

My chief interest in class work here is puppetry and marionettes, and my efforts at present are being directed toward the making of a very gay marionette clown. If we make very nice ones and learn how to manipulate them properly we will be allowed to present them in a play some night at camp-fire.

The bell for dinner has just rung, and since there is something I just can't miss, we'll call this a column!

But remember, our Camp Wilpen Pines starts on August 7. Are you all saving your pennies?

Most Sincerely,
HELENE O. WILSON.
