GERMANY'S VETS DECIDE TO HELP JOBLESS YOUTHS

Party Political Tires Ex-Service Men Draft for Labor and Training Is Proposed As Start

By Louis F. Lochner

MAGDEBURG, Germany.—(AP)—A million German ex-service men tired of party political strife have decided to devote their energies to getting the fatherland's unemployed youth off the streets and into production of labor.

As a starter, he drafts 2,300,000 young men might be trained for productive and civic training.

The Steel Helmet is neither a radical republican like the "Reichsbanner" which draws its support chiefly from the social democrats and the trade unions, nor is it radically nationalistic like Hitler's "Storm Troops."

Among other things, its members believe that the compulsory military service of the pre-war regime had great educational value. They now look to universal labor duty to supply the same sort of educational benefits and, at the same time, to help solve the unemployment problem.

"Universal labor duty is by no means a camouflage for a conscript army," Herr Seldte observed. "It simply represents an heroic endeavor to train our youths, who have become depraved on the streets and who are exposed to the wiles of bolshevism, for a trade or profession and at the same time to teach them discipline and order."

"Compulsory labor service is to be regarded as an entry into competition with private business. It has nothing to do with state socialism."

"Just consider these facts: Germany has still 6,000,000 acres of idle land which is being plowed under by young men liable to labor duty, can be made available for homesteaders. Add to this some 17,200,000 acres which could be greatly improved, some by irrigation, some by drainage, and you see what an opportunity there is for using the energies of our healthy young men for patriotic service."

"In times of harvest there is always a dearth of farm hands which could be supplied by these young men, just as in pre-war days the harvesters were given furlough for retraining purposes."

"Every precaution must be taken, of course, that no private gain shall result from the labor contributed by these young men. The state alone must profit from what they create. It is the state which must parcel out the improved land."

"Every young man who is drawn into this labor army must feel that he is rendering a service to his country."

"To begin with, some 2,300,000 young men must be drafted. That is not much, when you consider our 6,000,000 unemployed, but we should not bite off more than we can chew to start with."

"The young men thus selected should be put in barracks as were the soldiers of pre-war days, but their 'arms' would be spades and pick-axes."

"Decent amusement, such as good talks and music and instructive lectures should be supplied, and every effort made to elevate the young men's ethical concepts."

"In fact, I would put the educational aspect in the foreground. Our youth, demoralized by unemployment and subversive propaganda, must be taken off the streets and led into orderly, normal conditions of life."

Herr Seldte's organization for a while was closely allied with the German nationalist party, but has now turned its back upon partisan politics and is devoting its energies to the fundamental problem of unemployment.

It is not improbable, however, that the new organization of German politics, manifested by the formation of a rightist cabinet under Franz von Papen, may, after the reichstag election of July 31, see the Steel Helmet play an important active role in the government. It goes without saying that in such a scheme of things Franz Seldte would be a pivotal man.

He has called a meeting of the latter association for Friday, July 22. Members are asked to meet at the Hotel Medford for luncheon at 12:15. The price of luncheon for this special occasion will be 50 cents.

Argentine Library Has Rare Volume Of Ancient Laws

SALTA, Argentina.—(AP)—In the steel vault of the Bank of the Nation here lies a 350-year-old edition of "Las Siete Partidas," a book of law compiled in the 13th century by Alfonso the Wise, king of Castile and Leon.

It was discovered casually in the Salta public library, many of whose works date back to Jesuit days in South America.

The Library of Congress in Washington has a standing request in Buenos Aires for a copy of the book, but this one probably will be kept in Argentina.

"Embittered, demoralized, bereft of even the inherent pride which once marked the real Russian aristocrat, refugees have become the special prey of the lower caste Chinese in the frontier towns." General Lodjenski, formerly of the czar's army, reports. "The fate of many white women, homeless, penniless, and broken in body and spirit, is the most pitiable spectacle of the Far East."

It is such an outcast that Gwili Andre plays in "Roar of the Dragon," the moving, dramatic story of war-torn Manchuria in which Richard Dix is starring at the Fox Craterian theater.

Sucked into the vortex of the Chinese slums, the girl throws herself upon the chivalry of an American river-boat captain, played by Dix, in her flight from the anarchy of the province.

The love that springs up between the two when they are beset by bandits, is one of the most compelling romances ever to reach the screen.

Hollywood Picture Pleases Holy Fans

"Hollywood Speaks," a dramatic smash showing the ins and outs of Hollywood, is showing at the Holly theater today and tomorrow. "Hollywood Speaks" is a story of a beautiful girl who wants to get into the movies. Her beauty and her talent are not to be passed up and through the aid of a columnist, she finally gets the "break."

The story moves rapidly and the girl is finally forced to throw all her advancement to the wind in order to save the man she loves. . . the columnist who got her to the top. Genevieve Tobin and Pat O'Brien have the leading roles and Lucien Prival also has an important part.

William Haines In Picture At Rialto

On the screen of the Fox Rialto theater today and Wednesday, William Haines drops his more familiar tricks of comedy and appears in his first straight dramatic role, that of a radio explainer in "Are You Listening?"

Besides Haines, the cast includes Madge Evans, Anita Page, Karen Morley, Neil Hamilton, Joan Marsh, Jean Hersholt and many others.

JACKSON COUNTY PRESENTS NEEDS JOBLESS RELIEF

The population today, he added, is chiefly composed of people with a desire to earn their livelihood. The objective of the tour, he described, as to get a true and accurate picture of conditions in each county and to organize the state to care for the existing situation.

The federal government will work through the states in the disbursement of the relief fund and the states through the counties. For this reason, he pointed out, it is necessary that a committee be appointed within the county to present its needs.

30,000 Unemployed Listed. Unemployment in the 13 counties of the state, where the unemployed are registered, totals 30,500. The maximum number in this same area last winter reached the 40,000 mark. This number of dependents of these heads of families totaled 79,000.

People are now confronted with the necessity of caring for the situation and even if another and the sooner they are educated to a working program, which will allow an exchange of produce between counties, as well as individuals, the better will be the welfare of the state. Mr. Maris contended, citing instances about the state, where berries have been exchanged for fish and so on down the line.

Klamath county, it was stated, is anxious to trade Jackson county potatoes for tomatoes or other fruits. Should Consider Women.

Mrs. Gabriel, as chairman of the women's division, stressed the need for considering the women in this depression period and for co-operation of men and women in reaching the solution. Food conservation, she emphasized as one of the major activities, also asking for the formation of a committee for distribution of clothing, provision of shelter and the other necessities of life.

All women's organizations of the state, she informed her audience, are uniting on this problem.

In conjunction with food conservation, Miss Nye devoted her talk to the child, "the first to suffer in times of stress." To save money, she explained people first cut out the foods most necessary to child health. In order to get them to use less expensive foods, which are equally nutritive, an extensive educational program is needed. Toward this end Miss Nye said demonstrations are being planned throughout the state.

Red Cross Work Told. Miss Roberts of the Red Cross explained the operation of relief work in her department and the constant check made with other members of the Allied Welfare organization here to avoid duplications.

Necessity for limiting work in fruit packing houses to home labor to the exclusion of Californians, was stressed by County Commissioner Barnburg, who devoted his talk to the "positive need for action" to prevent local jobs going to California labor.

Agent, Mack, home demonstration agent, described the work being carried on in rural communities to adjust living to reduced budgets.

As the most demanding need for action to relieve unemployment and to assure people a reasonable happiness, Judge Moses referred to the dependence of the nation's solidarity upon return of better conditions. The government is in greater danger today than during the war time period, he declared.

To Seattle—C. L. Reynolds of the Hotel Holland left yesterday for Seattle, where he plans to spend four or five days.

Leaves for North—Mrs. Phyllis Shafter left this noon by train for Portland.

ARMY PLANES TO BE STATIONED AT MEDFORD AIRPORT

While in the valley on a fishing trip, Major C. L. Tinker, commander of the twentieth pursuit squadron of the United States army, stationed here, announced that the plans to make arrangements for sending two units to the Rogue River valley in September, will be stationed here for two weeks.

One unit will be headquartered at the Medford municipal airport, and the other within a distance of 10 miles of the city. Major Tinker informed William Carason, city superintendent of the airport.

Another unit might possibly be located in the vicinity of Roseburg, also, Major Tinker stated. Plans are only tentative for the units to come here, Mr. Carason said, but the major plans to send them if at all possible. Approximately 15 planes would comprise the two units.

Arriving here Saturday morning in his army plane from Mather field, with Lieutenant Gordon Saville, also flying his army ship, the two left their planes in the hangar. They were accompanied on their fishing trip by Mr. Carason, who said today they had a wonderful trip, with the major landing two large trout while at the lake.

Although fishing at the lake has been poor for the past few weeks, they were able to get four trout. Fishing the Rogue on the return journey, the party was also successful in catching a number of fine fish.

Leutenant Saville flew south last evening, leaving the local port at 5 o'clock. Major Tinker remained overnight as the guest of Mr. Carason, and left at 7 a. m. today, reporting for duty at 7 a. m. at Mather field. The squadron is being transferred from Mather field to Shreveport, La.

Last evening Charles Stead and Al Davis, pilots for the United Airlines, visited the major. Stead was formerly stationed under Major Tinker, whom he had not seen for 10 years.

The army officers were quite impressed with the valley and their fishing trip, and promised Mr. Carason they would visit here again soon.
