Breaking of Club Means Certain 9

By JOHNNY FARRELL (As Told to Artie McGovern)

A good golf swing, embodying all the fundamental rules of the game, is essential in keeping scores below 100, but many golfers have excellent golf form but cannot turn in a good score, simply because of their frequent outbursts of temper.

The golfer who misses his tee shot and tries to break his club in a fit of anger is surely going to finish the hole with a 9. On the other hand, if he makes it off, he still has a chance of making par by getting down in one putt.

In a tight situation, Mr. Average Golfer starts to fret and get angry, working himself up to such a pitch that the chances are he will miss the next shot entirely. As you play a shot, forget it. As the next one is shot, forget the first. Remember that golf is a game to give you recreation, outdoor exercise, sunshine and fresh air. When you make a poor shot, assume the attitude that it's all in the game, and you will soon find the amazing difference in your score.

Psychologist Sees Need For Moron Birth Curb

(By Eva Nealon)

"Satisfied people are people who have no view. In Medford you must have many dissatisfied people"—Dr. Annie Dolman Inakeep of Berkeley, Cal., a little woman with golden hair, attired in an afternoon dress of gold with few dark touches, opened large blue eyes wider yesterday afternoon to scan from the hotel window, Cascades, Siskiyou and the hint of great open spaces beyond.

"We do not want satisfied people. There would be no progress," she explained, her rhythmic voice carrying no indication of the years which have brought her two sons, five grandchildren, a place in "Who's Who" as child psychologist and writer, and the story of her life in the recent publication of the Mitre press, "Prominent Women of America."

In Medford for the past week to visit her son, Dr. L. D. Inakeep and explain the child psychologist and poet family that she was staying at the hotel to devote her mornings to the writing of a new text book, her third for college use. All deal with psychology, the subject which has held her interest down through the years and through which she has gleaned information and inspiration for writing.

"My teaching is a laboratory for my writing. I deal entirely with the dull, retarded and delinquent children. The normal child means nothing to me. That is, of course, as a study," she stated yesterday.

Asked what finding of the past few years in the psychological field she considered most important, Dr. Inakeep clasped her slender fingers tightly for several seconds before offering a reply.

"The realization that there is a distinct technique for teaching the dull," she answered for the hesitance. "When this is used and a great deal of strength applied to fitting children to meet conditions as they must be met, then we have done something to make them partially self-supporting."

"In New York City a committee, making a study of occupations suited to boys, girls and adults of low mentality, found that education in special classes in the New York schools has definitely helped."

Turning to the much-discussed subject of sterilization, Dr. Inakeep stated, her smooth brow wrinkling a trifle as she approached the matter: "Changes of lasting value in human relationships should come through public demand, rather than being thrust upon the public by physicians and students of human relationships. For instance when people become sufficiently tired of supporting public charges they may demand that something be done to prevent so many of them being born."

"Advancement of the machine age," she continued, "makes it less and less possible for those below standard mentally, physically and morally, to earn a living. Where formerly the hand loom was frequently attended at odd times by workers of very mediocre ability, now one person of more than ordinary ability takes full care of a number of power looms."

Dr. Inakeep is just one of a family of doctors, which she explained yesterday "does not mean that we are physicians. My husband was an educator, I am an educator, Dr. W. H. Dolman, my brother, is a retired dentist in Bolivia, and Dr. Percival Dolman, another brother, an eye surgeon in San Francisco."

The latter is known to many followers of scientific events as inventor of important instruments for measuring altitude effects on the eyes, which have proved extremely beneficial to aviation.
