TIRED AND HAPPY SHRINERS RETURN FROM CONVENTION

Southern Oregon Shriners and their wives, tired and happy, are straggling home from San Francisco where the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine staged their imperial session. The pilgrimage southward is now but a memory and a mighty fifty southern Oregon people who represented Hillian temple, the smallest Shrine temple in the United States, the Rogue river valley delegation made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers.

Thousands took advantage of the opportunity. To read statistics on the Saratoga's size does not really give the least conception of its enormity—it would take several days to really see the big boat from prow to stern and the sight of climbing steel ladders and walking decks had time for a hurried glimpse of two decks and a lunch in the well stocked and appointed fountain and confectionery shop, two decks below.

Orders were continually being broadcast to various sections of the Saratoga through a system of loud speakers with an occasional bugle call being sounded also through the loud speaker system. The announcer, on the Saratoga's bridge, hardly has a voice like Graham MacNamee or Carl Teagrad and a special course in learning to understand the broadcast orders must be one of the requirements for service on America's greatest man of war. The mighty Texas, Oklahoma and New York, layhanded in the bay, were literally overshadowed by the big airplane carrier.

Chinatown, San Francisco's touch of the Orient, was swarming with red-tipped Shriners. Fisherman's Wharf, Tongue headquarters and the many famous and colorful night clubs and restaurants, for which San Francisco is famous, were generally filled with visitors who comprised the Shrine delegations from every part of North America.

Thousands of people battled and shoved for a glimpse of the final parade of the session which included the Hollywood electrical motion picture pageant and parade. The great stands, erected in San Francisco's civic center, were packed with enthusiastic thousands. Along the line of parade thousands fought for points of vantage from which to view scores of marching units, the parade of famous moving picture celebrities and gorgeously colored electrical floats.

The writer of this column, arriving late for the final show, joined the battling mob seeking a glimpse of the colorful affair. The little boy who was hoisted to our shoulders gazed with awe upon such personages as the great world, as Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon, Edw. G. Robinson, Doug and Buster Keaton and Polly Moran. But when Joe E. Brown's cavernous mouth appeared and Tom Mix waved his ten gallon sombrero, the little fellow frantically waved and lustily cheered and, incidentally, kicked the crystal out of our west pocket watch.

There's no getting away from this fact, Tom Mix and Joe Brown were the favorites of the kiddies! San Francisco feature writers delved deeply into the dictionary for adjectives to describe the sparkling, multi-hued electrical floats. They did a good job but typewriters just naively won't turn out descriptions that do them justice. The crowd had a good chuckle over a scantily-clothed Samoan girl who posed upon a gorgeous float depicting a Pago Pago scene. The dusky beauty, clad in a grass skirt, a bit of lace and a Peppodent smile was no match for San Francisco's chilly night air and her shivering would put the hula of the real south sea maiden to shame.

It was a tired lot of Shriners who boarded the Shasta last night for southern Oregon. The only excitement on the homeward trip was Rosy's much used but ever-popular sleight of hand trick which was demonstrated with a little boy holding the disappearing dime. That the little boy was mystified by Mr. Rosenbaum's blackly magic, there is no doubt and Rosy insists that no strings or wires were used.

The real mystery of it all was, who got the dime—Rosy or the little boy. After a Shriners warned the little fellow not to take any more chances with Mr. Rosenbaum, the party broke up and the weary pilgrims closed their eyes for another much-needed nap.

WILKINS PRESENTS BALLOT PETITION

Attorney M. O. Wilkins of Ashland yesterday presented for filing to the county, his nominating petitions as an independent candidate at the November election for district attorney. The first day for formal filing is Monday, August 1, when the clerk will start checking the names with the registration books for certification to the secretary of state.

A total of 330 names appears on the petition, apportioned as follows to cities and towns of the county: Ashland, 48; Medford, 58; Butte Falls, 49; Talent, 30; Phoenix, 23; Eagle Point, 7; Jacksonville, 7; Central Point, 7 and Gold Hill, 2.

It is understood that other petitions will be presented Monday. Wilkins will oppose George A. Godding, incumbent, Democrat nominee, and William Briggs, Jr., Ashland, Republican nominee, at the fall election.

SMASHUP VICTIM STILL IN COMA

Jesse Walton, Eagle Point youth, who sustained serious injuries several days ago in an auto wreck on the Reese Creek section of the Butte Falls road, was still unconscious at the Sacred Heart hospital last night. X-rays of his head, which was badly mangled, had not been taken. The boy being too sick for physicians to remove him to the X-ray laboratory. He is thought to be suffering from a fractured skull.

Delbert Tingleff, whose legs were fractured in the same wreck, was resting more easily last evening. Ralph Dinamore, driver of the car, received only minor injuries and was removed from the hospital to his home at Eagle Point Friday.

G-C SECRETARIES TALK ROAD PLAN

For the purpose of strengthening the move, instigated by the Pacific Highway association to bring about straightening of the Stakiyou section, chamber of commerce secretaries from Eugene, Roseburg, Grants Pass, Ashland and Klamath Falls, in meeting here yesterday, decided to send a good will delegation to Multnomah county in the very near future.

The delegation will also have as its mission education of Portlanders and other residents of Multnomah county regarding the existing importance of southern Oregon, of which it was pointed out the Multnomah section continues to be unaware.

The secretaries met for luncheon at the Hotel Jackson and devoted a portion of the program hour to the relief question, with which all sections of the state are now confronted.

CIVIC COUNCIL TO CONSIDER JOBLESS

Meeting for consideration of the possible cooperation between the Central Civic Council and the Medford Association of the Unemployed in solving the existing relief problem will be held at the chamber of commerce Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock, the session having been called by Larry Schade, president of the council.

The latter organization, which has not been functioning for some time, was originally formed to consider all problems of sufficient importance to warrant the attention of all civic organizations. It includes the president, secretary and one other member of each of the service clubs, the chamber of commerce, the Realty Board, the Medford Post, American Legion, the civic council and planning commission.

The present unemployment situation is considered one of the most important problems, confronting the city in many years, and for this reason the cooperation of the Central Civic Council is solicited.
