

MRS. BARNUM TO ASK RESTRAINER PENDING RULING

Formal application will be filed by Mrs. Helen V. Barnum through her attorney, Charles W. Reames, for an injunction to restrain her husband, George C. Barnum, scion of a pioneer southern Oregon family, from transferring any of his cash, bonds, or property, pending a decision in her divorce suit. Six days of testimony in circuit was concluded yesterday afternoon. The plaintiff claims that Barnum is worth $100,000 and that $40,000 of this sum, is represented by bonds. The defendant contends he is worth $25,000 to $30,000.

The main issues in the case are custody of the child, and alimony. Mrs. Barnum seeks $25,000 gross alimony, or $350 per month for life, one-third of the property and the custody of the child.

Barnum was the final witness called to the stand. He entered a vigorous denial of the charge that he had given liquor to his son. The plaintiff re-introduced testimony to refute the denial. It was alleged that from the potions the child became sick.

Mrs. Barnum charged that her husband was stingy in money matters, surly in disposition, "partied," and went on trips with other women, was discourteous to guests and frightened them with gun-waving, used profane language, and struck her. Barnum admitted trips to Yreka, Calif., Klamath Falls, Portland, and to a Rogue river cabin with "the other woman."

Barnum in reply charged that his wife became intoxicated at a Jacksonville dance, was an untidy housekeeper, not a proper person for care of the child, drove 16,000 miles in a year, was of "a nagging disposition," ran around nights with other men, and was extravagant.

A long series of unhappy domestic events, was revealed during the hearing, with conflicting testimony and counter charges. The court announced at the conclusion of the hearing, that he would be able to render an early decision and hinted that he expected, whatever the decision was, an appeal to the state supreme court would be taken.

The name of "Pat Daley," mentioned in Wednesday's testimony in the case, should have been spelled "Dally," according to court records.
