BOYS RELINQUISH SLINGSHOTS AFTER HUMANE LECTURE

Mrs. Sidney Richardson of the Jackson County Humane society is not going out for slingshot practice, but she does have several slingshots, she announced this afternoon at the Mail Tribune, coming in to tell how she acquired the hand-made weapons and to voice her appreciation of a group of boys in the south side of town, who have decided that killing birds is not good sport.
In response to numerous complaints of birds being killed by slingshots near Dakota street, Mrs. Richardson started on an investigation tour this morning. She visited several homes in the neighborhood and located many slingshots, which the owners admitted had been used for "popping off birds."
After talking with parents and boys, she found all were ready to cooperate with her in enforcing the law which forbids killing of birds without written permission from the game warden.
