

VALLEY'S TOMATO CROP WILL BRING GOLDEN RETURNS

Tomatoes, tomatoes everywhere, and lots of the juice to drink—is today's forecast from the Rogue River valley, following the extensive survey of plantings made yesterday by R. E. Kooer, vice-president and general manager of the Bagley Canning company, W. A. Gates, sales manager, and Vic Beckman, cannery statistician.

A crop which will fill, when canned, 75,000 cases, is predicted by Mr. Gates and the other two members of the tour.

Harvesting and canning of the Rogue River valley crop will start next week and growers are awaiting the arrival of the season with great optimism, seeing in the growth of tomatoes better days for southern Oregon farmers, the tour and interviews yesterday revealed.

"The quality of this year's crop promises to be such that it will eclipse all past records of valley tomatoes, accepted as superior to any of their western competitors," Mr. Gates further stated this morning, reviewing his inspection of plantings in all sections of the valley.

"For the first time in history a stuffing tomato will be prepared for market. It will be canned, whole, and in such a manner as to be suitable for stuffing and salads during the winter season, a food greatly desired by housewives. This new process is made possible," Mr. Gates explained, "by the characteristics of the local tomato, which is believed to be the only one with the firm texture required for this type of canning."

The local growers will receive $11 a ton for this year's crop, which will do much toward adding to the future prosperity of the section, considering the number of tons produced per acre.

Weather conditions are at present ideal for the proper ripening of the tomato and extensive preparations are being made for the harvesting next week.

The Bagley Canning company is now employing a shift of 70 laborers in the canning of the local bean crop.

SALEM, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Three large water permit applications for mining purposes were received by State Engineer C. E. Stricklin, during the past week, he announced today. The activities of these mining projects will be centered in Jackson, Josephine and Grant counties.

districts he said the loss would be less than five per cent. Surveys made Sunday by individual orchardists showed that the first reports had been exaggerated as to the total damage.

In the Central Point district, some damage was done to the corn by being flattened. The tallest corn suffered the most. In isolated sections apricots and other stone fruits suffered, in about the same proportions as the pears.

In Ashland and environs the wind blew with a whirlwind effect, and the storm was preceded by a shower. The storm centered on the floor of the valley and blew only briskly in the mountains.

The California Oregon Power Co. yesterday and today completed repairs to its service, demoralized by the storm. There will be a full resumption of service today. Street lights were out of commission in some portions of the city Sunday evening—noticeably on Sixth street, and Oakdale avenue.

All the grass and brush fires that sprang into new life before the gusty wind, were under control and early Sunday morning a brisk breeze cooled the valley and blew the smoke pall away.

FIRES IN REGION SOON CONTROLLED BY FOREST CREW

where 1000 acres of grass and brush had already been burned over, was placed under control, information at the forestry offices today said.

Reports received as to the amount of ground covered by the fires over the week-end, were only estimates, with several hundred acres of pasture and brush being burned in Valley View, and in the Siskiyou fire 2000 acres of brush land, and 70 acres of timberland in Oregon.

Hlt, Calif., sent word that about 3000 acres of brush and timberland had been covered in the fire. The Pacific highway in Oregon was crossed twice by the fire.

Karl Janouch, assistant supervisor of Rogue River national forest said this noon that only two lightning fires near Mt. Pitt were reported as a result of the storm Saturday night, and both were placed under control a brief time after they had broken out.

Only two minor fires, and four lightning strikes have been reported in the Rogue River national forest this season, office reports show.

The United States weather bureau at the Medford Municipal airport reported visibility about the valley this afternoon at 25 miles. Yesterday's report listed the visibility as only five miles, with a maximum temperature of 91.

Gillette Awarded Right To Patents

BOSTON—(Sp.)—Every manufacturer and seller of unlicensed slotted blades made to fit Gillette safety razors is liable to suit for damages following a sweeping federal court decision sustaining the validity of the Gillette patents. In suit for infringement of patents and damages, brought in the United States district court District of Connecticut, against Hawley Hardware company of Bridgeport, Conn., wholesaler of blades manufactured by the Clark Blade and Razor company of Newark, N. J., Judge Edwin S. Thomas found the defendant, the seller, and the actual defendant, the manufacturer, guilty and liable for costs and damages. With the validity of the Gillette patents sustained, elimination of manufacture and distribution of unlicensed blades in the United States seem probable.
