LEGAL NOTICES

Notice of Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of an execution on foreclosure duly issued out of and under the seal of the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, in and for the County of Jackson, to me directed and dated on the 21st day of July, 1932, in a certain action therein, wherein Farmers and Fruitgrowers Bank as plaintiff, recovered judgment against Frank Willard Townsend and Mary Irene Townsend, the defendants, for the sum of Nine Thousand Five Hundred Forty-two and 50-100 ($9,542.50) Dollars with interest at 7% per annum from May 11th, 1932, the sum of Three Hundred Nineteen and 01-100 ($319.01) Dollars as costs and expenses of receivership, Two Hundred and no-100 ($200.00) Dollars as receiver's fees and One Hundred Fifty and no-100 ($150.00) Dollars as attorney's fees and the further sum of Two Hundred Eighty-six and 87-100 ($286.87) Dollars as receiver's fees and expenses, with costs and disbursements taxed at Nineteen and 35-100 ($19.35) Dollars, and the further sum of Seven Hundred Fifty and no-100 ($750.00) Dollars, as attorney's fees, which judgment was enrolled and docketed in the Clerk's office of said Court in said County on the 8th day of June, 1932, and an additional judgment on July 21st, 1932.

Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to the terms of the said execution, I will on the 27th day of August, 1932, at 10:00 o'clock a. m., at the front door of the Courthouse in the City of Medford, in Jackson County, Oregon, offer for sale and will sell at public auction for cash to the highest bidder, to satisfy said judgment, together with the costs of this sale, subject to redemption as provided by law, all of the right, title and interest that the said defendants, Frank Willard Townsend and Mary Irene Townsend, had on the 1st day of August, 1930, or now have in and to the following described property, situated in the County of Jackson, State of Oregon, to-wit:

Commencing at a point at the center of the County Road 1.28 chains West and 27.95 chains South 0 degrees 12 min. West from the Northwest corner of D. L. C. No. 56 in Township 37 South, Range 2 West, W. M., which point is the Northwest corner of this tract of land and running thence South 0 degrees 12 min. West along the center of the County Road 1038.1 feet; thence South 89 degrees 59 min. West 1313.08 feet; thence North 0 degrees 19 min. East 1038 feet; thence North 89 degrees 54 min. East 1313.08 feet to the place of beginning containing 31.39 acres, more or less, subject to an easement and right-of-way in favor of Rogue River Valley Canal Company, dated April 21, 1916, and recorded May 3, 1920, in the office of the County Clerk of Jackson County, Oregon, at Volume 182 of the Deed Records of Jackson County, Oregon, at page 500 thereof.

Dated this 22nd day of July, 1932.
RALPH G. JENNINGS,
Sheriff of Jackson County, Oregon.
By OLGA E. ANDERSON, Deputy.

Nothing Venture

by Patricia Wentworth

Chapter 1

A WILL IS MADE

"YOU were saying?" said Mr. Page.

At the moment, Ambrose Weare was not saying anything at all. He had been speaking, but had fallen silent. His bed had been pushed close to the big jutting window, and his eyes had gone from his lawyer to the green lawn and the lilacs, and beyond to the glittering blue of the sea.

It was a May day, a wind blowing, and small white clouds racing before it across a rain-washed sky. Ambrose Weare sat propped up in his bed. He was dying, for no very discernible reason except that, having lived 87 years with energy and a masterful disregard of everything except the whim of the moment, he had now taken it into his head to die.

Mr. Page tapped upon his writing-pad.

"You were saying?" he repeated.

Ambrose Weare turned his head. The eyes, under shaggy grey eyebrows, still held a spark of malicious fire.

"I wasn't saying anything. What you mean is that you want me to get on."

"Well—" said Mr. Page.

Ambrose Weare laughed, not a very pleasant sound.

"Lord, Page! What a bedside manner you've got! Why can't you say straight out that I've no time to waste, and that even if I had, it's a fine afternoon and a pity to spend it in a sick-room, when you might be a great deal more pleasantly occupied with the young people?"

Mr. Page experienced a faint resentment. He had managed Ambrose Weare's affairs for some 35 years without ever becoming accustomed to his habit of tearing away those decent veils by which we hide from one another such feelings as distaste, boredom, and ennui.

It was true that he had been thinking that it would be pleasant in the garden when he had got through the business which had brought him down to Weare; but, put as Mr. Weare had just put it—well, what was one to say? His bedside manner became a little accentuated. He smiled and said nothing.

"Well, let's come to the point," said Ambrose Weare. "The legacies stand as they were, but Rosamund only gets twenty-five hundred. She can buy her trousseau with it. If she weren't going to marry Jervis, she'd have had fifteen hundred a year, but since they're engaged, that comes out. It keeps a girl steady having to come to her husband for money."

He drew in his thin lips and chuckled.

"Jervis shall have the purse-strings—but she'll get round him and help herself to as much as she wants! Hey, Page!"

"Miss Carew is very charming."

"So was her grandmother," said Ambrose Weare—"prettiest girl in the state, if she was my sister. And what good did it do her? She might have had half a dozen wealthy men—and she bolted with a penniless artist like Carew!"

"Mr. Jervis is to be congratulated," said Mr. Page.

"Well, well," said Ambrose Weare. "Who's getting off the point now? Restrain your enthusiasm for Rosamund and let's get back to my will. After the legacies—you've got 'em down?—everything to Jervis, lock, stock and barrel. Securities, house, property, and family temper to my grandson, Jervis Weare, on condition—"

Mr. Page lifted his fountain pen. His look of serious inquiry was met by a keenly mocking one.

"You're thinking now what the deuce has the old devil got up his sleeve? Hey, Page?"

Mr. Page reddened. He was comfortably stout and comfortably ruddy, with a fringe of thick grey hair about a round bald patch. The ruddy color deepened quite perceptibly. One didn't say things like that—one really didn't.

"What is the condition, Mr. Weare?"

Ambrose Weare looked out upon the lawn. Two figures were crossing it as he looked—Jervis checking that impatient stride of his to keep pace with his companion. Rosamund never hurried. She wore a lilac dress. The sun touched her corn-colored hair, and the light wind ruffled it. Anyone might have thought that they made a handsome couple.

What Ambrose Weare thought, no one could tell but Ambrose Weare. He watched for a moment, saw Jervis lift that black head of his and throw out his arm with a vigorous sweep, saw Rosamund look up at him smiling, and then he turned again to Mr. Page.

"Well, Page? You're on hot coals? Well, here's the condition—provided he marries within three months of my death. Put that into your infernal legal jargon, and don't leave any loopholes."

Mr. Page was looking relieved. He did not know quite what he had expected, but with Ambrose Weare it might have been anything. He said with a smile:

"Almost a superfluous condition, Mr. Weare, since he is engaged."

The hawk nose above the thin mouth twitched a little.

"Engaged isn't married," said Ambrose Weare. "He's been engaged for six months, and when I talk to him about getting married, he doesn't want to hurry her. And when I talk to her, she thinks being engaged is so delightful that she'd like it to go on for ever. Nonsense! Not want to hurry her? I'll see to it that he hurries her! He'll have to if he doesn't want to go to her for pocket money!" Mr. Weare chuckled. "If he doesn't marry before the three months is up, she gets the lot."

Mr. Page was plainly startled.

"Miss Carew?" he exclaimed.

"My great-niece, Rosamund Veronica Leonard Carew. What any man or woman wants with more than one name, is beyond me. Pack of nonsense! But take 'em down—Rosamund—Veronica—Leonard. If Jervis isn't married in three months and a day—we'll throw in the day for luck—she comes in instead of him and gets the lot."

"Mr. Weare—I must point out very seriously—"

A look of fury passed over the face against the high white pillow. The right hand lying on the crimson comforter clenched and lifted.

"Write what I tell you! It's my will isn't it?"

"Mr. Weare, I must point out—"

The clenched hand fell, the head tilted a little. Mr. Page, alarmed, broke off.

Ambrose Weare shut his eyes.

"Write-what-I-told-you," he said in a changed, fluttering voice.

Mr. Page wrote with a reluctant and disapproving pen.

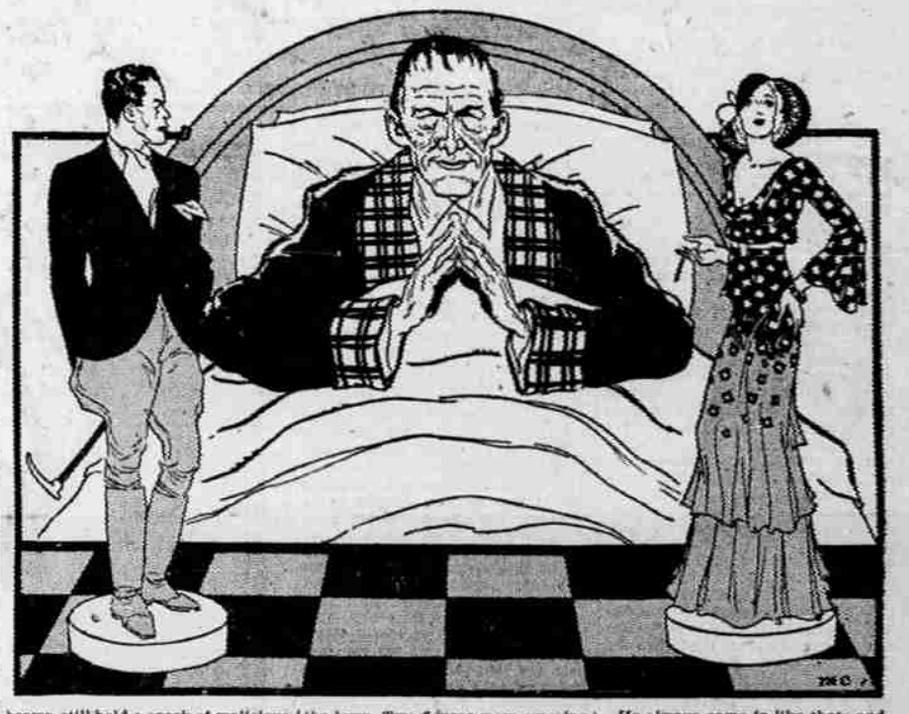
Nan Forsyth looked up from her typewriter and dropped her hands from the keys. Jervis Weare was coming out. Half an hour—20 minutes—ten. . . . She did not know how long it was since he had come in with his frown and the jerk of the shoulders which said, as plainly as any words, "For heaven's sake let's get this over!"



He always came in like that; and then, after ten—20—30 minutes, out again, with his black head up and the frown gone, as if he had got rid of something, for the moment at any rate. He never spoke to her except to ask for Mr. Page, and then he might as well have been speaking into a telephone.

It was a false alarm. He wasn't coming after all, though she had certainly heard him push back his chair a minute ago. This was his last visit. She and Miss Villiers had been called in to witness his signature to the deed of settlement. Miss Villiers, who had typed the deed, had been loud in praise of its generosity—

"My, dear! She's a lucky girl! Twenty-five hundred a year just to spend on herself! And just as likely as not she'll have no idea of how to do it justice."

"What a fool you are, Villiers!" she said. "Look here, have you found that mortgage Mr. Page was asking for?"

"My! No! I clean forgot."

"Then you'd better go and look for it."

Villiers went reluctantly.

Desperately Nan hoped that she would not find the mortgage until Jervis Weare had come striding through the room. She wanted just that one moment—to see the inner door open, to see him come out, to see him pass, to see him go, to know him gone. It was going to hurt horribly. She wanted it even if it hurt her beyond everything she knew or could guess about pain.

But you mustn't be watched when things are hurting you like that—you mustn't have people looking on and chattering—it wasn't decent.

Nan's heart, torn by love for Jervis, meets a worse test in tomorrow's installment.

Williams Creek

WILLIAMS CREEK, Aug. 22.—(Spl.) Mr. Holland of Williams, who works in the Amos Smith sawmill, ran a splinter in his finger which became infected. Dr. Bailey of Grants Pass lanced it several times, but it continued to grow worse until it is feared he will lose the finger, if not the entire hand.

Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Lewman and children, Earl Whisler, Glenera and Bobby Boyce, spent last week camping on Grayback.

Mrs. Smith, who has been with her daughter, Mrs. George Cockman, for the last year, left Wednesday for Placerville, Cal., to visit.

Mrs. Earl Whisler and daughter Edna called on Mrs. C. W. Roberts Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Fields and daughter Iola drove to Crescent City Thursday, remaining until Friday.

Friends are sorry to know that Clem Blodgette, very poorly for some time, has been ordered by Dr. Mosier of Grants Pass to stay in bed.

Mrs. Hedgepeth had her hand painfully hurt last week when a cow struck her finger with a horn. It was feared the finger was broken.

Mrs. Pennington visited Sunday afternoon with Mrs. R. F. Lewman.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Warner and son Lloyd have all been on the sick list with flu, but are improving.

School district No. 6 has received $183.78 from the O. & C. land grant money, which will be a great help.

A portable canner operated at Provolt Tuesday. More than 1,000 cans of vegetables were canned. They will be at Williams again one day this week and spend one day near Murphy.

The small son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Morrison fell last week, striking his arm on some sharp object and cutting it badly, necessitating the taking of several stitches.

Ten families of Grants Pass picnicked over the week-end at the Caves camp and other places on Williams creek.
