

DEMOCRATS TRAIN ELECTION GUNS ON G. O. P. OLD GUARD

Veterans of Capital Hill Face Bitter Battles to Retain Posts in Forecast for November Election

WASHINGTON—As battle plans for the November election shape up, it becomes evident that some of the men who have almost become institutions on Capitol Hill because of their long service face bitter fights to retain their posts.

And if the democrats fulfill their own predictions it will be a mournful day for the republicans on the senate side of the hill next March 4. No less a person than Senator Moses, republican of New Hampshire, has admitted the possibility of a democratic senate after that date. Republican control now hangs by the slenderest margin, the party division being 45 republicans, 47 democrats and one farmer-labor. Even the slightest shift in the political winds might bring about a complete shake-up in the organization of that body.

Old Guard 'On Spot'

The democrats are out a-gunning. There are a half-dozen senators at least—the very backbone of the Old Guard—whom they have definitely put "on the spot."

One is Reed Smoot of Utah, the oldest senator of them all in point of service. Continuously since 1903 the tall Utahian has clung to his seat. If the democrats could "bag" Smoot in the fall there would indeed be rejoicing in that camp. An apostle of the doctrine of high tariffs, conservative in all of his political beliefs, Smoot has theories of government differing from most democrats.

Then there's Jim Watson of Indiana, the republican leader of the senate. Much as they like the Indian personally, much as they would miss his back-slapping and incessant handshaking, his defeat probably would be considered in much the same way as that of Smoot.

He, too, is one of the Old Guard—has been since he first came to congress as a member of the house back in 1894. He has been and is a regular of regulars in all his political thinking.

The slow-moving, slow-thinking Wesley Jones of Washington is another the democrats are shooting at. Chairman of the appropriations committee, he yields to no one in his party regularity.

There Are Others

"The tall Sycamore from Connecticut"—Hiram Bingham is another. Democrats haven't forgotten how he tried to put them "on the spot" for their prohibition plank after the Chicago convention. The sharp-tongued, wisecracking Moses is still another.

Serious "Sammy" Shortridge of California is also, as are the President's good friends, Glenn of Illinois; the bald, bespectacled Oddie of Nevada, and Stelzer of Oregon. Democrats would chortle to see any of them fall by the wayside.

NO MUSEUM FOR 'RINTY' DECLARES CANINE'S TRAINER

HOLLYWOOD—Lee Duncan is a sentimental fellow who isn't saahamed of it.

When his dog Rin-Tin-Tin died, Duncan received numerous wires and letters offering money for the privilege of preserving the canine movie star for museum purposes. Some people might have taken the highest bid, but not Duncan.

"No," he said, "Rinty was my pal. I owe him all I have. He was always close to me, and now that he's gone I want to keep him with me—let him rest."

So "Rinty" is buried in the back garden of Duncan's home, where the tall bronzed man with graying hair lives with his mother. The grave is unmarked except by a white rose bush.

Duncan, who "educated" Rin-Tin-Tin, and many other dogs including "Rinty, Jr.," who will carry on the name in pictures, always directed the dog star, even after talkies complicated things. But the microphone did not change his methods of direction.

In every Rin-Tin-Tin talkie, Duncan spoke his commands to his pet as usual, but his voice was not heard in the picture because by accurate timing it was kept from the sound track—a matter of "tuning out" by switching a dial in the control room.

If anyone has the notion that a man can take a dog and let the dog work for him, as Duncan seems to have done, he would be disillusioned by watching the real work the dog's master does. "Rinty" did the work, but Duncan worked twice as hard, with endless patience and kindness.

Duncan isn't strong for "dressing up" and "going out in society." He prefers overalls and staying home. It's one secret of his success with dogs—he plays with them.

STOIC GENERAL TO CONSOLIDATE GAINS BY ARMY

'Silent Giant' of Japan's Military Off to Manchuria As Emperor's Representative—Will Rule Vast Area

TOKYO (AP)—The "silent giant" of the Japanese army, General Nohu-pochi, has gone to Manchuria as the emperor's all-powerful representative in that region.

His silence is literal, a by-word in the army, but "giant" refers to his professional standing, rather than his physical stature.

By decision of the government and with the emperor's own sanction, all Japanese agencies in what the empire's diplomats would have the world believe is the independent state of Manchoukuo, have been consolidated. Military, diplomatic and administrative functions have thus been concentrated in the person of the stoical Muto.

Wields Big Powers

His post at Changchun, capital of the new state, probably is without parallel in the world today. It carries all-embracing control over the destinies of an alien land and 30,000,000 alien people.

Alongside the shadowy sovereignty of Henry Pu-Yi, former boy emperor of China and now chief executive of Manchoukuo, the general stands as embodiment of Japan's might and as actual ruler of Manchuria and portions of Mongolia.

He is commander of the Japanese armies in Manchuria. He is governor general of the Kwantung leased territory. He is Japan's high commissioner, resident general and protector of the new state.

He is "tokumai senken taishi," which may be translated as "the emperor's own full-power ambassador."

Was Army's "Goat"

General Muto was inspector-general of military education until May 27. He resigned then, assuming technical responsibility for eleven army cadets who sided the assassination of former Premier Tsubouchi Inukai and the series of bombings that terrorized Tokyo May 15.

There was considerable popular feeling against the terrorists at that time and the army had to supply a "goat." But that the role was only temporary is indicated by Muto's return to high office.

The powerful clique of younger officers now dominant in the army consider Muto as one of the ablest exponents of their ambitions to spread the glory of Japanese arms on the continent.

FRENCH INVESTORS CONCEDE LOSS ON CHINESE RAILWAY

PARIS (AP)—The billion and a half pre-war francs which Frenchmen in every walk of life scraped together in order that the Czar could build the Chinese Eastern railway are lost forever, officials say. They have little faith in recent attempts of a group of Paris financiers to resuscitate French rights.

The new state of Manchoukuo would take on a glittering halo for these people if it would honor the claims.

Official quarters and financial circles have watched movements in the Far East of Alfred Massenet, representative of the Franco-Asiatic Bank of Paris, which bought some of the claims on the Chinese Eastern railway when the Russo-Asiatic bank, which floated the initial loans, was dissolved after the Russian revolution.

M. Massenet proposed to float a loan for the new state of Manchoukuo providing French claims in the railway were accepted.

But officials here believed that a loan of an amount sufficient to interest the new state would be difficult to float on the French market. Loss of the money put into the Chinese Eastern was a terrific blow to the floating of loans in France.

WOMAN TO LEAD ITALY DELEGATES TO LEGION MEET

ROME (AP)—Italy's department of the American Legion will send to the Portland national convention a delegation headed by a woman. She is Mrs. Julia Wheelock of Newark, N. J., who was commander of the legion here for three years.

Other members of the convention delegation named at the annual convention here are: Americo Vitelli, elected commander; Ricardo Zucchi, vice-commander; the Rev. John Maynard, secretary; and the three voting delegates, Carmine Casolini, Felix Martini and Giuseppe Spinucci.

Fourteen years after the end of the war, there are said to be in Italy many Italian-born veterans of the American army who have never made any claims for pensions, insurance or bonus payments and the Legion has undertaken to aid them in establishing their rights.

The Italian legion has 750 members, almost all naturalized Americans who have retained their adopted citizenship.

But Joan announced that she wouldn't marry until she had passed her examinations. Now she's entitled to M.D. and Ch.B. after her name.
