

DEDICATION DAY PARADE DEPICTS AREA'S PROGRESS

(Continued from Page One) knew the admiration of boys of '84. Miss Hanley's afternoon gown of black sequins with chiffon fichu trim, added much dazzle to the float as did the rows of black jet embroidery on the dollman, worn by Miss Emma Nis-

In the front seat of the surrey, which is still well equipped with lanterns and mud guards, Henry Conger and Mrs. I. A. Dow rode, the former attired in a gown, which dates back to a period preceding the Jacksonville dedication, its years numbering at least 75.

Mr. Conger, in latter's plush top hat of black and livery duster, carried the reins and guided the horses, which lifted their heads in the grand manner to support the red tassels on their bridles.

Before the surrey, in the line of march, recalling a much earlier period and the one which brought to Jacksonville all her grandeur, I. A. Dow appeared. Attired as the pioneer prospector, he carried a gold pan, and led a pack horse, equipped for the gold trail.

The surrey, now owned by Mrs. W. H. Gore, was loaned the Grange for the parade. Little Band a Hit. Visiting with the Grange entry for the applause of the crowds, the Little band of Ashland appeared with bag pipes blowing, their colorful costumes attracting much attention, this being their first official appearance in Medford. The line of march was headed by City Traffic Officer George J. Prescott, followed by State Police Officers William Elenburg and Joe Folsom, who acted as escorts. The county court and instigators of the movement which resulted in the present structure followed behind the Elks band.

Grand Army of the Republic Veterans, and the Daughters of Union Veterans were preceded by the Medford units of the Oregon National Guard. Other patriotic organizations included the United Spanish War Veterans, the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the American Legion auxiliary.

Smiling and tipping his hat to his Jacksonville friends, who waved greetings from the sidewalks, United States Senator Frederick Steiwer took part in the parade, riding with Ben Sheldon, former state legislator. Jacksonville Grange, with its modes of travel used to pay taxes at the three courthouses, was followed by Ashland American Legion post's Little band, attired in the newest Scotch plaids.

Representatives of the Salvation Army were next in line. Miss Mary Anita Burns, was in the float which followed, and the Lions' club winner of the popularity contest, Miss Ruby Stone, was also in the procession. Other contestants in the popularity voting took part in the parade.

A float, in blending hues of yellow, arranged to resemble a large chrysanthemum, was entered by the Woodcraft Circle of that name. A goodly delegation of Josephine county's Cavemen invaded the line of march, and at one time were successful in kidnapping J. Verne Shugle, minute photographer, from the side-lines.

A lovely garden scene was depicted by the Medford Garden club's entry, in which Nellie Green and Ethel Chord were their representatives. Continuing in the procession were the Boy Scouts, accompanied by their executive, Oscar E. Hoover; the Humane society, Medford Fire Department, led by Chief Roy Elliott; Jackson county machines, Walter W. Abber, Inc., Pierce-Allen Motor company, Medford American Legion drum corps and Oates Auto Co.

Atop of the Activists' congratulatory float, sat Klith Pennell, carrying a staff, on which was tied a bottle. Sanderson Motor company was followed by the Colonial Garage's entry and the American Laundry trucks, which went before the Activists.

Many industrial entrants. Other commercial entrants were Bert's Wash Rack, Big Pines Lumber company, Theaters, Edas Bros' express in '88 and today; Crater Lake Auto unit Co., Economy Lumber Co., Davis Transfer, Eden Valley Nursery, General Petroleum, Gilmore, Gold Seal Creamery, Wm. MEDFORD GIRL'S RECOVERY NEAR MODERN MIRACLE

A list of exercises given her there will be carried out here and if development doesn't continue, the little girl will go back to the foundation, where she was the first entry from the state of Oregon, and the most "distant" patient with exception of one, a little girl from Porto Rico. Forty-four states are represented at the foundation, and "the south is strong for Roosevelt," Mrs. Holloway remarked. Coming through that section by motor, she explained yesterday, she saw on the right and left car plates reading "Repeat the 18th Amendment," and "Vote for Roosevelt." Shrine State Session.
