Will Rogers At Fox Craterian

Vivacious Dorothy Jordan and hilarious Will Rogers have a lot to do towards making "Down To Earth," the new Fox production, one of the funniest comedies of the season.

With Will Rogers offering some valuable suggestions on the proper way to handle extravagant wives, "Down to Earth," which opens its engagement at the Craterian theatre today, is proving to be one of the most popular vehicles of his career.

Goulds Leave—Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Gould of Crater Lake are leaving today for Portland to attend the national American Legion convention, which opens Monday.

"THE FRONT PAGE" ON ROXY SCREEN TODAY
Adolphe Menjou and Pat O'Brien are starred in "The Front Page" at the Roxy today.
Howard Hughes has brought "The Front Page" to the screen with all of its tang of salty language and unrestrained conversation.

Mae Marsh Starring In Rialto Picture

Rebecca, the imaginative little girl whose name came out of Ivanhoe and who lived at Sunnybrook Farm, has long been a favorite role of the greatest stars of the stage. For the modern screen version of the immortal classic, showing at the Rialto theatre today and tomorrow, Marian Nixon, whose personality has carried her to new screen heights, was chosen to portray the character that to millions is symbolic of optimism.

Mae Marsh, recently seen as the mother in "Over the Hill," plays the part of Aunt Jane, the more sympathetic of the two aunts. Louise Clouser Hale plays the part of Aunt Miranda, whose hard-shelled surface is finally pierced by Rebecca's irresistible personality.

EDWARD G. ROBINSON AT STATE IN "TWO SECONDS"

Edward G. Robinson's latest starring vehicle, "Two Seconds," which is now at the State, unfolds a story which only takes two seconds in thought.

The case taken on "Two Seconds" results in the fifth successive hit for Edward G. Robinson, star of "Five Star Final" and "Little Caesar," and Mervyn LeRoy, who directed Robinson in both pictures.
