The Top's the Thing in Winter Coats; Fur Collars and Scarfs Are Stressed

By DIANA MERWIN
Associated Press Fashion Editor
PARIS—(AP)—The brisk new winter coats for 1932 draw the eye to the top.

With fluffy furs swirling about the shoulders, flat pelts used as entire bodices and sleeves, sleeves themselves exaggerated above or below elbows and waistlines generally slender, coat interest centers above the waist, leaving most lower sections plain.

New seven-eighths and three-quarter length coats also contribute to the upper interest.

Flat furs used as an integral part of the design are an outstanding feature of the year's coat mode. Persian lamb, galyak, Indian lamb and broadtail are often used to form the bodices and sleeves while the rest of the model is of wool.

DETACHABLE collars which may be worn with or without the coat feature many of the smartest styles of the season. The grige wool model at right has a detachable shoulder cape of black astrakhan and lower puffed sleeves of the same fur.

Fluffy furs, banished for the last two years, are back in vogue, and many winter coats are designed with capes or collars banded with fox pelts.

Collars themselves have taken on new lines, swirling about the face in a fluttering frame, generally higher than the old shawl design. Detachable fox collars, close fitting and high, are an important concession to economy since they may be worn with both coats and frocks.

Dark fur is generally used on bright colored coats, both dark and light pelts are used on dark wools and black fur is most often used on black, although these rules are all violated from time to time.

Sleeves are more important than ever. There are modified mutton-legs puffed just below the shoulder, bishops puffed below the elbow and a third category which concentrates its trimming at the elbow itself.

Coats generally wrap well about the figure, buttoning on the left side. Belts are more often used than last year, and waistlines are generally semi-fitted, although straight models are also seen.

Color this year is a matter of taste, for more hues are offered than at any other time in the past decade. Browns in a variety of shades; reds, including wine, poinsettia and carnation; bottle and emerald green, navy and smoke blues, dark grey, light grey, henna and purple are all displayed and a liberal number of black models.

Fabrics, too, are varied, although heavy ribbed, diagonal and spongy wools, broadcloth and velveteen are the favorites for day coats.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The stock market today had the liveliest shake-down since the summer rally started more than two months ago, although a last hour rally reduced many extreme losses of 11 to 87 a share.

Cotton losing more than $2.50 a bale and wheat nearly 2 cents a bushel. Bonds turned reactionary, especially second grade rails where some large losses appeared.

Turnover in stocks exceeded 4,000,000 shares and occasionally the ticker fell a few minutes behind.

Some brokers felt a reaction was due, in view of the long summer advance.

Final prices were $1 to $2 above the bottom in stock which had the heaviest early losses.

My Beauty Hint

ANITA PAGE
Now that we are asked to smile away the depression, we must see that our smiles are pleasing. Sparkling teeth are needed for this genial expression, and tooth pastes and powders will keep them white of texture. But a further measure of protection is needed.

Soft foodstuffs fail to give the gums the necessary work to do, causing a lack of the red blood that keeps the teeth letter perfect.

To counteract this, choose hard breads in place of the soft breads found on most menus. Munching crisp toast or the dry rye-crisp will also help.

$100 REWARD FOR FEEDER OF GLASS TO PERL SETTER

A $100 reward has been offered by the Jackson County Humane society for the apprehension of the person, who killed by the use of ground glass, "Brownie," the little Irish setter, belonging to Frank Perl, it was announced today. And an important award in the reward will be donated by friends and neighbors. It was also stated, if information regarding the fiendish crime can be obtained.

"Brownie," the constant companion of the Perls' children, Mary Ann and William Frank, was placed outside his shelter a few nights ago to guard the gasoline tank of the automobile, which had been drained several times by robbers, Mr. Perl informed the society. About 3 o'clock in the morning a telephone call announced that "Brownie" was disturbing the peace and that complaints had been received by the individual, who announced himself as a member of the police department. Mr. Perl told why the dog was out. Later in the morning he found him dead.

The humane society was notified and immediately checked with local officials and found that the telephone call had not come from the police department. No complaints had been registered with the officers and an extensive investigation is now being made to determine the source of the call.

Posters are being placed about the town announcing the reward and the humane society does not intend to abandon the campaign until the guilty party is found.

In condemning the fiendish treatment of the little dog, the officers of the humane society submitted the following quotation of Albert Payson Terhune's:
