COOS-CURRY FIRE IN VIRGIN STAND

MARSHFIELD, Ore., Sept. 14.—(AP)—A thousand acres of virgin timber, slashings, and old burns were in flames in the southwestern Oregon coast country today.

The crown fire in the Tioga country was still burning fiercely on a four-mile front in the heart of the government's douglas fir holdings in eastern Coos county, while in southern Curry county one farm house already had been destroyed by fire and nearly 50 men were fighting a fire near the Cole Grove service station six miles south of Pistol river on the Oregon coast highway.

Reports from the Tioga district today gave little hope that the fire could be brought under control until rain comes. Estimates of the acreage burned could not be obtained.

ANTELOPE, DETER AREAS ASK ROAD WORK ERE WINTER

Two petitions for road improvement were presented the county court yesterday and today by residents of the Antelope and Deter sections.

Users of the Hill to Deter road ask that it be gravelled immediately before the winter rains further impair the present condition. The work could be done now at a great saving to the county. It is stated in the petition, and is greatly needed. The petition carries 19 signatures.

Residents of Road District No. 8, Antelope, ask for a change of the west boundary to extend south from the southwest corner, section 18, township 36, range 1, west, adding the portion of District No. 8, thus cut off, to District No. 4.

Extensive road improvement is needed from Agate to Climax, the petitioners point out and the residents in the present western portion are more closely allied with those of District No. 4. There is 16 signatures on the petition.

LEGION OPPOSES RECOGNITION OF SOVIET REGIME

bringing a greeting from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Green complimented the Legion for advocating inauguration of a shorter week day and shorter work week as a partial remedy for unemployment.

"The facts and logic of the situation growing out of the mechanism of industry," Green wrote, "make the acceptance and introduction of this great economic reform not only necessary but inevitable."

He praised the Legion for "creation of work opportunities for millions of idle people."

"The cultivation of friendly and co-operative relations between the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor," he said, "has been of great public value and has served to develop understanding between two of the largest organizations in the nation."

Beck declared, in urging the Legion to use its influence in shortening working hours, "if the entire manufacturing processes of our government were to start in full operation tomorrow morning, under the present system of excessive hours of employment and the six-day week, there would still be more than three million of our people walking the streets idle."

The Legionnaires applauded when Beck declared "We have no place in the membership of the American Federation of Labor, just as you have no place in the American Legion, for communism, bolshevism, I. W. W.ism or any of the other philosophies based on destruction of American institutions."

They cheered when he said, "The great army of workers, comprising the American Federation of Labor believe, one hundred per cent, in the fundamental principles of our great government."

After the Rev. W. H. Rogers, Portland minister, had told the Legionnaires he had seen no evidence of rowdiness or disorder by delegates during the convention, a North Carolina delegate moved that a copy of his speech be mailed to Dr. Clarence True Wilson, noted prohibition advocate. Amid cheers and laughter the motion was adopted.

Special attention to the juvenile offender was recommended in the child welfare committee report, approved by the convention. This committee also urged that there be added to the welfare departments "minimum program" the task of obtaining a public health record for every child.

The committee report was presented by George Hubbard of Seattle, chairman. The convention agreed that at least half the income from the endowment fund be allocated to the child welfare work. As in the past at least $10,000 will be allocated for administrative expenses, the report recommended that since the need for direct relief is on the increase, the national child welfare committee make every possible economy in administration of available funds.

"It is anticipated," the report said, "that the coming year will bring increased application for emergency aid for families and children of veterans."

Debt Cancellation Flagged Resolutions denouncing cancellation of European war debts and opposing adherence of the United States to the world court were reported favorably by the foreign relations committee as the American Legion resumed its convention here today.

The resolutions and legislative committees were not yet ready to report the controversial bonus payment and B. E. F. eviction resolutions when the legion was called to order by Commander Henry L. Stevens, Jr.

The legionnaires were late in arriving and the convention was not called to order until shortly before 10 a. m., an hour after the scheduled time.

Stevens said he expected to have the bonus payment resolution ready for the convention by noon.

"We would like to get it out of the way," he said.

George Howitt of Wisconsin, chairman of the resolutions committee of the convention, said today the bonus army controversy and the question of prohibition would not be brought before the convention during today's session.

Two sub-committees of the resolutions committee have these questions in hand. The resolution would censure President Hoover for using troops in evicting the bonus marchers is before the policy sub-committee; the legislative sub-committee of the resolution committee will deal with prohibition.

As the convention got away to a late start at the municipal auditorium the large legislative committee of the legion met in another part of the city to report on the bonus payment question. This committee was under the chairmanship of Henry W. Colmery of Kansas.

Telegrams were read to the convention from Madame Ernestine Schuman-Heink, General John J. Pershing and the governors of Idaho and New Mexico.

Madame Schuman-Heink had been invited to sing and General Pershing responded to a telegram greeting him on his birthday.

Brigadier General Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, was received with considerable applause when he was presented to the convention.
