FOOTBALL
This is the season of the year for football, so the Holy Cross football team will be organized.

Ye Smudge Pot
By Arthur Perry
This is the season of the year for football, so the Holy Cross football team will be organized.

Between halves, as the right guard, he will borrow his own plug hat, and pull therefrom, without the aid of any mechanical device, a setting of conspirators.

The valley Holy Cross team, will be especially strong in kicking, though it is not expected they will be able to kick the pigskin, as far as the good name of the valley, has been boosted, for no good reason at all.

The offensive style of play will be featured. The sin-guards will be especially built. This enables the wearer to lie-low or lie-loud, as occasion requires.

The bawl-passing will be a revelation. Many times a bawl has been passed at the Bill Oore corner, and beat a Chrysler 8 to Prospect. This is due to the bawl-bearing bawl carrier system employed.

If it rains, before, after, or during the game, it will be postponed. The team don't like Mud.

JUST ANOTHER IDEA
(Red Cloud (Neb) Advertiser)
Our churches are getting hard up and people are making their contribution to the preacher's salary smaller. I think the people should be taxed to keep up the churches and pay the preacher more than they have been getting.

The election results in Maine, one can ascertain from the press, have caused the Democrats to rejoice, as the tillers of the soil, are alleged to rejoice, after a good rain. It appears that ever confirmed Democrat, in the land, has with a great show of wisdom announced, "goes Main, etc., etc." The exulting of Democrat over the scant Maine victory, received as much publicity, as when Mary Pickford, was "the sweetie of America," and sprained her Great Toe. The exulting reached its height in this country in Ashland. All the aspirants for the postmasterhip, dreamed they were found dead in the new postoffice.

The "transient vote" is becoming quite a problem in the Eastern primaries. They will probably be out here, by mid-summer, ready to god their join, "in the battle for good government," and county beans all next winter.

HOW REASSURING!

The Crooked Creek Club wish to announce to the fathers who bring their wives and children to the picnic on Sunday, honoring Father's and Children's Day, that they need not worry, for their families will be perfectly safe, as there will be an extra police force on duty that day.

The American Legion convention yesterday adopted a resolution opposing recognition of Soviet Russia. It will be interesting to see what the Communist party of Oregon, and the Young Communists of Astoria do, as their belittling rights are being strangled by the Capitalism.

One of the Older Girls has a new knit brown fall ensemble, and has lost interest in her ladylike cussing of the President.

President Hoover Fights Back

ALL the world loves a fighter. Whether we agree, or disagree, a man who has the courage of his convictions, and fights for what he believes to be right, regardless of the consequences, has our respect and admiration.

President Hoover occupies that position today. In opposing the immediate cash payment of the bonus, in the face of the American Legion convention in Portland, which favors it, the President of the United States exhibits a degree of moral courage, which has never been surpassed in this country's political history.

THIS courageous action, may well spell his political doom, and President Hoover knows it. To defy an organization of 4,000,000 war veterans—the strongest political unit in the country today,—on the eve of a presidential election, will be designated by every practical politician, as nothing short of political suicide.

Nevertheless President Hoover does it. And he does it, because he believes it is his duty to do it. As he well says:

"I was elected to protect and promote the interests of all the people. As long as I am president I shall continue to do so and to oppose with all the strength and influence at my command, any demand that runs counter to the common welfare."

In the Legion convention there are many men, with decorations on their uniforms, granted in recognition of their bravery and courage under fire. We don't give medals and decoration for bravery in civil life,—for courage under the fire of political opponents.

NEVERTHELESS, regardless of how the election comes out in November, regardless of whether President Hoover wins or loses; we believe the time will come when thousands of American men and women, IN THEIR MINDS AND HEARTS, will grant medals of gratitude and approval, to President Hoover, for placing what he believed to be their welfare, above his own political fortunes, at this critical time in the country's financial and economic history.

He may be beaten,—beaten badly. But he will at least have this satisfaction,—perhaps the greatest satisfaction any public man can have,—that he went down fighting,—with his colors nailed to the masthead,—fighting for those things in which he believed,—fighting for his country,—all the country,—whose welfare he took a solemn oath to protect.

Where Does F. R. Stand?

AND now it is Governor Roosevelt's turn. Just where does the democratic candidate stand? If elected will he favor the immediate cash payment of the bonus, or will he oppose it? The people are entitled to know. The members of the American Legion are entitled to know.

This is an important issue. Final decision concerning it, will have an important bearing upon our political and economic future.

But if Franklin Roosevelt has ever expressed an opinion concerning it, for or against, we have never heard what it was.

If he runs true to form, he will not express an opinion, he will try to straddle this issue, as he has so many others, play both ends against the middle, and force his opponent to carry the entire political burden.

But unless we are greatly mistaken the American people are in no mood to put a straddler,—"just another politician"—in the White House. Before November they will want to know, just where each and every candidate stands.

If Roosevelt refuses,—well stranger things have happened,—he may find that cowardice has a political price to pay, as well as courage.

What A Farce!

IT depends so much upon whose ox is gored. Our esteemed contemporary, the Oregon Journal, has always been dry—very dry. No doubt, at heart, it still is, but being an "INDEPENDENT" journal, it had to swallow the democratic platform bait, hook and sinker, including light wines and beer, as well as repeal.

A subscriber protested the other day, on the ground that Roosevelt was "too wet."

Which aroused the editorial staff to action, showing in nearly a column, that the REPUBLICAN PARTY WAS JUST AS WET AS THE DEMOCRATIC,—both being virtually for repeal, both being opposed to the saloon, etc., etc.

THE amusing feature to this is, the Journal argument USED TO CONVERT A DRY IS PRECISELY THE STOCK REPUBLICAN ARGUMENT USED TO CONVERT A WET.

Here in Medford there are many Republican wets, determined to vote for Roosevelt because they claim, the Republican plank on prohibition is a straddle. That is what the Mail Tribune believed at first, but after close study we find it ISN'T. When understood, it is to our mind, a reasonable and conservative solution of the problem, eliminating two serious dangers,—return of the saloon and immediate legalizing of light wines and beer.

In its effort to get a dry wanderer back in the democratic fold, this is the exact view of the Portland Journal. TO GET WET VOTES THE DEMOCRATS CLAIM THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM IS DRY; TO GET DRY VOTES THEY CLAIM IT IS JUST AS WET AS THE DEMOCRATIC. All of which adds—or should add,—to the gayety of the campaign.

When that which calls itself civilization imitates the murderer by murdering him, the process is never pleasant. But in Paris it is at least dramatic. Yesterday France killed the half crazy Russian Gorguloff, who killed President Doumer. The slanting blade of the guillotine chopped off the Russian's head just as the dawn broke a little after five yesterday morning.

The writer who saw and reported guillotinings in Paris for Charles A. Dana, long ago, can assure you that the spectacle is not pleasant. But France is efficient.

The prisoner appears hobbled, walks to his death, a priest beside him, in this case, a priest of the Orthodox Greek church, who kissed the murderer just before the blade fell. The head was off 40 seconds after the man appeared.

When the murderer is unpopular, as in the case of one Prado, who had killed several women, the excited crowd rushes forward to dip a handkerchief in the blood "for luck."

Gorguloff's last words were: "Russia! Russia! My fatherland." He had drunk two glasses of rum, supplied by the French government, but declined the cigarette, also politely supplied at public expense. He hoped his child would not be a communist and that it would be a boy. It is not yet born.

Gorguloff seemed to appreciate the salute with sabres which the "Garde Republicaine" honored him from the backs of their horses in accordance with custom. France is always polite to the dead. Hats are all removed at sight of a hearse.

As you read this Gorguloff, if he knows anything, knows many things that he did not suspect here on earth. He knows that what happens on the half-developed little grain of sand, called the earth, recently abandoned by him, makes little difference in the cosmic scheme.

From Los Angeles, Mr. John G. Bullock telegraphs to New York this excellent news: "The metropolitan water district of southern California has just closed with the reconstruction finance corporation to take 40,000,000 metropolitan water district bonds. This enables the city to start work on our $220,000,000 aqueduct to bring Colorado river water over desert through the mountain tunnels a distance of 300 miles, to the metropolitan area of southern California, including 12 other member cities. The work will employ an average of 10,000 men over the six-year period of construction. In addition, materials used will result in employment of labor throughout the nation."

That is good news in these times. It means work for 10,000, in addition these forty millions of government money will be paid back easily from earnings. Mr. Bullock, with other citizens of Los Angeles who have devoted time and energy to the aqueduct work, deserves highest praise.

A new kind of sharp shooting is developed, more important to this country's safety than anything else, not exciting sentimental peace talk. Lieut. E. W. O'Connor, army air corps, establishes a world's record for consecutive hits with bombs from a height of 3000 feet. He aimed eight bombs at a small circle on the ground; seven reached the mark, the eighth fell just outside the circle.

One flier, with one helper, in a bombing plane costing less than a hundred thousand dollars, shooting as well as that, could have destroyed seven battleships, costing $30,000,000 each, destroying also their crews.

Spain, now building up an "armada of the air," shows her intelligence. She will find that more useful than the old floating armada sent against England and Gibraltar.

The process of drawing conclusions is interesting. When shipwrecked men in ancient Greece found on the sand geometrical tracings showing that the sum of two right angles is equal to one triangle, they knew they had reached "civilization" and thanked Zeus. Later in the dark ages others shipwrecked saw a gibbet with human skeletons hanging in chains. They knew they had reached "civilization" and thanked God.

Now in far Japan the army says it is absolutely certain that China's General Ma Chan-Shan was killed.

Major General E. L. King of Atlanta flew 12,000 miles during the summer training season to inspect 13 army ports in the fourth corps area.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT DEAD TONSILS.

The reason for the chaotic state of present medical practice in reference to focal infection is faulty medical education. Too much highbrowism, too much mere book learning, too much wood pulp in medical education in this country. Our Class A medical schools labor to make all students speeialists, and our national, state or provincial organization (medical society) fosters this shoddy specialism and discourages old-fashioned general practice.

Not only do we doctors quarrel among ourselves over the application of the focal infection principle in practice (it is a well-established principle, and not a mere theory), but in many cases where the presumptive source of the trouble is in the teeth the unhappy victim has to decide for himself whether to follow the physician's advice or the dentist's. This, too, is a natural consequence of our absurd medical education. Today there is no sound reason why dentists should not receive their education in the regular medical school, and then special technical or special postgraduate training as such a specialty as their vocation.

Both physicians and these intemperate specialists who are doctors in everything but license, become a bit topheavy with all this ultra education they have to ingest in their school days, and it requires some good hard knocks to put a little horse sense into their heads after they get into practice. Some of them become impervious to horse sense, especially the pampered pets of dotting newly rich relatives.

Now what a precious lot of intellectual nitwits our physicians and dentists are in respect to the problem of dead or pulpless teeth. First the dentist pulls and haul at the dazed patient to persuade him to have the nerve killed or to avoid that procedure by all means. While they spit reflex vomit at each other over the question the patient, weary of paying for "treatments" and fed up with discomfort, drops into some unpretentious little dental office up in his own suburb and has the nerve removed (pulp destroyed) and the root canal filled. All goes well and the patient sits back and smiles contentedly for several weeks, months or years. But sooner or later he falls into the clutches of the highbrow dentist or doctor once more, innocently complains of an ache or pain somewhere out of the picture, and in two jerks he is having all his teeth X-rayed.

Right here, in order to finish within the time limit, let it be clearly understood that the question of whether to remove dead teeth (pulpless teeth, teeth from which the nerve has been destroyed or taken out) or leave them undisturbed is in every instance a question of opinion. My own opinion is that such teeth should remain in the jaw until definite evidence of root infection (not mere X-ray films) makes dental surgery necessary, just as to the teeth were not "dead" or pulpless.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Tonsil Removal. Worried over my daughter's tonsils, have heard that tonsils are likely to grow back in again if removed before the child is (so many) years old.—D. F.

Answer.—Seldom is every bit of tonsil removed, no matter what method is employed or who the surgeon is. In any case portions of tonsils left in the throat may subsequently hypertrophy. There is no good reason why normal tonsil tissue should be removed.

Vaccination. Would like to have my little girl vaccinated on the leg but have been told doctors will not do it on the leg for fear of some sort of injury.—Mrs. L. F.

Answer.—A quaint idea. The vaccination lesion requires more care than it is immaterial where it shall be. I am surprised at your ignorance of the treatment of poison ivy, poison oak, poison sumac, etc. I am very sensitive to these, and as soon as I feel the first irritation or discover the first appearance of small water blisters I bathe the skin in alcohol, keeping it wet for 20 minutes or a half hour. Then I wash with soap as hot as I can stand and any good toilet soap. I mean wash—mix up a good lather and scrub with a rag till it seems another stroke will take the hide off. Then dry, and avoid nostrums or powders—better expose the skin to the air.—W. M.

Answer.—Thank you. The early and thorough use of soap and water, preferably hot water, even crude laundry soap, is one of the best practical treatments or preventatives. Similar application of plain gasoline for prolonged sponging for 20 minutes or a half hour. Alcohol is probably a good solvent of the toxin or irritant, if it is available in the emergency. TEMPORARY LOANS TO LIVESTOCK MEN ASKED BY HOOVER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(AP)—President Hoover today sought from midwestern and west coast members of his banking and industrial committees temporary financial aid for livestock owners and shippers.

In a telegram to the central executive committee of the banking and industrial committees, the president explained that the reconstruction finance corporation was meeting with some difficulty in establishing its series of credit institutions for the purpose of serving livestock and feeder loans, and that temporary aid from the local banking institutions should be stimulated.

Everett Case, executive secretary of the central committee, dispatched copies of the president's telegram to chairmen of the banking and industrial committees in the Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Dallas and San Francisco districts.

He added that the reconstruction corporation's new institutions probably would be making loans within three weeks "and would then be prepared to take over sound loans from the banks."

President Hoover was urged today by political advisers to take more active personal part in the republican campaign, going beyond the three addressed, republican leaders have reported he would make.

One political leader said, after a conference at the White House he felt Mr. Hoover might enlarge his program to make five or six addresses. He said no final decision had been reached.

C. Bascom Slemm, former secretary to President Coolidge, said he had discussed political matters with the chief executive today but no definite decisions had been reached.

Skid Brings Death. EUGENE, Ore., Sept. 15.—(AP)—Mrs. Clarence B. Edwards, of Los Angeles, was killed in an automobile accident ten miles north of Eugene last night. Her husband received minor injuries. Police said the light coupe, driven by Mrs. Edwards, skidded in loose gravel on the shoulder of the road and ran off the highway.

Jenkins' Comment
That must have indicated uncertainty in people's minds. They did not know exactly what to think of it all. First they were scared by the news, then they had a little recovery of confidence in the stability of the country, no matter what happens in politics, and finally they were overcome again by their fears.

People are apt to be that way, you know.
If YOU want the opinion of this writer, who expects to vote for Hoover, here it is:
The Maine election indicates rather clearly that if the national election were held now Roosevelt would be elected. There may be a change before November, but at the present moment Roosevelt is the favorite.

MAINE GOVERNOR HERE SHORT TIME; NOT DOWNHEARTED

Roosevelt's Speeches Cost Him Votes, He Declares at Local Airport — Praises Portland Legion Meet

"The more speeches Roosevelt makes, the less votes he'll get this fall," was the opinion expressed by Governor William Tudor Gardner of Maine, who last night spent a few minutes at the Medford Municipal airport en route south from the American Legion convention in Portland.

This remark followed the republican Governor's assertion there was little doubt that Hoover would carry the state of Maine in November. Regardless of the voting Monday, which gave the lead to the democrats, and put Louis J. Brann, democratic candidate in the position to take over the governor's chair January 1, 1933, Governor Gardner pointed out that a bitter primary contest was the cause.

"No particular state issues were involved in the election for governor," he said, "although the democratic congressional candidates were all wet, and the republicans, dry."

Governor Gardner will close his second two-year term as head of the state, in January. He was not a candidate for re-election this year, the republicans being represented by Bureleigh Martin.

The head of the New England state, who plans to resign after his term of office, is looking forward to some interesting events in his home state's politics, as a telegram from his office in Portland, Maine, assured him that the legislature would be republican.

"It was a complete surprise to me, and I believe generally unexpected throughout the state that the democrats should win," the governor remarked as he sat in the airport building with fellow-passengers drinking coffee. "Telegrams showed that the heaviest vote since 1924 was cast."

Economic conditions there are improving he said, with a number of textile mills and factories opening up that have been closed down for some time.

The remainder of the Gardner term will be devoted to the national presidential campaign, he said last evening. Neither Roosevelt nor Hoover will conduct speaking tours in Maine, according to their present plans.

The governor is accompanied on the trip by his aide, A. L. King, commander of the naval reserve in Maine, with headquarters in Portland, who stepped from the plane in a uniform showered with gold braid.

Both men were enthusiastic over the Portland convention, and expressed regret that it was necessary for them to leave so soon. Governor Gardner marched in Tuesday's parade with the 25 Legionnaires from his home state.

Their itinerary sends them to Oakland, Los Angeles, Chicago to Cheyenne, Wyo., then into Chicago, and from there west by train to Pleasanton, where they will be met by Commander King said they would be in the state capital September 22.

When Mr. Gardner attended the governor's conference in Salt Lake City, Utah two years ago, he was accompanied by Commander King, who slipped away for a fishing trip to the Rogue river.

The official waved his flat cap but as he left, midst regrets that he could not arrange to spend a longer time in Medford as "the city looked beautiful from the air."

Piles Go Quick
Itching, bleeding or protruding piles go quickly and don't come back if you really remove the cause. Bad blood circulation in the lower bowel and hemorrhoidal veins cause piles by making the tissues weak, flabby, almost dead. Salves and suppositories fail because only an internal medicine that stimulates the circulation and drives out the impure blood can actually correct the cause of piles. Dr. J. S. Leonard discovered a real internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it for 1,000 patients with success in over 900 cases, he named it HEM-ROID. Jarvin & Woods and druggists everywhere sell HEM-ROID Tablets with guarantee they will end your Pile misery or money back.
