PEAR SHIPMENTS OVER NORTHWEST AT HIGHEST MARK

CORVALLS. Ore., Sept. 22.—(R)— Heavily increased produce movement in the northwest is reported in this week's fruit and vegetable review is-sued by the O. S. C. extension service and the government bureau of agri-cultural economics. Unfortunately cultural economics. Unfortunately, the review says, prices are still so low that growers are netting little or nothing above the cost of production. Volume of carlot movement last week reached 5036, compared with an average of about 1900 for the preceding four weeks. Most of the increase was in Washington apples, Idaho prunes, Idaho and Yakima potatosa, and Oregon and Washington pears.

rounding vicinities with a complete health service.

Physicians in charge of this new clinic are Dr. Charles A. Shadel, formerly of Seattle, Wash, and Dr. E. J. Ketchum, who practiced in San Prancisco, Cal., previous to locating in this city. The six special departments which have been installed are:

Electro-therapy, dietetics, genitourinary, colon-therapy, hydro-therapy and radiations.

Dr. Shadel was accompanied to Mcafford by his young daughter, who is attending the Lincoin school, and Mrs. Shadel will arrive in the near future. He formerly operated a naturopathic clinic in Seattle and it has provided ideal dried prune harwas during a vacation trip to south-vesting conditions.

PLANS ATHLETICS

(By Charles P. Champlin, Jr.)
To enliven the recreational activities of students at the Southern Oregon Normal school, a new athletic program is being introduced by How-program is being introduced by How-ard A. Hobson, new head coach, This new program will be based on all the latest ideas and theories in college athletic organization, and will be carried out extensively by Mr. Hobson. The whole plan is divided into three minor parts which are as follows: Intercollegiate athletics, in-tramural athletics, and theory and practice in physical education.

tramural athletics, and theory and practice in physical education.

In the first part, intercollegiste athletic, the same high standards are to be maintained, and even better if possible. While the school has always scheduled many fine games, this year's lineup looms as about the finest that can be credited to any college. Just a few of the pigskin tilts that will be played are with such oughts as: The California Aggies, Chico State college, Pacific university, the Eastern Oregon Normal, and many others as well.

The basketball schedule, which is not yet completed, will be made up of games with some of the most powerful quintets on the Pacific of games with some of the most powerful quintets on the Pacific coast. In connection with the intercollegiate athletics a very extensive publicity plan is to be used. It is thought that through these cleas the school will be put on the map in bold-faced letters at least as far as athletics are concerned. athletics are concerned.

In intramural atheltics, the second in intramural sthelitics, the second part of the program, will be pushed ahead as much as possible so that each student will have some opportunity of participating in athletics that he wants to. In the past only those boys who makes the various squads could have the many advantages derived from athletics. But squads could have the many advan-tages derived from athletics. But under this new idea every boy may be built up physically which, of course, is a vital factor in bettering the human race. Also new material will be discovered for the intercol-legiate teams which would probably otherwise be left untouched. The third and last part will con-sist of thery and practice courses

The third and last part will consist of theary and practice courses in physical education. This is offered in order that students who expect to become teachers will know how to organize classes and lead the studenss in athletics. It is particularly heipful to those students who want to take up coaching. Through this course it is hoped to show the relationship between athletics and physical education. In Oregon this field is practically virgin and it is thought that the course offered at this school will be one of the most complete in the state.
