Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

A GREAT deal has been said and written about the importance of spending your money in your home town, and about everything that has been said and written is true. The prosperity of every town in this country, big or little, depends upon the amount of money available for circulation from hand to hand for the everyday wants and needs of life — the necessities, the comforts, the luxuries; the things that people want and because they want spend their money for.

So, you see, the more of the community's money that is kept at home the more money there will be to circulate. It goes farther than that. The more of the community's money that is kept at home, the more of it there will be to go into the banks and so serve as a reservoir of credit for the financing of business and industry, which provide jobs. Without jobs, there can't be wages, and without wages there can't be as much money to spend as there should be.

SUPPOSE somebody wants to start a new sawmill, or a box factory, or a cannery. Just how does he go about it? Well, sometimes he has money enough of his own, but that is very seldom indeed. Much more often he has to BORROW money with which to build his factory or his cannery; or at least he has to borrow money with which to finance his operations after he starts up. So we are led up naturally to this question: Where does the money come from that he borrows?

WHY, it comes out of the community, of course, and it is made up of the accumulated savings of the people. It is perfectly obvious to anybody that the more money that has been kept in the community, instead of being sent away, the more there will be to lend to people who want to start industries that will provide jobs and pay wages.

MONEY that is kept in the community, instead of being sent away, finds its way into the banks. The banks turn around and lend it to sound people who can make good use of it and are able to pay it back when it becomes due. But it is an odd fact, proved by hundreds of years experience, that no banks can lend more money than they have on deposit. As a matter of fact, about ten dollars in bank credit, in normal times, are based upon each dollar in bank deposits.

This is possible because not all the depositors want their money at the same time. The Phenicians were among the earliest people to discover this important fact, and as soon as it was discovered the institution of banking was born.

NOW let's get back to our original subject—which is keeping as much of the community's money at home as is possible. Money that is sent away from home doesn't get into the home banks, and when it doesn't get into the home banks it doesn't provide a basis of credit with which to finance industries and so provide jobs and payrolls. That is why it is so important to keep as much of the community's money at home as can possibly be done.

HERE is another important thought which you shouldn't overlook: It is just as necessary, just as smart to keep at home the money that is spent for products of the farm as to keep at home the money that is spent for the things that come out of the stores.

If we send away for our farm products—our butter and eggs, our small fruits, our vegetables—we are sending our money out of the community just the same as when we send away for clothes and furniture and implements and other things. If it is good business for the country to trade at home in the nearby towns, it is equally good business for the towns to trade at home in the nearby country.

SO here is the moral: Let's buy our fruits and vegetables, our butter and eggs, here at home.

LUMBER INDUSTRY OF PACIFIC COAST SHOWING UPTREND

Depletion of Stocks in Lumber Yards in Nation—Tariff and Anticipated Demand Listed As Reasons

By E. Q. Anderson
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
SEATTLE, Sept. 26.—(AP)—The lumber business in the Pacific northwest is "looking up," but those who keep their hands on the pulse of the industry are not quite ready to say that the present pace will be maintained. Several things were enumerated today by Col. W. B. Greeley, secretary-manager of the West Coast Lumbermen's association as contributing to the improvement of the past six weeks.

These were stock depletions in lumber yards through the nation; the tariff of 44 a thousand feet on imported lumber and anticipation on the part of dealers for an increased demand for small home building purposes.

Fears Production Renewal
However, Colonel Greeley fears that a better lumber market will call back scores of idle mills into operation with a consequent drop in lumber prices and a return to the "buyers market" which has temporarily given way to a "sellers' market."

LITTLE BT. CREEK ROUTE SURVEYED FOR NEXT SPRING

A survey of the Little Butte Creek second highway was started this morning by the county engineer's office, through an agreement recently reached with the state highway commission. By this agreement the county does the surveying, with state highway funds, and it is further provided that the state second highway appropriation for this county for the next two years be applied to the Little Butte Creek road. The survey will be from the old city water intake to the Milo Conley place, a distance of six miles.

According to County Engineer Paul Rysing, the survey will be completed before snow flies, so construction can be started next spring, and it will be a wider and better road than under the old plan.

An early decision by the state highway commission on rerouting the Siskiyou road, and three other southern Oregon projects, is expected. The resulting involves expenditures of $455,000 of federal money, appropriated as unemployment relief funds. Residents of the Ashland district signed a petition of protest against the work, under the misapprehension that the money came from local taxes, and sale of state bonds. ABUJON, Paraguay, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Paraguay government today announced its acceptance of a proposal for cessation of hostilities in the disputed Gran Chaco region under conditions which will be supervised by the American Neutrals commission.

The conditions under which fighting between Bolivian and Paraguayan forces would cease, were approved in a reply sent to the commission in Washington. They were: Immediate demilitarization of the Chaco within two or three weeks. Acceptance by both Bolivia and Paraguay of a reduction of military effectives to the minimum required for security.

The reply said Paraguay was leaving settlement of the dispute in the hands of international justice. Almost simultaneously with this announcement came a bulletin from the ministry of war that a Paraguayan force in the Chaco had repelled a Bolivian drive from Arce. Another force, the bulletin said, had prevented the escape of the bested Bolivian garrison at Fort Fourteenth of December.

PAY INCREASE HELD NEED IN PROSPERITY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Wage increases were urged today by the American Federation of Labor to "build up buying power and keep business rising."

In its monthly survey of business, the federation said: "Confidence is spreading, but we cannot expect convalescence to develop into a cure until consumer buying picks up. . . . Increasing wage cuts have recently speeding the decline in workers' income. . . . The time has come to reverse this trend."

Victor Borzovoy, 10, who was seriously injured Saturday afternoon, when struck by an auto driven by Mrs. T. L. ## FEAR JAPANESE AVIATORS LOST ON U. S. FLIGHT

Week-End Storm Over North Pacific Believed End of Good Will Filers — Gas Supply Long Exhausted

TOKYO, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Fear that the three Japanese fliers who set out Saturday morning on a good will flight to the United States had been lost in a week-end storm over the North Pacific grew today as no word was received from the plane's radio and the time limit of its gasoline supply was long over-run.

The plane left Samushiro Saturday at 3:35 o'clock and was last heard from at 10:10 the same day when it reported it was 750 miles northeast of Tokyo.

Japanese government agencies participating in the search were concentrating their efforts on the middle Kurile Islands, doubting that the plane had travelled far after its radio was silenced.

The newspaper Hochi Shimbun, which sponsored the flight, had planned to ask the American embassy in Washington to order a search along the Aleutian Islands, but it withdrew the request when Japanese officials expressed the opinion it was not likely the fliers had reached American waters.

SCHOOL MERGER ADVOCATE HEARD BY KIWANIS CLUB

Basing his arguments upon two main issues—a saving in taxation and a better educational system to be derived—Roger Ball of Corvallis spoke in favor of passage of the Zorn-McPherson bill for merging of Oregon's schools of higher learning, at the luncheon of the Kiwanis club at the Hotel Medford today. Opening his address with the admission that he was probably speaking to an organized opposition to the bill, Ball proceeded in a logical and inspiring manner his attempt to tear down that opposition.

Through a preceding announcement of President Olen Arnesen, all opposition to the question of interrupting the speaker were eliminated. The other side of the question, with which most of southern Oregon is believed to be in agreement, will be presented at the next meeting of the club, Program Chairman Everett Faber announced.

"There are but two questions to be considered," Ball declared. "They are: Will passage of the Zorn-McPherson bill save money to the taxpayer, and will it be beneficial or harmful to the educational system of Oregon?"

Through elimination of instructors in the basic lower division courses, elimination of an executive secretary at Salem and reductions in administration costs, Ball then showed that $475,000 a year could be saved by passage of the bill. Further, to appropriations asked by the University of Oregon for building, amounting to between two and six million dollars, which would be eliminated by consolidation, he added the total well into the millions.

The bill, he stated, contrary to claims of the opposition, does not contemplate the expenditure of one cent in building, and if any is done it will be in spite of, and not because of the bill.

Approximately 10,000 voted in the primary election. Being a presidential year the November poll is expected to show a slight increase.

The registration books close October 8, a month before the election.

Earthquake experts for a long time have held that the earth's core has the same density as steel, but that it still behaved as a liquid so that it did not transmit the "S" waves. Geophysicists, studying the earth's interior, have found evidence the core is two and one-half times as rigid as steel. Therefore the core might be both rigid and liquid at the same time.
