Ye Smudge Pot
By Arthur Perry

One of the major crimes of the week, is the rulling effective at the Higher Institutions of Learning, forbidding college students to have and operate automobiles. The students and the no walking, have adopted the horse and buggy as a means of getting places, and it did not take them no time at all to have a runaway. A couple of Lambda Chi girls were dumped out on the sidewalk, when during a race with the Sigma Kappa vehicle, they hit a curb, instead of a phone pole. The new order makes it tough on one of man's best friends—the horse, who will probably get cured as often as the auto was washed.

HEPPNER, Sept. 26—(AP)—An unidentified hunter Saturday mistook a pure white horse for a deer and shot the horse out from under Jay Hiatt.—(Press Dispatch). Find the white mule.

The Depression is now at its toughest, judging by the new fall dresses, coats, hats, shoes, socks, and other odds-ends of fashion worn by the Old Girls. The new ensembles will enable them to do bigger and better worrying over the Depression.

Dock Keene is running for mayor. What do the people think of a candidate who smokes a corn-cob pipe in the country, and when in the city flaunts a red flower in his button-hole? He seems to be Dr. Keene and Mr. Hyde, and will churn the milk ordinance.

There will be another prizefight tonight. The attendance will prove anew, that taxes are too high. The bridge games have all stopped.

Candidates are feeling the public pulse, and are getting exceedingly careful about what stairs they fall down, other than their own. As yet no recall petition has dropped out of an office-seeker's pistol pocket. All love the farmer, while looking out for their own digestive apparatus.

No figures are available on cigars, but the farmers are not inhaling as much bunk as in April and May.

Several have colds, and several are talking about colds they expect to enjoy all next winter.

The "survival of the fittest," was under discussion at the Bill Gore Corner Forum Friday pm., and the main orator confessed he never made it.

Glen Shimoda will soon be 8 years old, and so far has escaped autos and air-guns.

Who can remember when the only war around here was waged between jitneys to Jville?

There is a persistent rumor that some eastern capitalist coming here, for the next session of the legislature to chase into California.

The women-folks have started crocheting things for Christmas.

A Japanese scientist reports that his studies show that the earth is quite solid—in fact, more so than generally suspected, with the general stability and hardness of a billiard ball. Anybody who has slapped himself against the earth, in the past three months, will confirm the findings of the Japanese scientist.

The Republican campaign managers are now charged by the Oregonian, with seeking a poem "that will lift the people out of the Depression." This is a dandy idea. If they don't hold a poem that will lift the people back into a depression.

Dear Mrs. Ellabury: Would it be all right for a high school boy, at a school party to offer to escort a teacher home when he knew she would have to walk home alone?—(Roseburg News-Review.) Sure, Virgil, as a social courtesy, and it might not do your grades next month any harm.

Baseball vs. Politics

WELCOME to the world series. It represents a lucid interval in a crazy world. For there is this important difference between baseball and politics. In baseball they have UMPIRES! They have no umpires in politics. Whether a man is in or out depends, not upon the FACTS, but upon the FANS. If more fans want him in than out, he is in,—he may not deserve to be in, he may have nothing on the ball, after he gets there, but that makes no difference. "Vox populi, Vox Dei!"

The absurdity and futility of politics, as one of our great national sports, can readily be seen, by applying the rules of politics to today's opening game, to-wit:

KIKI Cuyler slides for third and misses by a foot. But Kiki is a colorful lad, with a winning way, and an aged mother to support. The fans cheer his gallant effort, and as Kiki rises, brushes the dust from his face and takes a bow, they cheer him again.

If politics had an umpire, Kiki would be called out, and forced to the bench. But there are no umpires in politics. So, Kiki of course is safe.

THE Yanks come to bat in the last half of the ninth. The score is tied 5-5. Babe Ruth steps to the plate, takes a lusty swing, and the ball soars over the right field fence, thus winning the game.

But Babe Ruth is unpopular, as an "In" he has been a hero too long. The fans are tired of him and want to see the Cubs win. So this home run smash is jeered and booed, seat cushions and pop bottles narrowly miss the Bambino's head.

Ruth of course is called out. For there are no umpires in politics.

THERE ARE umpires in baseball. If Cuyler misses third by a foot, the fans may cheer and yell their heads off, it makes no difference—Kiki is out.

If Babe Ruth knocks a home run, the fans may curse and jeer, that makes no difference. Ruth wins the ball game.

That is why baseball is one of the best sports in the country, and politics, by all odds, the worst. It is also why, it is such a relief to turn for a few days from a cock-eyed topsy turvy mess like politics to a straight shooting, fair and square game, like baseball.

So on with the game, let joy be unconfined. Ring down the curtain on politics for the week end.

"PLAY BALL!"

Good Work, Oregonian!

UNDER the able direction of Paul Kelty, the Portland Oregonian is steadily increasing in power and influence throughout the state.

There was a time when the Oregonian was chiefly interested in the Oregonian. To problems outside of Portland, it gave little thought.

But thanks to Editor Kelty's broad-minded and incisive leadership, this self satisfied and provincial policy has been completely abandoned.

The Oregonian is now, what its friends so long prayed it would be, a journal of outspoken opinion, and courageous leadership, not only for Portland, but FOR THE ENTIRE STATE.

AS evidence of this welcome change, the Oregonian has come out strongly against commercial fishing, and for the development of Rogue river as primarily a game-fish and recreational asset, to Southern Oregon and the state.

Nothing the Oregonian has done in a long time, has so pleased its friends in Southern Oregon, and made for it so many new ones.

With this powerful assistance, from what has in the past, been the chief stronghold of opposition, the referendum against Rogue river closing, should be defeated at the fall election, by a large majority.

Characteristic of Mr. Kelty's policy, there is nothing half-hearted about the Oregonian's support. The paper hits straight from the shoulder and clinches its argument as follows:

The voters should disapprove with convincing finality the referendum, appearing on the November ballot, which would keep the celebrated Rogue river open to commercial fishing.

The Rogue is, you may be certain, no minor asset to the state. It is as renowned, though for a different reason, as Crater Lake or the Columbia river highway. With the practice of conservation, and the stopping of commercial fishing, it will constitute a perpetual source of revenue to the game fund and to business and agricultural interests. But a fisherman soon ceases to be famous, and pays no taxes nor any account. The present danger is that the Rogue may be plundered of its heritage, and the issue is one that has been continually before the voters of Oregon, in this or that guise, for more than several years. It ought to be settled this time, ONCE AND FOR ALL, by approval of the law which would close it to net fishing.

Unprincipled Treachery

THE Mail Tribune has never been a partisan newspaper. It has always placed principle above party, and always will. In the last election it supported both Democrats and Republicans, solely on the basis of superior fitness for the jobs to which they aspired, regardless of partisan considerations. It will do the same in the coming election.

So we do not question the right of Senator Norris of Nebraska, to desert his party and party leader, and go over to the enemy.

But we do question his right,—or the RIGHT OF ANY MAN,—to desert the Republican party, conspire for its defeat, give aid and counsel to the enemy and THEN CLAIM, IN PUBLIC PRINT, THAT HE IS A BETTER REPUBLICAN, THAN THE STANDARD BEARER OF THAT PARTY.

What About Roosevelt? Attempted Murder. Hurricanes, Earthquake, Birthplaces, Rockefeller, Homer

Copyright King Features Synd., Inc

Each day ten million Americans ask ten million others "What do you think of Governor Roosevelt?" They will be interested in the opinion of one voter, W. R. Hearst, who writes from Los Angeles.

"Mr. Roosevelt is going to be elected surely, and during the first four years of his administration we are going to get back such good times that he will probably be re-elected.

"Roosevelt is not a radical. He has not done anything radical in the four years he has been governor of New York, and that is the length of his presidential term.

"Roosevelt is simply honest, and of course that frightens the high financiers more than radicalism."

That last paragraph contains political wisdom. It is easy to deal with a man, conservative or radical, who is not honest. He "listens to reason."

The difficulty is with the honest man that will not be bought or coerced.

Judge Webster B. Thayer, sentenced Sacco and Vanzetti to death five years ago, after they had been convicted of murder in the first degree.

Yesterday Judge Thayer's house was wrecked by a dynamite explosion, his wife and a maid seriously injured. Judge Thayer refused to accuse or suspect "any individual or any organization," saying: "I should hate to think that because a man does his duty before mankind and God his penalty is this."

There is always a possibility of mistakes and that is one of the things that makes capital punishment so vile.

But a cowardly attempt at secret murder, raking the lives of innocent women, could not benefit the two dead men or honor their memory.

Thousands are homeless in Porto Rico, many dead, following one of the hurricanes, born so often in those waters. The victims are natives living in houses poorly constructed, unable to resist the power of the wind.

Nature shows no favoritism, and while the Porto Rico hurricane was raging, an earthquake three thousand miles away in Greece killed more than one hundred and hurt many others.

The birthplace of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., a 54-acre farm in Tigra county, New York, has been sold for unpaid taxes, says the Associated Press. The amount involved was only $47.25. Mr. Rockefeller's modesty apparently makes him indifferent in this matter. The owner who let the farm go for taxes should get it back.

Writers of history far enough away from John D. Rockefeller to get a clear view of his work, will tell the world what Rockefeller means. On the remains of the old house where he was born or on its site, there will be a plaque reading "here was born John D. Rockefeller, in the year 1839. Starting with nothing, his intelligence and industry enabled him to accumulate hundreds of millions, which he and his son spent promoting education, fighting disease, endowing scientific research, restoring and preserving beautiful ancient monuments. He proved that unlimited competition is wasteful, and thus rendered a service even greater to mankind than in the giving of so many millions."

Seven wealthy towns contend for Homer dead, through which the living Homer begged his bread. Homer's birthplace, according to the Associated Press, is finally located in Smyrna, interesting city of Asia Minor. Greeks had it in the ancient days, the allies gave it back to Greece after the war. Kemal Pasha, powerful Turk, said to Greece, "let's see you keep it," took it away and has it now. If it is proved that Homer was born there, it should help the tourist business.

Some learned gentlemen say there wasn't any individual Homer, but that several gentlemen wrote "Homer's" poems.

The Smyrna idea is not new. In ancient days proud Smyrna citizens put Homer's face on their coins, and showed you the cave in which he composed his poems near the source of the River Meles.

In Italy, according to Mr. Knickerbocker, who has been talking with Mussolini and learning a lot, workers are not allowed to strike and wages

Personal Health Service

By William Brady, M. D.
Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. BANANAS FOR BABIES.

A mother writes: I am curious to know whether others have noticed the efficacy that I have observed from banana feeding for infants. Not only do the babies thrive, but a certain type of eczema disappears as if by magic when bananas are introduced into the diet. All three of my babies had weeping eczema. With the first I had a dreadful time. The trouble did not seem to respond to any treatment prescribed by competent physicians. Not until the baby was 14 months old did I learn from your column of the value of ripe banana in infant feeding. Then in a very short time the eczema cleared up. With the second child the eczema appeared at the age of two months. I followed your instructions in feeding banana, and had the same successful results. Eczema appeared on my third baby at the age of three or four weeks. To the horror of my relatives who thought I was almost insane I administered banana. Again it worked. All the children now have beautiful skins frequently commented upon by strangers. Of course, in the case of the last baby I gave only minute quantities of well ripened banana pulp and at intervals of several days. But it always agreed with her perfectly.

In the Brady Baby Book, copy of which will be mailed on request if you inclose a dime and a stamped envelope bearing your address, I advise:

At the age of four months begin feeding the baby banana... Be sure the banana is quite ripe... At first give only a spoonful or less a day...

Whether banana feeding will cure infantile eczema I don't know. Perhaps other mothers of young infants so afflicted will try it out and tell us whether it is as efficacious as the correspondent believes.

A trying state of undernutrition in infants and young children, variously called chronic intestinal indigestion, celiac disease, marasmus, malnutrition, often responds remarkably well already low, are cut thirty per cent. BUT there are few out of work, and there are compensations.

For instance, the workers arranging a festival, have good wines for ten cents a full quart, the best wine for fifteen cents. Workers of Rome can see Greta Garbo, three cents admission for adults, two cents for children. You can't do that here and you can't get good wine for ten cents a full quart.

What you get for your money is as important as how much money you get.

War will come back, worse than ever, unless Europe's common sense finds some better plan than wholesale murder for settling disputes.

Von Fupen says "preparing the youth of Germany for military duty is a primary moral duty of the state." German youth will be prepared, French youth will be prepared, and the German-French fight will come again in due time as it came in Louis the Fourteenth's time when the French took German speaking Alsace-Lorraine from Germany, in 1870 when Germany took back Alsace-Lorraine from France, in 1914 when France took Alsace-Lorraine from Germany.

This column apologizes to the ghost of Schiller, second greatest German poet, for attributing to Goethe Schiller's line "against stupidity the gods themselves fight in vain" to Goethe.

Goethe knew it. He was one of the earthy gods, and fought in vain against much stupidity. But it was Schiller that SAID IT, in his Die Jungfrau von Orleans.

J. Kahn, of Brooklyn, wishes this correction made.

As "Ithers" See Us!

As flagrant an example of the abuse of the recall system as has come to public attention is the current secret attack against Circuit Judge H. D. Norton in southern Oregon. Sponsorship and financing of the attempt are being kept dark. Among agitators of the petitions are persons who have been disappointed litigants in Judge Norton's court. One of them, asked by the press who were the recall's sponsors, said: "The signers of the recall are exercising a legal right, and, strictly speaking, it's none of your business."

The whole circumstances of the recall movement against Judge Norton indicate that it is a spite movement by a few disgruntled persons. Yet people sign the petitions. A thousand names have been obtained already, according to a news dispatch. A Medford newspaper—the Daily News—that is helping to promote the recall, seeks to make capital of the fact that eight affidavits of justices were filed against the judge. It declares: "The affidavits are described as a wholesale lack of confidence." And yet it is immediately shown that six of the eight affidavits were filed on behalf of the complaining newspaper itself as a litigant, and a sev-

C. C. MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN STARTS TOMORROW MORN

With all committee selections made and prospects listed, the membership committee of the Medford chamber of commerce is ready for the start of its campaign for new members at nine o'clock tomorrow morning, according to J. C. Thompson, committee chairman in charge of the campaign. Preliminary work of selecting committees and sending information as to the chamber's activities was completed at a meeting of the committee yesterday afternoon.

This is the first time since 1930 that the chamber has conducted an organized campaign for membership, and it has been found necessary at this time, in order to carry out the contemplated program of work for the remainder of the current fiscal year. Present members of the organization numbering at the present time 325 business and professional men and women of the city, will be re-enrolled, since the memberships expired at a meeting of the chamber on a continuing basis, and only new members will be sought.

The chamber's work during the present fiscal year, six months of which have already passed, has been comprehensive, and has embraced a great number and variety of projects, was the statement made by the membership committee in announcing the campaign. One of the most active committees of the chamber being the roads and highways group, who initiated and aided in part due to the (A. B. C. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Please give the name, publisher and price of some good book on high blood pressure, telling about the diet, etc.—F. M.

Answer—I cannot recommend any of the books I have seen. High blood pressure is not a disease, but merely one sign or effect noted by the physician in his examination, in various ailments. For that reason I consider it unwise for the layman to attempt to interpret it, and I consider it misleading and unwarrantable for an alleged physician to offer the laity a book about it. I am glad to get you some general advice in a monograph if you ask for it, tell me your physician says you have high blood pressure and inclose a stamped envelope bearing your address. Do not expect any quackery about diet for high blood pressure, however.

The chamber's publicity has accomplished a great deal in the way of securing the attention of the Oregon public, with the publication of an edition of 15,000 recreational folders leading the list of its publicity work. This group also sponsored and prepared copy for the full-page advertisement which appeared in the southern Oregonian at the National Legion convention, and conducted a Jackson county exhibit and open house during the convention. Compilation of news stories for out-of-town newspapers and radio continuity advertising southern Oregon were also done under the jurisdiction of this committee.

The chamber's publicity has also been prepared, and many thousands of pieces of literature on southern Oregon have been distributed.

In direct contact meetings and the chamber's publicity work in direct contact with the traveling public and the entertainment of visitors from Victoria, B. C., are listed under the accomplishments of the tourist contact committee, and the chamber's convention committee has sponsored the Chamber of Commerce at least seven conventions for Medford during the next year.

Organization of the logging operators in southern Oregon was conducted under the chamber's leadership, and this effort was successful in preventing the enactment of legislation in effect, imposed upon the logging industry of the county, unbearable burdens. The chamber's fish and game committee has been active in its promotion of the Rogue River Closing Bill, and conducted a survey of the conditions which would be in effect, imposed upon the logging industry of the county, unbearable burdens. The chamber's fish and game committee has been active in its promotion of the Rogue River Closing Bill, and conducted a survey of the conditions which would be in effect, imposed upon the logging industry of the county, unbearable burdens.

The retail trade division of the chamber is listed as having conducted spring and fall openings, and a spring bargain day this year, in addition to the numerous other legislative by the city council, and also having controlled and regulated the promiscuous solicitation of merchants for spurious advertising appropriations, and other "rackets" of various kinds.

The chamber's tax committee endorsed and sponsored the proposed tax control bill, which creates an effective method of local tax reduction and is now preparing to undertake further tax-reduction work as soon as possible.

The conduct of routine work, involving a multitude of problems and details, the personal response to over 1100 direct letters of inquiry, seeking information on every possible phase of life and industry in Jackson county, and numerous other accomplishments, are listed in the bulletin sent to business and professional men of Medford today.

The committee in charge of the campaign, composed of J. C. Thompson, A. E. Orr, Fred Heath, F. E. Wahl, and Clayton Isaac, expect to have all contact work completed by Saturday morning of this week. Personnel of the committee selected to do the actual campaigning is as follows: H. A. Thieroff, J. C. Carl, H. B. Deuel, E. E. Thornby, W. H. Fubler, Klith Fennel, R. B. Hammond, Cole Holmes, W. M. Clemenson, R. A. H. B. Bishop, C. W. Johnson, C. M. Kild, J. B. Smith, E. E. Wilson, S. S. Smith, G. A. Barr, Col. W. H. Paine, O. O. Alexander, W. S. Bolger, Frank Porter, W. W. Allen, R. R. State High School Tuition Law Stands

SALEM, Sept. 28—(AP)—The operation of the state high school tuition law will not be affected by the opinion of the Oregon supreme court today, holding one phase of the law unconstitutional. The opinion handed down declared the tax levied against outside districts under the tuition law can be collected with the exception of the pro-rated charges for interest on school property and investment.

BETTER BROADCAST SERVICE ASSURED

Today's world's series opener at New York was broadcast to southern Oregon fans over KMED by remote control from the editorial rooms of The Mail Tribune. This was the first sport broadcast from The Mail Tribune since the recent addition of Tribune radio service by KMED, and today's returns were in the form of a test broadcast. KMED's technicians are perfecting The Mail Tribune hook-up so that sport followers will be assured improved service for the second game of the series Thursday at approximately 10:30 a. m.

Fans who listened to the baseball returns in front of The Mail Tribune will also be assured a vastly improved broadcast tomorrow as The Mail Tribune public address system will re-broadcast the KMED-Mail Tribune account of the second game. Today's returns will be picked up by radio sets.

The Mail Tribune cordially invites fans to enjoy the KMED broadcast which is secured direct from the field of play at Yankee stadium in New York by dependable Associated Press facilities.

YOUNG HOOVERITES TO HOLD SESSION

The Young Republicans of Medford, who were recently organized to carry out the principles of Republicanism in Jackson county, and to aid the re-election of President Hoover, will meet tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in the Jackson county court house.

The constitution, drawn up by the committee since the last meeting, will be discussed and other important matters presented.
