Football Picture On Friday Program Craterian Theatre

In "70,000 Witnesses," coming to the Craterian theater Friday and Saturday, with Phillips Holmes, Dorothy Jordan, Charles Ruggles and Mack Brown in the featured roles, Paramount believes that it has the most unusual football picture ever filmed. A murder that no one can explain baffles medical authorities as well as police. It occurs on the football field. State's star halfback, about to score a touchdown, is mysteriously slain on the last chalkline while 70,000 people in the stands look on. That's the plot basis—and the working out of the mystery's solution, as well as the football sequence—makes for unusual film fare.

Mickey Mouse To Entertain Kiddies

Saturday will be a banner day at the Holly theater for young and old. Kiddies will be particularly interested in the announcement of Mickey Mouse's birthday party to be held at the Holly theater on Saturday afternoon. Mickey Mouse has probably done more than any other "movie star" for after all he is a star to make movie audiences throughout the world happy. Mickey's birthday party at the Holly will have all sorts of features for the children. Most important of all, of course, is the fact that Mickey Mouse will be on the screen with his latest comedy, "Mickey Cuts Up."

Then, to further amuse the kiddies, there will be the "Air Mail Mystery," a thrilling episode of an air mail pilot. This will be presented the revival showing of Joe E. Brown in "Maybe It's Love," one of Joe's biggest shows and in which appears one of the most thrilling and spectacular football games ever filmed. This is to be followed by "Strange as It Seems," one of the most hilarious and thrilling mystery pictures on the screen today. It features Zasu Pitts and Lucien Littlefield.

Vaudeville Acts Please At Holly

Showing for the last time at the Holly theater tonight is the big all-star vaudeville bill and screen program. This program drew a tremendous crowd at the Holly last night and indications are that tonight's crowd will pack the theater. The McKee troupe, a sensational acrobatic act of seven people, are in the northwest just after their season with Ringling's circus. The Three Freshmen came to Medford direct from the Million Dollar theater in Los Angeles, and Willard Hall, master of ceremonies, is direct from Los Angeles also, where he has been handling shows at the Warner Down-Town theater. Rue Enne gets laughs galore with his comical as well as sensational tricks. La France and Garnett with their black-face act stopped the shows yesterday as the audience called for more.

Myrtle Point—I. A. Dean, Portland purchased Pearl Dean grocery.

County Pioneers ARE HONORED BY ANNUAL REUNION

"In all the stories of man, the story of the trek of those men and women who took the Oregon trail is without parallel."

Holman in Talk State Treasurer Holman, who spoke on this morning's program, also glorified the pioneer and the sons and daughters of pioneers, in a short review of early-day history and the history of the first great pioneers who started their expeditions out from Europe and on to the Atlantic coast.

"They have always sought a wooded country, the pioneers," Mr. Holman explained. "The wooded land has always drawn them." Referring to the high ideals of citizenship, the respect for women and the appreciation of the better things in life, which characterize the Nordic strain, Mr. Holman asked that "we keep those things that have made our people great. Let us not abandon for an expediency our sense of right and wrong. The greatest satisfaction of my life," he declared in conclusion, "is that the mother of my child is a daughter of Jacksonville."

She's Noncommittal

The musical numbers on the program included solos by James Stevens, one of southern Oregon's most beloved and talented artists, who was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. George Andrews. Proof of the singer's outstanding ability and the audience's appreciation of his art, was also present, as Mrs. Lettie Merriman Harvey of Ashland and Mr. Griffin, Mrs. Irvine and Mrs. Holman accompanied their husbands from Portland.

On the afternoon program, which followed the bounteous dinner served in the I. O. O. F. hall during the noon hour, John Griffin, oldest living native son, attired in a deerkin suit made by Col. John E. Ross of Indian war fame, read an original poem which was much appreciated.

The business meeting, at which officers for the new year will be elected, is also in session this afternoon. Preceding the opening of this morning's meeting, many of the pioneers gathered outside the Breuner building, the oldest brick construction in the historic town, to recall stories of the flourishing mining days, while photographs were taken by J. Verne Shangle. Among those present from distant places were Mrs. Mary A. Dunn, 96, of Portland, the oldest pioneer, and her three daughters, Mrs. Ottilia Caldwell, Mrs. Elizabeth Dunn Vansant and Mrs. Ella Dunn Rice, and her son, Senator George Dunn of Ashland. Mrs. S. E. Howlett of Eagle Point, one of the oldest pioneers, was also present, as were Mrs. Lettie Merriman Harvey of Ashland and Mr. Griffin, Mrs. Irvine and Mrs. Holman accompanied their husbands from Portland.

JACKSON HEALTH GROUP GUESTS OF UNIT IN ASHLAND

Yesterday the Jackson County Health association met as guests of the Ashland group, for their bi-monthly meeting. In the absence of the president, Miss Mildred Carleton, Mrs. F. D. Wagner, vice-president, presided.

Dr. Drummond told the association the plans for the two big clinics to be held this fall—the handicapped child clinic and the tuberculosis clinic. He told the members of the association that their help in the work is to help find and report handicapped children. Miss Blanche Reynolds followed his talk with a discussion in which the lay worker could help the nurse and doctor. The lay worker knows her community and can advise as to family histories; the lay person can give advice to families where the nurse cannot make contacts; lay persons are "case finders," which saves the nurse's time; lay workers can develop clinics; they make the organization; they furnish and make supplies; they finance and they give moral support; last, the lay worker establishes the health standards of the community.

Mrs. Denton, Ashland school nurse, gave a resume of summer camp values for girls and urged that southern Oregon unite in establishing one big camp which might be used by all groups like the Girl Scouts, Girl Reserves and Campfire Girls.

Mrs. E. E. Greene, as president of Girl Scouts, expressed her approval of the idea and made plans to work with leaders of girl movements in various communities.
