

MUSIC FILLS AIR; SONG AND DANCE FILMS COME BACK

By ROBBIN COONS
HOLLYWOOD—The anticipated return of the musical boom in pictures is here, and as expected, without the town's being overrun with musicians and song-writers.
It would be an exaggeration to say all the studios are making musicals; some, in fact, aren't bothering about music any more than they did when the singing-dancing film was in the "old times"; but there's music in the air, and tunes are likely to pour out of Hollywood with something like the old abandon.
Paramount still seems to lead in the emphasis on music, and currently there isn't a picture that doesn't have some tuneful essay introduced in one form or another. Marlene Dietrich sings in "Blond Venus," and a musical score runs through the film.
Chevalier as usual is vocally exuberant in every picture. Then there's "The Big Broadcast," as a result of which heavy Kate Smith is to be featured alone in another singing film; and "Evenings for Sale," its continental background permitting the use of several Viennese waltzes.
Even "The Sign of the Cross" is considered a "musical"—by the music department, that is—because of the many hymns, holiday and party choruses, and of course, Nero's attempts on the lyre.
The hall of music at Fox actually is a music hall now. There aren't many song-writers, but there'll be music, at least atmospheric in the background, in every picture to be made with "Chandu." "Rackety-Rax" has several numbers, there's a song in "Hat-Check Girl," and there'll be music in Will Rogers' "Jubilo."
Al Jolson has six songs in "The New Yorker" and Eddie Cantor in "The Kid From Spain" won't be out of the "Warner Bros." have "32nd Street" and "Radio Girl" on schedule, the former an all-star vehicle and the latter to co-star Bebe Daniels and Dick Powell, the lad who crooned in "Blessed Event." This will be Bebe's first screen singing in a long time.
The musical score in every picture is being done by Max Streiner, musical director, Max Streiner, much acclaimed, and his department is busy on similar scores for a new product, M-G-M is lying low on the "out-and-out" musical films, but it's importation of Charlotte Susa, who sings as well as acts, may mean something. The studio also is producing a series of shorts in color, featuring music, singing and dancing.

Hoover Speeches to Amplify His Acceptance; Iowa Campaign Sally an Appeal for Farm Vote

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Within the compass of his acceptance speech and a trio of campaign addresses, President Hoover still hopes to confine the major document of his campaign for re-election.
It will constitute his own report on his stewardship, his own estimate of what are the true values, political and economic, of the presidential campaign of 1932.
The broad outlines of what he will say for his administration or commit himself to for the years ahead in the event of re-election, already are before the voters.
First Speech in Iowa.
They were written into Mr. Hoover's acceptance of his second nomination. That speech stands as an all-embracing foreword to the personal campaign book the President contemplates. The speeches to come will only amplify major considerations or issues of the campaign as he sees them.
Through the localities chosen for two of the three campaign addresses Mr. Hoover is scheduled now to deliver, a glimpse of their general character and place in his plans is obtainable.
One will be at Des Moines in Mr. Hoover's native Iowa, on October 4, synchronizing almost to the day with the Democratic state convention in New York, around which hover expectations of significant developments in the Democratic presidential campaign.
The other address definitely decided upon will be in New York City, on a day yet to be named.
Campaign Speeded Up.
The purport of this seems that in Des Moines Mr. Hoover plans to round out his appeal for a vote of confidence from the farmers and their allied and associated groupings; while in New York his message will be directed to the industrial elements. The third address is yet to be decided upon.
That Mr. Hoover moved into the mid-campaign period under increasing pressure from some of his advisers to widen the scope of his own personal share in the battle could not be doubted. Early defeat in the Maine election inspired a speeding up of the Republican national campaign under urgency of Mr. Hoover himself.
Yet both because of his feeling as to the dignity and requirements of the high office he holds, and because of his personal choice of campaigning methods, well established in 1928 when he made only four major addresses besides his acceptance speech and five short talks, the President appeared loath to enlarge on his speaking program.
What the immediate exigencies of the political situation might force upon him in the way of additional personal appearance remains to be determined as the campaign rolls along.

Just as he pushed into the west in his 1928 campaign with a speech at West Branch, Ia., President Hoover will open his personal drive this year with an address in that state. He speaks at Des Moines October 4. The President is shown at left as he talked in West Branch four years ago, while at right he is shown as he appears speaking now.

THREE RESCUED, 34 GO TO DEATH IN SEA DISASTER

radio operator, William H. Robertson, of Redondo Beach, Cal., might still be safe on the vessel, or too badly hurt to leave.
With no further help possible, the President Madison, under command of Capt. R. J. Healy, which had raced 300 miles to the scene to find the Oregon Maru already there, turned its prow southwestward at 4:30 p. m. yesterday afternoon. Both had stood by the Nevada, which had gone aground probably within a few hours after sending out an S. O. S. late Tuesday night, for many hours, practically helpless to aid.

The cause of the disaster to the Nevada Maru was not definitely known, as its radio went silent after its first S. O. S. message and when found by the Oregon Maru on Wednesday afternoon. It was aground. Gale weather prevailed, however, and the vessel might have been driven on the rocks when disabled, or deliberately rammed ashore in a sinking condition.

CULINARY CRAFT....

By Estella Dorgan, Director of Home Service, California Oregon Power Co.
What to Do With Tomatoes.
Besides plain canning, what shall I do with tomatoes? The answer is CAN MORE—but season them for different occasions. Make chili sauce and catsup to serve with meats, tomato mince meat for pies, jam for sandwiches, tomato soup flavored to suit your own taste, and so on. They are really very easy to make and each one is delicious in its place. Perhaps the greatest mistake we find in their preparation is over seasoning. The delicate tomato flavor is easily destroyed with too much spice and, of course, too much pepper can make the catsup or chili quite uncomfortable instead of adding a delightful flavor to the food being served. So, careful cooking, to avoid scorching, and light seasoning, will assure pleasing results.
Chili Sauce.
15 lbs. ripe tomatoes
5 green peppers
3 cups brown sugar
2 t. cinnamon
2 t. cloves
1 t. salt
1/4 t. red pepper
4 cups vinegar.
Scald, skin and slice tomatoes.

Chop the onions and peppers fine. Combine all ingredients and cook together 2 hours, then seal in sterilized jars.
Tomato Relish.
15 lbs. ripe tomatoes
6 large onions
4 red peppers
4 green peppers
1 bunch celery
1/4 c. celery seed
2 quarts vinegar
2 lbs. sugar
1 c. salt.
Put tomatoes, onions and peppers through food chopper. Place in a bag overnight with the salt, to drain. Add celery, cut fine, and celery seed. Boil sugar and vinegar and let cool, then pour cold over the mixture. Seal in sterilized jars.

Piccalilli.
8 lbs. green tomatoes
8 red peppers
3 green peppers
12 small onions
4 stalks of celery
1/4 c. salt
2 quarts vinegar
3 lbs. brown sugar
1 t. mustard seed
1 t. whole cloves
1 t. cinnamon.
Put the tomatoes, peppers and onions through food chopper and slice celery very fine. Add the salt and set overnight. In the morning drain and make a syrup of the vinegar, brown sugar and seasonings. Pour over the chopped mixture and bring to boiling point then simmer 35 minutes, stirring to prevent scorching. Seal in sterilized jars.

Tomato Mince-meat
2 gallons green tomatoes
1 t. salt
4 lbs. sugar
1 lb. raisins, seeded
1 lb. currants
1 c. vinegar
1 R. cinnamon
1/2 R. cloves
2 oranges, rind and juice
1 lemon, rind and juice.
Wash, pick over and chop the tomatoes in small pieces. Place in colander, pour boiling water over them three times, draining well each time. Place in large kettle, add sugar, raisins and currants, well washed, and boil slowly until tender. Add vinegar, let cool, then add the remaining ingredients. Combine, well and seal in sterilized jars.
