

ROOSEVELT CHEF SPEAKS TONIGHT TO YOUNG DEMS.

The most charming woman who ever visited in the Roosevelt home! Governor Roosevelt's mother, of course, the answer was spontaneous when given yesterday by Charles Richard, here en route to Albany, N. Y., to rejoin the Roosevelt household, and "on to the White House to be cooking for the First Lady of the Land next March." The latter is his ambition, he announced without hesitation, after accepting the invitation of the Young Democratic club of Medford to speak at the meeting at the Hotel Holland at 8 o'clock tonight.

"And the most interesting man?" "Al Smith" — again the chef for many years in the Roosevelt home, exclaimed with triumphant French accent and not a moment's delay.

"He's a real fellow, Al Smith. I like him," he added with a Parisian flourish of the palms. "And Mrs. Roosevelt, she's the most charming woman who ever visited in anyone's home. And the governor is like her in every way."

Urged into a discussion of the Republican Roosevelt, the master of cuisine dropped his enthusiasm. "I never cared about Theodore Roosevelt's son, the one I knew, and Alice Roosevelt Longworth, she is — what do you say? The whole show without a background. C'est admet, we would call it."

"Of course she is supporting Hoover. She is with Curtis. He put her in the map," the Frenchman gave an indifferent shrug of his shoulders. "She has to fight the battle through, whether she wants to or not. Roosevelt doesn't care. Don't you remember his slogan, 'Judge me by my enemies'?"

Publicity, that's Mrs. Longworth's ambition. She isn't a bad looking woman, either," he added, as if in an effort to show his respect for blood by saying something good for the other branch of the family. His eyes rested upon the little white donkey dangling from his watch-chain. "The majority of the people are for Roosevelt, all along the way," the man greatly responsible for the New York governor's recovery from paralysis, then exclaimed with pride. "I've talked to them all." The statement carried more weight later, when it was learned that Richard had been "sounding them out" for some time. He has been in the west for four years and maintains "There's no doubt about it, Roosevelt will be in the White House in March, East and West are for him."

Asked about the unusual recovery of the Democratic nominee, with whom he has been so closely associated, Mr. Richard said: "He fought from the beginning, always with the resolve that 'I'm going to get well!' He's a great sport, Roosevelt. He never gives in. When he starts out to do a thing, he does it. That's how he got well."

"He's a kind man. I've never been back to the foundation in Georgia since I went to Warm Springs with him for the cure. But he is always thinking about those children, always interested in helping them in their battle against paralysis. "And you know he's a granddaddy already," Mr. Richard laughed. "He's a proud one."

Mrs. Richard, who accompanied her husband to Medford, punctuated his tale with occasional interruptions, when the famous chef, in a burst of enthusiasm showered too many adjectives into his discussion of Roosevelt, Democratic and Republican.

While in Medford the Richards are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Kelly, having met them in Portland when Roosevelt recently appeared there.

BOY CARTOONIST IN HOOSEGOW FOR SMASHING DOOR

A tall blond boy, claiming to be an artist en route to Hollywood, where he expects to assist Walt Disney, the famous cartoonist, John Wiede, who gave his age as 18, was yesterday sentenced to 10 days in jail following his arrest early Sunday morning by state and city police for disturbing the peace.

The tall youth, who carried an exceptionally large pack and led a little white and brown cocker spaniel, objected to the charges made at a local restaurant for some hot-cakes and coffee. After paying for his breakfast, the officers said, the boy slammed the door so violently that he broke the plateglass in it. He was then going to break the windows in the cafe, but he was held in check until police could arrive for him.

John told the judge that he only received two small hot-cakes, "and, of course, had to feed one to the dog."

When relating his story Saturday, young Wiede said he was from Atlantic City, N. J., and had been on his cross-country tour, doing odd jobs, for the past eight months. He stated that he had graduated from grammar school, and planned to enter high school on his return home.

However, he said in court that his parents resided in Philadelphia, Pa., and that he had been in Seattle for the past several years, where his aunt and uncle live, according to the court records. Each time he told the tale, he had obtained his little dog in a different town.

Police are checking up to find Wiede's relatives. State police Officer Joe Polson is caring for the boy's dog while he is serving his sentence.

WILKINS BALLOT TITLE REVAMPED ON LAW OPINION

The county clerk was today instructed by the secretary of state to eliminate the phrase "district attorney" from the ballot certification and title submitted by Attorney M. O. Wilkins of Ashland, independent candidate for district attorney.

The "Ballot Information" circular sent out by the secretary of state, reads: "M. O. Wilkins, of Jackson county, district attorney, independent."

The circular is used by county clerks in the preparation of the regular ballot, and the error was discovered yesterday.

The Wilkins ballot was ordered to read: "M. O. Wilkins, of Jackson County, Independent."

The attorney-general of the state issued an opinion holding that the first ballot title "in no sense" comes under the law allowing three descriptive words on the ballot for each candidate and that Wilkins is not now district attorney.

Friends of District Attorney George A. Coddling, Democratic nominee, and William Briggs of Ashland held that the words "district attorney" after Wilkins name left the impression he now held that office and would have influenced voters inclined to vote for incumbents.

The ballot title was submitted to the secretary of state with the nominating petitions for Wilkins' candidacy. Friends of Wilkins said "it was an honest mistake, and not a fast one."

Kelly and Kelly, and Mee by Attorney Gus Newbury.

Owing to many local attorneys having cases in the federal court, the petit jury has been excused by Circuit Judge H. D. Norton, until Monday, October 17. Judge Norton will hold court in Josephine county next week. The balance of this week he will hear equity and routine legal matters here.
