The farmer is now in hot pursuit of the bull that gored him in the spring. This will reduce the campaign sniveling hysteria, and lying.

AN EDITOR OPINES
(Fredstone Oregonian)
The evils arising from the use of intoxicating liquors are manifestly terrible but nothing to compare with those arising from the fanatical spirit exhibited by this woman. She is of that class that burnt witches in New England and that crucified Christ because they did not believe as others did.

There is no more sign of much needed rain, than if all the agriculturists were praying for rain.
Toggerly Bill Isaacs wore his dress suit Monday evening, and was mistaken for many by William F. Prosperity.

The confounded taxes have knocked another one of its victims behind the steering wheel, of what appears to be a brand new auto.
A number of representatives of the much abused government, are here this week.

The country roads continue to put up poor arguments for economy. Some of the said roads are so rough, the butter is churned back into milk before the paved highway is reached.
"Brown Brothers recently had one of their horses die" (Palsley Items). Quite obliging of the horse.

Besides looking out for phone poles, fire hydrants, and curves that fail to straighten out fast enough, boys on bicycles have to look out for autists.
Gregg Campbell, the 7-toothed Scot is endeavoring to walk, and stagger like he was going to vote dry next November.

Returning nimrods have started flashing their jerky in public, at their own risk.
"Finda Prison Iriksome" (Oakland Tribune). Isn't that the main objective of prisons?

The bracing morns and the state of the times, have returned many to the eating of pancakes. It is only in the past three years that anybody ever ate pancakes.
There will soon be a military event around here of some consequence, enabling the 2nd loots to trip over the colonel's sword.

The Secretary of the Treasury in a speech last week, declared that "the Depression has curbed the greed of the people." Perhaps you have noticed this. Formerly they would skin their Grandmother for a dime, and now they will do it for a nickel.

As a Business Proposition

THE United States is the biggest "Big Business" in the world. President Hoover is now, and has been for three years, the president of that business.

For the second time last night, President Hoover reported to the people of this country, who are the stockholders in that business, on what he has done, and on that record he asked that he be kept on the job.

Putting political partisanship aside, putting personal prejudices and factional passions aside, we don't believe there is an American citizen who listened to that speech, who would not agree, that purely as a cold blooded business proposition, the president's report of his stewardship justifies his being kept in that position for another four years.

IN simple words, but with force and clarity President Hoover showed how close this country had come to SUPREME DISASTER; how by skillful management, and unswerving courage, such a disaster had been averted, and how if these same principles and policies are retained, nothing can stop this country's steady progress, to better and finer things.

AGAIN putting politics aside, and looking at the situation in light of the facts,—not as we may wish they were, but as they actually are,—we don't believe any fair minded person can deny that to change horses at this critical time—to take President Hoover out, and put Franklin Roosevelt in,—would not only work a great injustice toward the former, who in the most critical economic crisis this country ever has faced, has not only done his best, but on his record deserves retention—but would delay the business recovery, we all desire, for many months, perhaps for many years.

THE business reaction after the Maine election, demonstrated this fact so clearly that those who run may read. Prices not only in stocks but in farm product prices, tumbled like a house of cards,—why?—simply because that Maine election INDICATED the defeat of President Hoover.

NOW we may be indifferent to stocks. But to millions of people who have placed their savings in them, their collapse is not a matter of indifference. What those prices are may well be the difference between economic well being and disaster.

To others what wheat and corn and cotton, may sell for, may not be a matter of vital concern. They may even welcome starvation prices, as a factor in lowering the cost of living. But to millions of farmers, those prices ARE of vital concern. Those quotations on the exchange, may represent the difference between keeping their homes and losing them.

So on all down the line. Materialistic? Merely the business angle? In one sense, "yes." Merely a matter of dollars and cents. But in another, and deeper sense "no," as the president so clearly brought out.

"I have been talking of currency, of gold, of credit, of banks of insurance policies, of loans. Do not think these things have no human interpretation. The happiness of 120,000,000 people was at stake in the measures to enable the government to meet its debts and obligations. I wish I were able to translate what these perils, had they not been overcome would have meant to each person in America. . . . The financial system is not alone entrusted with your savings. Its failure means the manufacturer cannot pay his worker, the worker his grocer, the merchant can't buy his stock of goods, the farmer cannot sell his products. The great clock of economic life stops. Had we failed disaster would have translated itself into despair, in every home, every city, village and farm.

What Price, Victory?

A GOOD friend of this newspaper recently gave us what he called a tip, in the following language:
"Ease up on Hoover. I agree with everything you say about him but why put your money on a losing horse? Hoover deserves to win, but he can't. The presidency is the least important issue in Jackson county. Concentrate on the local issues, where you are dead right and bound to win. Boasting for Hoover merely weakens your case. Take it or leave it but I know I am right. Hoover is a gone goose."

Mebbe so. At any rate we agree that the results of the county elections here are of far more importance to the people of Southern Oregon, than the results of the presidential race.

But after all this is a presidential year. The result of that election is not going to make or break this county, but, as a part of the country, it is going to have a genuine local affect.

And we want that affect to be a good one. All politics and personal considerations aside, we honestly believe, that the re-election of President Hoover WILL BE good for this county, and the election of Franklin Roosevelt WON'T BE.

Feeling as we do, we are going to do what we can, necessarily in a small way, to bring about the victory of the former. We have friends, just as disinterested, who feel precisely the reverse. Well they are entitled to their opinion, just as we are entitled to ours.

AS to what the outcome will be that is one of our least concerns. If the Mail Tribune in its quarter of a century of political activity, had spent its time trying to pick winners, its course would have been very different from what it has been.

Instead of trying to pick winners, this paper has tried, not always with success but always with sincerity, to pick those candidates, both locally and nationally, which in its judgment, were best fitted for the jobs to which they aspired.

We have supported both Republicans and Democrats. We have supported both winners and losers. We shall continue to do so. Our only real passion politically, has been for GOOD GOVERNMENT, regardless of all other considerations. Hewing to that line, is job enough for us.

KEROSENE FOR CHIGGERS.

Pulex, penetrans, chigger, chigger, Jigger, sand flea, rhinoceros, is a very small insect, so very tiny that it is hard to see with the naked eye, in fact, it is little larger than the famous Acaerus scabiei which is responsible for old-fashioned, 7-year itch. Like the itch mite the chigger burrows into the skin, preferably about the toes or the tender skin of feet and legs unaccustomed to exposure. Of course it is the female of the species that causes the trouble. Like Mrs. Acaerus she digs in when she is preparing for the coming of her brood of little mites.

The chigger pierces the skin in an oblique direction and all but the last two segments of the brownish red egg shaped insect become embedded in the skin. Great irritation results, swelling, sometimes an abscess and sometimes serious lymphangitis or blood poisoning.

If you can see the chigger by means of a magnifying lens, the best treatment is extraction with a heated needle, which kills the insect and its eggs. The wound which this leaves should be treated antiseptically, say with a hot wet dressing of borax and salicylic acid a while and then some simple sterile ointment for a day or two.

If you recognize the nature of the attack before the chiggers get dug in, one of the best remedies is kerosene (coal oil) kept applied for an hour. This kills the insects without unduly irritating your skin. The kerosene should be kept applied constantly, or if it is possible the affected surface immersed in it for half an hour or longer.

In chigger regions it is necessary to sweep accumulations of dust from walls and floors, and to use insecticides in the porch and around the house. The application of odorless lotions to the skin tends to repel chiggers just as it repels mosquitoes. A mixture of equal parts of olive oil, oil of tar, oil of cedar and oil of citronella makes a

NATION'S SAFETY ENDANGERED BY DEMO PROGRAM

Thousands of people in their distress, the president said, were saying that "things could never be worse." "Let no man tell you that it could never be worse," he added. "It could be so much worse that these days, distressing as they are, would look like prosperity."

Battle in Silence
"Many of these battles have been fought in silence," the chief executive continued, "without the cheers of the limelight or the encouragement of public support, because the very disclosure of the forces opposed to us would have undermined the courage of the weak and induced panic in the timid."

The president said that one point in the battle against foreign withdrawal of gold and hoarding in this country his treasury secretary informed him that unless a remedy could be effected the nation could hold to the gold standard "but two weeks longer."

"Being forced off the gold standard in the United States," he added, "meant utter chaos. Never was our nation in greater peril—we won this battle to protect our people at home. We held the Gibraltar of world stability. The world today has a chance."

HER WEALTH
Southern Oregon is a near paradise. That happy region has twice as much purchasing power per capita as the average purchasing power of Oregon as a whole, and 50 per cent more purchasing power per capita than is the average in Portland.

Between 1920 and 1930, southern Oregon had twice the increase in population than Oregon as a whole had.

It is now estimated that 100,000 cases of canned tomato products will be sold this season from Jackson county. Tomato growing has been so successful in Jackson that it is one of the county's premier industries.

In Ashland the Bagley Canning company has an aggressive sales program, with many kinds of tomato preparations. Other activities in the industry are the Rogue Valley Canning company and the Knight Packing company, both of Medford. They are, with their huge output, examples of the diversified and progressive use of the soil carried on in Jackson county.

Jackson county recently dedicated its fine new $275,000 courthouse, constructed in the civic center of Medford, under the proceeds of the Oregon & California land grant refunds and without a bond issue or a tax levy to defray construction costs.

The building itself is one of the finest county buildings in the state, modern in every detail, and is built of sandstone, with a base and approaches of Ashland granite. Marble corridors and well designed and attractive offices complete this splendid edifice.

The crop of Medford pears this year will total nearly 3,000 carloads, with advance indications of a fair price for the winter varieties, following a disappointing price scale on the earlier Bartlett's. The Oregon peary pear bureau, organized last year, and shippers of Medford growers and shippers of pears, is entering into its second year of advertising work, which was so successful last year in stimulating a number of pear markets, and an added activity of the organization this year—the research program, covering keeping and ripening conditions of pears, under the direction of Professor Hartman—will undoubtedly prove most beneficial.

Leaders in agriculture and other industries there are alert, aggressive and reaching out for advanced methods and newly discovered processes, and in agriculture, for instance, utilizing every form of product that the market will accept, adjusting the output, of course, to the very few restrictions imposed by southern Oregon climate and Jackson county soil. —Portland Journal.

FUNERAL SERVICE HELD IN B. FALLS

BUTTE FALLS, Oct. 5.—(Sp.)—Michael Mahoney, 88-year-old Civil War veteran, died Saturday and services were held at the Butte Falls Community hall at Monday afternoon, Rev. Smith in charge.

At the cemetery the United States National Guard from Medford gave the military salute and taps were sounded. The floral offerings and the large attendance bespoke the esteem and friendship of "Mack" Mahoney. His general disposition will always be remembered by all who met him. To the last there was the spark of joviality in his eye.

The pall-bearers were ex-soldiers of the World War.
