ITINERANT YOUTH ARTIST OF SORTS

A picture of Huckleberry Finn and his dog, which looks like the front piece from the book by Mark Twain, appeared in the August 31 edition of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. But Huck turned out to be none other than John Weide, the blond youth now in the county jail, and his dog was Frita, the little cocker-spaniel, which Joe Polson, state police, is now caring for.

Weide, a transient from the east coast—one day in Atlantic City, N. J., and the next Philadelphia, Pa.—was awarded first place in the costume contest conducted in Seattle during last week, and according to the newspapers, "he got a big hand from the spectators." In Weide's immense canvas bag was a large collection of drawings, which he has made during the past two years. When taken into court for causing a disturbance in a public place, John told the judge he was on his way to Hollywood to get a job assisting Walt Disney.

The boy's collection contained a number of pictures he had displayed in the Trojan art exhibits conducted by the Seattle Times, and one placed a red ribbon in the senior division. The outstanding work in his folder was a pencil sketch of the late Sir Thomas Lipton, which he made October 4, 1931.

HOOVER'S EFFORTS AIDING RETURN OF PROSPEROUS DAYS

GEORGE, Ia., Oct. 7.—(AP)—President Hoover's efforts have been instrumental in swinging the economic pendulum back toward prosperity. Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, declared in a campaign speech here today.

Speaking before a crowd of Iowa, Illinois and Missouri citizens, Hurley attacked Governor Roosevelt's state administration as partly to blame for the economic disasters of the last few years.

Answering Roosevelt's condemnation of the sale of worthless securities, the war secretary said that 90 percent of them were sold out of New York state and asked why the New York governor did not enforce the blue sky laws of his state. Hurley declared that through administration efforts, gold, which had gone out of the country to France and England is returning, stock prices are rising and hoarded money is returning to circulation.

TACOMA BIRDS BRING HOME THE BACON

After Laying The Eggs

Mr. Loyd, owner of "Loyd's Red Farm," 7011 Pacific Avenue, Tacoma, Wash., is happy to make this statement regarding his high hen and the Illinois contest:—

"Our pen of five hens laid 1,411 eggs, an average of 282.2 eggs each, in the year. They made a new all-time Western Record for their breed, and the high hen of the five, No. 10, laid 393 eggs. She was high Rhode Island Red of all American contests, according to word from the east. This record was made at the Murphysboro, Ill., contest."

Readers of this paper will be interested in a special letter-size folder telling "What 15 Professions of Poultry Husbandry Say About Feeding Vitamin D." If you're not a poultryman—show this ad to your neighbor who is. The folder is quite worth while. Copies of this set without charge and postpaid to anyone addressing a letter to NPOCO, 463 California St., San Francisco.
