GLEN FABRICK SR. KILLED IN HUNT

Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

SAMUEL INSULL, former utilities magnate, is now a fugitive from justice, charged with embezzlement and larceny. The business structure that he reared with other people's money has crashed.

So ends another chapter in high finance. INSULL was a product of the times. In the big boom years between 1922 and 1929, when everybody was trying to get rich without work and many were succeeding, he found money easy to get. It almost seemed to grow on trees. People didn't care much what they bought. All they were interested in was what they could sell it for. And sellers were interested only in the money they got. They didn't care what they passed on to the buyer. It was in conditions such as these that the Insull properties arose. With the clearness that is characteristic of hindsight, we can see now that they were foredoomed to fail.

BECAUSE of the failure of the Insull utilities, thousands of people have lost their invested savings, which is a great pity. Still, they might have lost them anyway, for few of the investments made in that frenzied time turned out to be worth much.

The real pity lies in the loss of confidence in business leadership that has followed the unprincipled operations of men such as Insull. It is going to take a long time to build up the confidence they destroyed.

THERE have been many failures in this country in the past three years. But don't overlook the fact that in this period of stress and trouble the really sound business institutions of the country have survived. They have survived because they were built upon honest foundations.

These hard years since 1929 have taught us the value of wise conservatism and plain business honesty. That lesson is going to be worth a lot to us in the years of saner prosperity that will follow the present depression.

INSULL, incidentally, paid himself a salary of $500,000 a year—which, of course, came out of the pockets of his stockholders and the earnings of his employees.

In the years of saner prosperity that will follow the present depression, just how many men are going to pay themselves a salary of a half million dollars a year and be WORTH IT?

PERHAPS you can answer that question with complete assurance as to the accuracy of your answer. This writer can't.

But this writer has an idea, which is becoming rather firmly fixed, that the day of enormous individual salaries, such as that paid to Insull, is drawing to a close.

In the future, there is going to be more insistence on better returns to the average man and less insistence on exceedingly large salaries or profits by a few individuals.

If that is true, it is a healthy trend.

BOB BUTLER, member of congress from the second congressional district of Oregon, which includes all of Eastern Oregon, said yesterday to the writer of this column:

"My district is an interesting one. It includes 18 counties and has a total area of 65,000 SQUARE MILES. There are great open spaces in this country, aren't there?"

"This great territory," Congressman Butler added, "is closely concerned with reclamation. It contains Oregon's only national park. It is interested in Indian reservations and the problems that go with them. It has national forests and other public lands. And grazing rights are important to it."

"All of these activities have direct contacts with the federal government. That means that the congressman from the Eastern Oregon district has an interesting job."

BODY FOUND BY COMPANIONS IN FOREST DEPTHS

D. E. Millard, of Hunting Party Reports Death of Prominent Medford Business and Fraternal Leader

An inquest into the death of Glen Fabrick, Sr., slain in a hunting accident, will probably be held at the scene of the tragedy this afternoon. Capt. Lee M. Bown of the state police said this was the intention of Coroner District Attorney George A. Coddling also left for the scene, with two state policemen.

Glen Fabrick, Sr., for many years a leading business man and citizen of this city, was the victim of a fatal hunting accident today in the King Spruce Camp section of Eastern Jackson county, about six miles from the Lodge Pole ranger station. News of the tragedy came as a stunning shock to hundreds of friends and acquaintances throughout southern Oregon and the state.

Complete details of the fatality will not be known until Coroner H. W. Conger returns late this afternoon from the scene of the tragedy, which occurred in an isolated wilderness, reached only by trails. Coroner Conger arrived at noon today at the Lodge Pole ranger station and left at once for the hunter's camp.

Millard Reports Tragedy
The wife of the ranger in charge of the Lodge Pole station said over the telephone this noon, D. E. Millard of this city, came to the ranger station this morning, about nine o'clock and telephoned the coroner, that Fabrick had been killed. She said that Millard was in a great hurry to return to his camp and she did not press him for details.

Coroner Conger said this morning before he left for the scene, that Millard informed him over the telephone, when reporting the tragedy, that Fabrick had been found dead, with his feet upon a log and that his rifle, with one shell discharged, lay four or five feet away. Millard said he did not know whether Fabrick had been accidentally shot for a deer by another hunter, or killed by the accidental discharge of his own gun, while crossing a log.

Three in Party
The Lodge Pole ranger station reported the same details, and that the accident occurred about three miles

BACK OF HUNTER IS BROKEN WHEN SHOVED OFF CLIFF

SEATTLE, Oct. 13.—(AP)—A man facing death with a broken back, Frank Simpson, today accused another hunter of having deliberately pushed him over a 30-foot cliff in the Green River district a week ago, and on the basis of his description of the alleged assailant, authorities began a widespread search for him.

Faber said that his plan would necessitate the moving of 12 houses, and that, while no definite decision was given, he received little encouragement that the present route would be changed.

Chairman Scott said that the state highway commission in the highway matters took into consideration the attitude of the federal government, the county and cities, and that he main object was to secure a straight route at the least cost, with the greatest convenience, and a reduction in traffic hazards. It is the intention to start the work as soon as possible.

Chairman Scott and party also inspected the survey for the Siskiyou rerouting and expressed themselves as pleased with the results.

Leslie M. Scott, chairman of the state highway commission; Carl Washburne of Eugene, a member of the board; R. H. Baldock, state highway engineer; State Highway Location Engineer Smith and District Engineer Collier spent yesterday afternoon inspecting the new Siskiyou route and the Central Point cutoff route. The party came by auto and left last evening for the north.

Chairman Scott and party conferred with Everett Faber of Central Point, one of the leaders in the move to have the route as surveyed moved approximately 1200 feet from the Southern Pacific tracks, so to permit of the establishment of an industrial center between Central Point and Medford and to afford an entrance through the center of Central Point from both directions.

Hearing Scheduled
Faber took the highway party over the ground last evening and showed them maps. Chairman Scott directed that a public hearing be held in Central Point, Monday, October 24, when all matters relative to the question will be discussed.

Faber said that his plan would necessitate the moving of 12 houses, and that, while no definite decision was given, he received little encouragement that the present route would be changed.

Chairman Scott said that the state highway commission in the highway matters took into consideration the attitude of the federal government, the county and cities, and that he main object was to secure a straight route at the least cost, with the greatest convenience, and a reduction in traffic hazards. WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—(AP)—President Hoover today received personally a delegation from the bonus expeditionary force, after its leader, Hoke Smith, had conferred for more than an hour with one of the president's secretaries.

Petition Presented
Smith placed upon the president's desk a petition asking that members of the B. E. F. be given clothing, cots, mattresses and blankets and a food allowance of not less than 15 cents a day.

Two women were in the delegation. "We were received by the president and shown every courtesy," Smith told newspaper men as they left the White House.

"We gave our petition to General Hines in the presence of the president. We pledged our unwavering allegiance to the constitution and the flag," Smith said.

The petition, approved by a recent convention at Uniontown, Pa., concluded:

WILL ROGERS says:
COLON, Oct. 13.—This big three-motored Ford Pan-American Airways passenger breezed through some country today. San Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Panama, with stops in each place. Mr. Gerald Dempsey of Long Island Santa Barbara, Cal., is aboard, headed for Chill. I am not headed for anything, just headed for home by way of Cape Horn.

It was good to visit Managua, Nicaragua. I camped there with the marines right after the earthquake. The town has done wonderful in rebuilding. Saw Mr. Hanna, our minister there. He says that every marine was to leave on January 1. That will be as good a move as the one sending 'em in was a bad one.

WILL ROGERS.
