REDONDO POLICE SCENT HOAX IN LOST PROFESSOR
REDONDO BEACH, Calif., Oct. 20.—(AP)—A police suspicion that Elliot B. Thomas, 33, Mission City schools superintendent had perpetrated a hoax by throwing his office into disarray to make it appear he had been kidnaped by robbers gained strength today as authorities sought him on a charge of making false statements. Although admitting he had no conclusive hint as to a motive for Thomas' suspected action, Captain Norris Stensland of the sheriff's department said yesterday he was convinced Thomas had conceived an elaborate scheme to disappear. Stensland ordered a police radio broadcast asking for Thomas' arrest.

Thomas, who Stensland said posed for three weeks before his disappearance as "E. T. Sherwood," dropped from sight late Monday when he left his home for his office to obtain a prospectus he wished to submit to the school's board of trustees he had entertained at his residence. His office was found in a shambles. A search of the Palms Verdes hills and other regions which had been maintained since Tuesday ceased with Stensland's announcement that Thomas, under the name of "E. T. Sherwood" had kept a second automobile in a rented Los Angeles garage and had received letters under the assumed name from cities in Washington and Oregon.
