Anticipation thrilling the audience at the Rialto theater with its weird characters and eager suspense, "The Old Dark House," Universal's strange drama of one exciting night in a lonely Welsh manor, opens local engagements here today. "The Old Dark House" tells a story of travelers on a week end vacation who are caught in a howling storm and forced to seek shelter for the night in an ancient, bleak house where a family of inherent insanity live ruled by a hulking servant of brutal character.

As the night progresses the gigantic brute, possessing the intrusion, becomes dangerously drunk and threatens the entire household. Attempts to subdue him only enrage the evil giant, after a series of terrific battles he hastens to loose upon the group a terror which even the occupants of the awful house fear. From then on stark terror reigns and the horrified guests are placed in desperate situations and events move swiftly to a powerful climax said to be the most impressive for sheer dramatic intensity of any film shown here this year.
