HOW THE BANK CONTRIBUTES TO COMMUNITY WELFARE

The bank has been termed "a financial department store"

Large banks and small differ very little in the variety of services offered—your home-town bank bringing you the same facilities, conveniences, methods of safe-keeping of funds and financial aids as could be afforded by banks in other towns or cities.

For instance, among the features available to you are checking accounts, interest-bearing accounts, safe-deposit boxes, loan and collection services, travelers' cheques, drafts for remittances to distant points.

And when you come to that intangible service, "counsel," your home-town banker is expected to be analyst, economist, psychologist and diplomat, as well as financier. He must have intimate knowledge of conditions surrounding every activity; be acquainted with, sympathetic to and interested in the aims and accomplishments of the people; and, lastly, he must be vitally concerned with the welfare and progress of that community.
