Lowell Sherman heads the cast of "False Faces," which is showing at the Holly theater today for 3 days.

Peggy Shannon, Lila Lee, Bert Churchhill, David Landau, Nance O'Neill, Purnell Pratt and several others comprise the supporting cast.

As Dr. Silas Brenton, whose grafting in New York has cost him his job, Sherman chooses Chicago as a likely field for his further ambitions.

Conceiving the idea of being a plastic surgeon, Brenton sends for his pal of the old free hospital days, and succeeds through the aid of a detective bureau and its scheming head, in publicizing himself to the Chicago women who might be in need of his services.

The role is one of Sherman's best.

Sends Pears—Ed Silverstein, traveling representative for the U. S. Tobacco company, received a letter from his general sales manager, P. W. Brook in New York City, thanking him for the box of Medford Baccos he had sent, according to W. M. Clemenson of the Jackson hotel. Mr. Brook, in his letter, said "the pears" arrived in excellent condition, and they were "delicious." Mr. Silverstein has previously sent Mr. Brooks Yakima apples.

"Smilin' Through" at Craterian

"Smilin' Through," the famous stage play which Hollywood has long been yearning to bring to the talking screen, opens at the Craterian theater today with Norma Shearer in the starring role.

The combination of Norma Shearer with Frederic March, Leslie Howard, O. P. Heggie and Ralph Forbes represents as brilliant an assemblage of artists as could be wished for. Add to this the beautiful story which has stirred the hearts of countless millions since first presented on the New York stage, and the effort to attain the "perfect picture" comes close to realization.
