Crash at 115 Miles an Hour, Escape Unhurt; That's What Science Claims for Safety Auto

By Howard W. Blakeslee
(Associated Press Science Editor)

STATE COLLEGE, Penn.—(AP)—"It is possible for a man, in a properly designed and equipped car, to collide, head-on, while traveling even at the terrific rate of 115 miles per hour, without being injured."

This statement is made by H. L. Yeagley, physicist, of Pennsylvania State College as the result of calculations and actual measurements on a car which he saw crash head-on at 30 miles an hour into a concrete abutment.

The driver of this car, an elderly man, asleep and lying on the wheel, was unhurt. The car stopped in about 30 inches, its crumpling in that distance accordionlike. Luck gave the driver the advantage of these accordion steps in breaking his impact and saved his life.

Yeagley has calculated a combination of changes in interior design of motor cars which would give any passenger the cushioning this sleeping driver had. But his figures unexpectedly indicate that the same accordion "deceleration" is practicable for excessive speeds.

He cites an actual 100-mile an hour head-on plane crash where the pilot was unhurt — when fortuitous circumstances cushioned him as science indicates everyone might be safeguarded. This was the crack-up of John Kyndle, mail pilot, against the face of Stone Mountain. Kyndle's body was stopped from 100 miles an hour to zero, Yeagley says, in a space of about 2.4 feet.

That is the distance that the sleeping driver's body traveled, and the space which Yeagley says is available for safety redesign in motor cars.

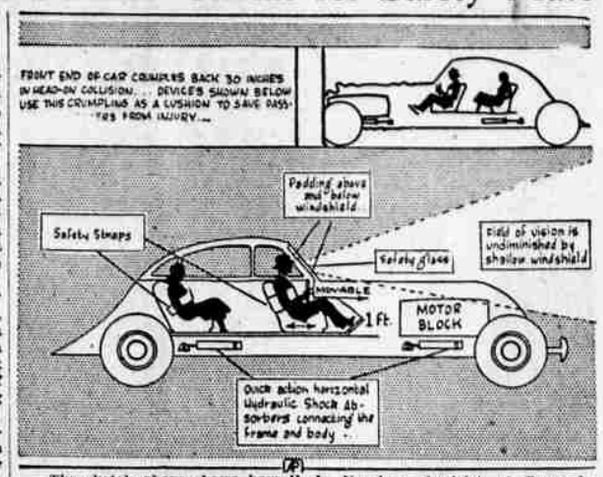
"The two big safety factors," he says, "are first to cause the passenger's body to stop with the car through as large a distance as possible in order to reduce the stopping or decelerating force; second to distribute the stopping force over as large a body area as possible."

Redesign suggestions to accomplish this are: "Move the dashboard to within three inches of the front seat passengers.

"The steering wheel is mounted in a vertical position, with all instruments directly behind it. This procures a better distribution of the stopping force in case of collision. The space above the windshield and that previously occupied by the instrument panel in front of driver and passenger is padded.

"This also serves to further distribute the stopping force. In addition a broad strap is supplied to stretch in front of both front and rear seat passengers.

"To increase the margin of safety further the body of the car may be mounted on horizontal shock absorbers."



The sketch above shows how H. L. Yeagley, physicist at Pennsylvania State college, would design automobiles to prevent injury to driver and passengers in accidents. The passengers might escape unhurt even if the car crashed at 115 miles an hour, Yeagley says.

"HAD CONSTIPATION SINCE BIRTH OF MY FIRST CHILD"

Then Mrs. King Discovered ALL-BRAN

We quote from her voluntary letter:

"I have suffered from terrible constipation since the birth of my first child—9 years ago! I have tried everything and nothing had any lasting results. Very reluctantly I tried your 'ALL-BRAN' with no faith in it at all. Much to my surprise, I have not had to take any medicine since starting to use ALL-BRAN, 4 months ago."—Mrs. Doris Eyre King, 16 Abbey Road, Oxford, England.

Laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN contains two things which overcome constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Certainly this is more natural than taking patent medicines—often harmful. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood. At all grocers. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Widow of E. H. Harriman Richest Woman in U. S. Passes After Operation

Philanthropies Totaled Millions Since Death of Railroad King in 1909; Children Brought Up Simply

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Averell Harriman, financier and philanthropist, who became the richest woman in the United States in 1909, is dead. The widow of E. H. Harriman, railroad financier and "little giant of Wall street," succumbed last night in a New York hispital after an emergency operation. She was 81 years old.

When Harriman died in 1909 he left a 100-word will bequeathing his vast estate to his widow "absolutely and forever." Mrs. Harriman amazed Wall street by the sagacity with which she administered it.

Harriman had had a fondness for 10 per cent investments coupled with a risk, but she preferred 5 per cent and safety. She withdrew from speculative enterprises and eventually created the Harriman National bank.

Philanthropies Many.

The list of the philanthropic and scientific projects she set in motion would fill a column. The most famous was the gift of 10,000 acres and $1,000,000 for a state park in the mountainous regions west of the Hudson river in the Highlands. She was responsible for Bear Mountain bridge, which crosses the Hudson to make the park more accessible.

She established a training school for public service in New York, a eugenics record office at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., the Southern Pacific hospital at San Francisco, a chair of forestry at Yale, a $200,000 athletic field for Trinity school, and gave art masterpieces to the Metropolitan museum and other institutions.

Aided Husband.

In the days when she was actively handling and increasing the vast Harriman fortune, friends used to say that it was money which came to her from her father that served as the original nucleus of her husband's fortune. She was the daughter of William J. Averell of Ogdensburg, N. Y., banker and president of the Ogdensburg and Lake Champlain railroad.

Young Edward Harriman, then an obscure but promising figure, went up to Ogdensburg one day to consult Mr. Averell about a business matter. He met the daughter and fell in love with her.

When it became known in 1909 that he had left her his fortune, Mrs. Harriman received 6,000 letters asking for charity amounting to $267,000,000. She turned them over to a municipal research bureau to be analyzed in the interests of organized benevolence.

Fortune to Children.

It is understood that in later years she transferred much of her fortune to her five children, each of whom had received $3,000,000 from Harriman before he died. The children are Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, Mrs. Robert Livingston Gerry, Mrs. W. Plunkett Stewart, William Averell Harriman and Edward Roland Noel Harriman.

The funeral will be held tomorrow at Arden, seat of the great Harriman home at Arden, which has 150 rooms and gorgeous gardens. Six hundred laborers worked more than five years developing the estate, which originally had 30,000 acres.

Despite this grandeur, however, Mrs. Harriman brought up her children simply, taking precautions to prevent their becoming aware of the family's wealth. She was known as an old-fashioned housekeeper, who disliked social grandeur and jewels. For years she commuted daily to her New York office on a commuter's train.

No estimate of her present fortune was made.

Undergoes Operation—Blaine Moore, six, of Phoenix, underwent an operation at the Community hospital this morning and was reported as resting easily this afternoon.

Amos Burg, nationally known explorer and journalist, who recently returned to Portland from a world tour, arrived in Medford yesterday to obtain pictures and information on southern Oregon to be used in the preparation of an article for the National Geographic magazine, to which he has been a frequent contributor.

He was guest last evening of C. T. Baker, secretary of the local chamber of commerce, from whob he obtained much valuable data for the article and posed for a picture at the J. Verne Shangle studio. He left this morning for the Oregon Caves and is expected back in Medford this afternoon.

He will leave tomorrow morning for Klamath and Lake counties to obtain further information.

He is also well known for several series of lectures given following his tours.

During his short stay in Medford Mr. Burg will be greeted by many former students of the University of Oregon, who knew him on the campus several years ago.
