WOMEN TO FIGHT UNJUST SLASHING IN VETERAN'S AID

"Unjust reduction in compensation to disabled World War veterans, under guise of government economy will draw determined opposition from the women of the American Legion Auxiliary," declared Mrs. K. D. Rose, president of the Medford unit of the Auxiliary, in a statement made public today. The Auxiliary will give active support to the stand of the American Legion against proposed economies aimed solely at the disabled veterans.

The American Legion Auxiliary is wholeheartedly in favor of economy in government, state and local as well as federal. We believe there are many places where economies can be effected, but we are opposed to any program of economy which singles out the disabled men, the widows and the fatherless children as the only ones to suffer. They have already had more than their share of suffering, and we believe that the necessary economies can be made without placing the whole burden on those least able to bear it.

The auxiliary is now enrolling its membership for 1933 and is confident that hundreds of thousands of wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of veterans will enroll to aid the Legion in the fight against injustice to disabled veterans. Every woman who joins the auxiliary now gives the organization just that much more power in its endeavors for the welfare of the disabled men and their families. Through the auxiliary is the only way for women to believe that the veterans should not bear the whole burden of government economy to make their voices heard and their efforts felt.

"The Medford unit is making rapid progress in enrolling its membership for 1933," said Mrs. Beva Aiken, membership chairman. Renewals of old members and enrollment of women not in the organization last year indicate increased membership for coming year.
