Worth Looking Into

THE fundamental problem, which unemployment presents, not only here but everywhere else, is providing work rather than charity for the unemployed. Charity of course must be provided in the immediate emergency.

This is the idea behind the reconstruction and rehabilitation program of the government. We feel that our city and county officials should look into the opportunities offered by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for example.

In the November issue of the American City, under the title "R. F. C. urges more loan applications" we find this:

"The gate is wide open—the responsibility for initiating these projects rests on the officials administering the affairs of municipalities, counties and states."

In these and other forceful words, an urgent invitation to public bodies to apply more generally for Federal loans under the self liquidating clause of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932, was voiced by Harvey C. Couch, a director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Mr. Couch explicitly declared that new sewage disposal plants come under the self-liquidating classification, where periodical charges are made for sewer service. He also declared informal applications for loans are welcome, and street and water improvements, may be placed under the provisions of the act, by passing proper enabling statutes. We quote:

"If any public official who is contemplating applying for a loan under Section 201 (A) has any doubt as to whether or not his proposed project is self supporting he may submit this project to the corporation in the form of a letter. . . . Officials of the corporation have often made suggestions to applicants whereby if certain changes are made, ineligible projects may be made eligible."

In conclusion Mr. Couch makes this appeal: "When one recalls that there are over 3000 towns of over 2500 population; that there are 11,000,000 unemployed clamoring for work. It is astounding that the officials of municipalities and public agencies have not taken advantage of the Act to a greater extent. From this large number of eligible applicants, only 100 applications that are legally eligible have been received. If the funds provided by the act are to be effective in relieving the unemployment of the nation, public officials must make application for projects which come under the scope of the law. Funds will be advanced for small projects as well as large. The provisions of the Act should be studied by every mayor and county official to determine whether or not there are projects which may be initiated in the community and financed thru the R. F. C. . . . In making application correspondence should be directed to the Engineering Advisory Board, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Washington, D. C."

With widespread unemployment, with tax delinquencies, largely confined to workers and home owners, with practically all unemployed men clamoring for work rather than "a dole," the Mail Tribune feels that here is an opportunity to relieve local unemployment and improve local conditions, which city and county officials should at least investigate carefully, before they decide nothing can be done.

This is particularly true in Jackson county, where the bonded debt is very slight compared to the assessed valuation, and where if taxes were fully paid, the county would be on easy street financially.

The way, we repeat, to secure payment for taxes is not by charity, but by giving work to local residents who are unemployed. Such work can't be financed by local banks, can't be desirably financed by local bond issues, but can be financed by the government, and on easy terms.

"How Dry I Am!"

A HIGHLY respected member of this community came into the editorial sanctum today, and with tears in his eyes, asked if he had noticed the following item in the press dispatches:

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—While Representative Raymond O'Keefe of Chicago sang "How Dry I Am" in a loud tenor voice, the House of Representatives endorsed the repeal of the state dry law by a vote of 68 to 21.

Such a spectacle in our visitor's opinion, typified the moral collapse of this great nation, as an aftermath of the recent election, and he shuddered lugubriously at the prospect of the depths of debauchery and degradation, to which this country is destined to sink.

That point of view is quite understandable from the standpoint of the sincere Dry. But we feel our caller is taking this incident too seriously, and not adopting that rational perspective, which would be such a help to him, at the present time.

He should recall that very wise saying that "life is a comedy to those who think, and a tragedy to those who feel."

To thoughtful observers of that scene in the Illinois House of Representatives, the reaction is essentially a comic, rather than a tragic one.

"Boys will be boys,—when the cat is away the mice will play,—there is nothing more certain in this life of ours, than that action and reaction are equal.

Because the national Dry wave went too far in one direction, the Wet wave is bound to go too far in the other. This should not come as a shock but merely as one of those things to be expected.

This Wet jubilee will not last forever, anymore than the Dry jubilee did. "How Dry I Am" will never become the national anthem, than "lips that touch liquor will never touch mine" became the feminist slogan.

WE humans go from one extreme to the other, the dance of life goes on and on. We protest this and we protest that, but NOTHING interferes with that eternal pendulum swing. We would like to have human progress represented by a straight line, but it never is. It is represented by a zig-zag, from left to right, from right to left, but gradually it rises slowly but surely to a higher plane.

THE radical Dries have had their day, now the radical Wets are to have theirs. "The King is dead; Long live the King!" We repeat, it may be difficult, but it is also sensible and salutary, to view this phenomenon with a smile rather than a frown; with UNDERSTANDING rather than with despair. It was ever thus and always will be. But the graph of destiny is never charted by the extremists on either side, but by the common sense and sound judgment of moderates of the rank and file—those who keep their heads clear and their feet on the ground,—regardless of the tempest whirling about them. The worm has turned. Sooner or later it will turn again. So our advice to our agitated visitor, was to be philosophical, continue to stand for what he believes to be right, and work toward that end,—and wait until the pendulum of life swings back again,—as it surely will.

Personal Health Service

THE RATIONAL CONCEPTION OF ADENOIDS

We were just ready for the operation, which the little tin doctor (nurse or teacher) had decided upon, when the bell rang for the other day. I suppose it is one of the censor's for dang if it doesn't go dink-dong just as I get warmed up and on the verge of saying something.

The typical "adenoid facies," or open mouth stupid appearance, featured in ancient doctor books as sufficient motive for perpetrating an operation, especially if the child seemed less bright than nurse or teacher thought he should be, has led to many useless or harmful adenoid operations in those crude shops that appeal to the credulity of the public under the name of "clinics," "dispensary" or "hospital," any lodge where the brass surgeon can get a little practice without honestly using his own name in the racket. You see, it is all right for him to employ any means to catch suckers so long as he keeps his own name out of it. A "clinic" or a "hospital" may resort to all the wiles of quackery for attracting trade when in fact the "clinic" consists of a huddle of three or four ambitious young doctors, or the "hospital" is nothing but a close corporation of a dozen or twenty doctors.

Mouth breathing and irregularities of the teeth, and such faults as pigeon breast, though generally associated with nasal obstructions, by no means spell adenoid enlargement. The obstruction of the free passage of air through the nose is as likely to be due to simple chronic rhinitis, a thickened turbinate, polyp or a foreign body.

In no case can a physician be reasonably sure a patient has adenoids until he has felt the adenoid with his finger or seen it directly with his eye or indirectly by means of a throat mirror. Sometimes it is possible to see the adenoid mass through the nose, but always it is a simple matter for the physician to inspect the vault of the pharynx by refracting the soft palate and using a suitable mirror in the throat. Beware of the quack who assumes adenoids are present without troubling to make such an inspection, or what is less comfortable for the patient, inserting a finger through the mouth into the vault of the pharynx and feeling the adenoid.

Today good physicians advise removal of adenoids only when the patient suffers some definite pathological effects. These are (1) constant or frequently recurring coryza or running at the nose, with or without hacking cough, (2) deafness, (3) kernels (enlarged lymph nodes or "glands") on the sides of the neck. The modern conception of the tonsil and adenoid question is radically different from that of thirty years ago. We know that faulty nutrition in infancy and early childhood has much to do with the state of the adenoid tissues in every part of the body, and the development of the teeth and the bones. Inadequate rations of Vitamin D and perhaps other vitamins will permit not only rickets but other growth defects, and there is good reason to think that this same nutritional disorder is responsible for the faulty development of the jaws and the palate and the nasal passages AND the adenoids. That infants and children receive plenty of pure RAW milk—if it isn't CERTIFIED milk, ask your own physician or your local health officer whether the raw milk available in your community is safe for a child.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Economy I want to tell you that two years ago I had my tonsils removed by the diathermy method, as advised by you. The physician was Dr. . . . and the total fee was $50. My tonsils were very large. The complete treatment required 10 sittings. There was never any particular pain and my throat was never sore enough to prevent me taking my regular meals. My throat has been perfectly normal ever since. (Mrs. D. B.)

Answer—Try and have 'em out by the old Spanish method at that price! Not to mention the risk of septicemia and the risk of hemorrhage and the risk of infection, and the hospitalization, and the days of atrociously sore throat and inability to eat, and detention from business. Frankly, your doctor did not charge a fair price. But perhaps he tempered his fee to your present need. If the entire expense of the crude old gul-lotine and snare method averaged $75, it is surely worth $150 to the patient to get rid of the tonsils safely and without serious discomfort. Club Foot

Baby born with one club foot. Family physician referred to orthopedic surgeon who has had charge for a year, applying plaster casts every two weeks until three months ago when he discontinued them. Now the baby is learning to stand but the heel cord still seems tight. . . . (Mrs. M. V. O.)

Ans.—It will stretch out as the baby uses the foot more and more. I advise you to rely on the treatment the baby is receiving and faithfully follow out the doctor's instructions. That is the best known treatment, and it will give the most satisfactory result possible. (Copyright, John F. Dille Co.)

HIGHWAY GROUP MEETING CALLED

A meeting of the Oregon Pacific Highway association has been called for tomorrow in Roseburg for the purpose of considering the future program for highway development and a publicity program for increase of tourist travel.

EGGS BOUNCE UP IN BAD WEATHER

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Market for eggs was today governed entirely by weather conditions. Trade in eggs was a weather after generally and sharply higher prices—2c dozen all around—for the day, suggests a radical change in temperatures in the bigger consuming sections. Freezing weather in the mid-west is the cause of a great decrease in offerings from that section and this has resulted in a further sharp upward shift of eastern values.

The advance of 2c a dozen named by E. J. Dixon, general manager of the Pacific Co-ops, was in line with conditions ruling elsewhere. The demand for fresh eggs is gaining and production decreasing generally. The new price of extras here is 28c doz. Market for butter continues to reflect liberal activity and additional strength from day to day. Make is decreasing at many points and this is creating a wider movement. No further price change.

Jenkins' Comment

THIS writer disagrees with that statement. It doesn't matter whether a newspaper wins or loses a political campaign in which it engages. What DOES matter is whether or not it is honest and sincere. If it is honest and sincere, it will hold the respect and the confidence of its readers whether it wins or loses campaigns.
