

RECEIVERSHIP FOR DAILY NEWS LEFT TO JUDGE BRAND

counsel for the employe-creditors, said early action on the matter was desired, and that Judge Brand would probably come at once.

Attorney DeSouza also stated that he had been advised that an affidavit of prejudice would be filed against Circuit Judge Norton in the suit of Arthur L. Schoeni, former editor of the News, for collection of approximately $2000, allegedly due for unpaid salaries of himself, Ernest Scott, business manager, and Moore Hamilton, reporter. This action is separate from the receivership plea.

Judge Brand has been assigned to a number of local cases, in the local court the past year, and was scheduled to be here next week to hear motion and demurrers in the four libel suits against the News, in which affidavits of prejudice were filed against Judge Norton.

Next week Judge Norton will occupy the Klamath county bench, hearing cases in which Circuit Judge Judge W. M. Duncan has been disqualified.

CRIMINAL CASES TO WAIT HEARING

No criminal cases will be tried in the circuit court until after December 1. One of the first cases to be called will be that of the state against William F. Glayzer, former resident of the Trail district, and transient laborer indicted for alleged assault upon his estranged wife, Golda, in her Ashland home last July, following an attempted reconciliation. Glayzer is alleged to have slashed his mate with a butcher knife and to have attempted suicide. The court is expected to be asked to name an attorney for Glayzer.

Trial of Robert Rose and Jack Rice, Long Mountain district residents, indicted for alleged setting of forest fires, is also scheduled for an early hearing. The men are expected to ask separate trial. Rose is at liberty on bonds, raised to $2500, upon recommendation of the grand jury, following a report that he had threatened one of the state's witnesses.

The cases of Rose and Rice are listed as first on the docket. The district attorney's office will ask that Glayzer be tried first.

Other cases pending are those of James Marr, indicted last week for assault with a knife upon Phis Dal-laire, during a cafe quarrel; Leslie (Buck) Wilson indicted for receiving stolen goods, in the J. C. Penney store robbery at Ashland last August and Reinhard A. Rolf of Central Point, indicted for involuntary manslaughter for the slaying of his hunting companion, in mistake for a bear.

FAMILY MEN GET WORK ON ROADS

Seventy-seven men were assigned this morning on county road relief work. They were transported to the jobs by county road trucks. They will work a week, and be displaced next Monday by a new crew. In addition to this, 15 men residents of the Eagle Point district were engaged under Road Supervisor Ed Dutton.

The work is given chiefly to heads of families with dependents, whose cases are checked with the Red Cross data.

Assignment of work for next week will be made Wednesday, by the county court, through Victor A. Teng-wald, secretary to the county court. The meeting will be held in the auditorium of the courthouse at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. All applicants will be required to show Jackson county labor cards.

ENYART REQUESTS TIME FOR APPEAL

A motion for enlargement and extension of time until December 15, to file an abstract and transcript of testimony, and an appeal was filed this morning in circuit court by Jesse E. Enyart against the Natatorium amusements company, and the heirs of the Merrick Estate. The motion sets forth that more time will be required by the court reporter to transcribe the testimony.

In a hearing on the case last spring, wherein Enyart, one of the original stockholders of the Natatorium, sought an adjustment of finances of the company the court decided in favor of the Natatorium and the Merrick estate heirs. It was an involved transaction, dating back to "boom days" in this city. The Merrick estate claimed that after Enyart deserted his investment, they by their own efforts and labor, rehabilitated the enterprise, and established it as a tourist camp.

Putnam Treasures Copy Of Brother's Biography

Carrying with him a treasured first copy of his famous brother's biography, George Putnam, editor of the Salem Capitol Journal, stopped over in Medford yesterday to visit local friends.

The book, describing the life and works of the late Arthur Putnam, whose genius as a sculptor is fast gaining recognition among critics, was autographed by the author, Julie Helen Heyneman, herself a famous sculptor, who wrote on the fly leaf: "For George Putnam, to whom the subject of this book owed so much."

Among the collection of photographs bearing upon the intimate life of Arthur Putnam is one of George and Arthur taken together as small boys.

In the Legion of Honor museum of San Francisco where a large number of his greatest works are exhibited, is a collection of the famous Rodin pieces, to which Arthur Putnam's are often favorably compared.

Striking in this regard is Putnam's "The Caveman," depicting the ponderous stupification of a hairy prehistoric subject over his discovery of fire. This has recently been compared to Rodin's "The Thinker," not to the disadvantage of Putnam.

With somewhat over 500 beautiful works completed within 10 years of his early life, Arthur Putnam was cruelly stricken with paralysis in 1911 from which he never fully recovered until his death in 1929.

Besides the San Francisco collection, presented to that museum by Mrs. Adolph Spreckels, another large group of his works are exhibited in the Fine Arts museum of San Diego.

The publication of the biography was made possible by a bequest for that purpose by the late Senator James D. Phelan of San Francisco, who learned of Arthur Putnam's death during his own last days.

Arthur Putnam will be remembered by many of Medford's old timers, who knew him when he visited his family here during his student and artist days.
