

DOORS OF HOLLY CLOSED AS FILM SUPPLY BARRED

The Holly theater, one of Medford's leading playhouses, opened a large and appreciative public August 29, 1930, closed its doors last night following the last showing of "Between Fighting Men," and will not be reopened until some arrangement is made by which the management can obtain films from the leading motion picture companies, John Niedermeyer manager, announced last night.

With closing of the theater, 12 persons were added to the unemployment list, most of them persons upon whom others are dependent for their present livelihood.

Reopening date of the theater is uncertain. Mr. Niedermeyer stated, since all pictures have been bought up from the major companies making it impossible for the independent, home-owned theater to procure first class pictures.

In addition to the 12 persons forced out of employment by the unavoidable closing of the theater, property representing an investment of $150,000 became inactive with closing of the doors last night.

Since opening of the Holly theater, which is modern and equipped with outstanding quality, the patronage of the public has been beyond the expectations of the management. Mr. Niedermeyer stated yesterday, voicing his appreciation of the splendid co-operation he has received from the people of the Rogue River valley in operating an independent theater here.

Closing of the theater, he explained, has been necessitated by the absolute lack of pictures, and through no other reason. As long as pictures were available, the Holly theater was doing a successful business. When it became impossible to obtain pictures it also became impossible to carry on, Mr. Niedermeyer added, explaining that he did not care to solicit the patronage of the public when he could not offer a first class motion picture program.

Mr. Niedermeyer further stated that he is looking forward to the reopening of the theater, whenever arrangements whereby first-class pictures can be obtained by a home-owned playhouse.

LOUISE ELROD IS SENIOR HI QUEEN

(By Dorothy Gore)

The all-school carnival marks the high tide of the high school activities and the coronation of the queen is the event to which the audience looks forward with keen interest.

It is not always that a member of the junior class can be elected queen so that the honor conferred upon Louise Elrod was a double one, which she wore with becoming modesty and sweetness. She wore a gown of heavy cream-white charmeuse satin with brilliant and the usual regal robe and formal details. She carried a gorgeous arm bouquet of yellow and orchid chrysanthemums. The queen, escorted by David Lowry, student body president, was preceded down the aisle by cherubic little Billy Brayton carrying the crown on a velvet cushion. Following were two adorable tiny girls, Maurine Fields and Helen Rubenstein, as train bearers. David Lowry, with a fitting speech, placed the crown on the head of the kneeling queen and presented to her, in behalf of the student body, a pearl and crystal necklace after which she ascended the throne. Her maids were Barbara Wall and Alice May Shirley, senior and sophomore queen candidates, respectively.

Long live Queen Louise!

HUSKIES DON TENNIS SHOES TO WIN ON GRID

SEATTLE, Dec. 10.—(AP)—Borrowing basketball shoes from their brother hoopsters, football players of the University of Washington rolled up a track meet score against the West Seattle Athletic club, winning 66 to 0 in a charity game on a frozen field in the Washington stadium today.

Outsmarting their rivals by donning tennis shoes, the Washington Huskies traveled over the hard ground like the icy wind that chilled the 10,000 spectators and chalked up all 10 touchdowns in the first half while the Yellowjackets were skidding and falling on their cleats like ice-skating beginners.

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 10.—(AP)—Yean Hoy, 30, Chinese truck gardener living near Portland, was killed tonight when he was struck by an automobile driven by George M. Al-len Jr., 23, of Portland on the Columbia River highway near here tonight.
