

CLEANER MOUTHS NEEDED TO RAISE HEALTH STANDARD

Next Step in Prevention of Disease Will Come With Attention to Bad Teeth, Is Word of Noted Dentist

The next step forward in the prevention of disease will come through cleaning up the mouths of the American public. The cavity in a tooth is a great disease producing organism and a definite point of infection which must be forced from the road to good health, is the message brought to Medford yesterday by Dr. Chas. A. Sweet of Oakland, Cal., secretary of the American society for promotion of children's dentistry, in an address at the county courthouse auditorium, attended by members of the Jackson County Public Health Association, members of the county Parent-Teacher association, and interested parents from all sections of the county.

Speaking under auspices of the health association, Dr. Sweet first visited the Alex Sparrow Memorial clinic and began his talk with many words of praise for the much doing of the past few years. He was introduced by Miss Mildred Carlsson.

Clinic Praised.
"You really and truly have a remarkable, a very wonderful, clinic for children here," he declared. "It is splendidly equipped and it is an inspiration to see what this association has done. I would like to take the clinic back to Oakland with me." Taking up in detail his claim that the next step in prevention will go through the mouth, Dr. Sweet explained, "That is why Oregon is sponsoring health programs pertaining to dentistry. Officials know that good health will pay dividends and the way to good health is the investment. "Food ground by infected teeth," Dr. Sweet declared, "is dirtier than food dropped into the street. Infection from teeth spreads to tonsils, adenoids and sinuses, establishing a vicious circle."

Means Saving.
As proof that there is money to be saved by cleaning up the teeth, throat, eyes, ears and noses of children, Dr. Sweet referred to the campaign carried on in Atlanta, Ga., schools, where, through improving the health of the pupils, the attendance was increased in the schools and the expenses decreased through elimination of the need to re-educate pupils. A similar program carried out in the Portland schools was described by the speaker, who added: "We can save half the absence in school by raising the health level."

Stressing the need for more extensive health programs, especially those pertaining to children's dentistry, Dr. Sweet stated: "There are forty-five million children in the United States, ten million are not normal. Ninety-eight per cent of them have infected mouths." The scarcity of persons working in children's dentistry was deplored by Dr. Sweet, who stated that there is not a dental school in the United States teaching children's dentistry. He referred to himself as the second oldest follower of this branch of work, and stated that he had been in it only 11 years. The field is a new one, he added, in which there is much to be accomplished and little money with which to accomplish it, but one in which "we are not discouraged, but anticipating great strides forward."

Tea a Feature.
Following Dr. Sweet's address, a discussion period was carried on with numerous persons asking questions, which were answered in detail. At the close of the meeting tea was served by the association. Posters on display in the auditorium showed what has been accomplished by the dental clinic operated in this county by the health association since 1928. The total cost of the clinic since that time was listed as $3,098.17, with a deduction of $125 in fees collected. None of this money has been furnished by the county. The clinic has been operated 38 months, working in conjunction with the terms of school. Five dentists and 15 volunteer workers have worked on the clinic and 1580 children have been treated, through this public health association program.

Dr. Sweet also spoke yesterday at the Senior and Junior high schools here, at the Central Point and Phoenix high schools, and at the Chamber of Commerce forum. He left today for Ashland, where he will carry on a similar program.

DEATH OF NICHOLS SHOCKS EAGLE PT.

EAGLE POINT, Dec. 15.—(Spl.)—The community was shocked to learn of the sudden death of Gus Nichols December 11. Although Mr. Nichols had been in poor health for some time, he and his wife attended the dance at the Luke Kincaid hall the evening before and at that time he seemed as well as usual. He was a son of one of the pioneer families of the valley, his father coming into this community more than 90 years ago when 8 years of age. Mr. Nichols leaves to mourn him his wife, Alice; one daughter, Mrs. Ruth Nichols; three sisters, Mrs. Anna Brophy of Eagle Point, Mrs. Fred Matheson of Medford, and Mrs. Laura Fisher of Denver, Colo. phone a short time before the hour set.

A second execution of judgment, in the Niedermeyer, Inc., decree against the Pacific Record-Herald and Fehl for the sum of $3500 against the building and land, is scheduled for January 7, 1933, at 10 o'clock on the court house steps, the records in the case show.

The office of Attorney George M. Roberts, counsel for Niedermeyer, Inc., says publication and posting of the notice of this sale had been started, and that this is the routine in all similar cases.

The original Niedermeyer, Inc., suit was filed last summer, for the collection of a chattel mortgage, and other obligations involving the Pacific Record-Herald, and other property on Sixth street. The claims of Niedermeyer, Inc., took precedence over the execution of judgment levied against the paper in the $15,000 Parr libel suit verdict. Fehl filed a counter claim against Niedermeyer, Inc., for $21,000. The case was heard before Circuit Judge Latourette of Oregon City when an affidavit of prejudice was filed against Judge Norton. The decree and findings, upholding Niedermeyer, Inc., claims, and holding that Fehl had failed to support his counter-claim was handed down last month.

The Niedermeyer, Inc., action bears no relationship to the Dackack still slaying case, the Parr libel suit, or any other Jackson county case, with which it has been erroneously linked, attorneys and county officials said today.

GRAND JURY NEAR FINISH IN LABORS

The grand jury, which has been in session since Monday, is expected to complete its investigations by tomorrow night, or Saturday noon at the latest. A number of witnesses appeared before the body yesterday. Witnesses have also been called in the accident on the Pacific highway a week ago that resulted in the death of William Scheble, local resident.

The grand jury at its present session will inspect the prohibition fund. The law of the state requires that it be inspected at regular grand jury sessions. This will be the last inspection of the year for this particular fund.

The grand jury is also expected to file its final report at the end of the present session.

Yesterday, Rowe is reported as telling officers he hitch-hiked to Ashland, where he had decided to spend the night.

The young man was turned over to the state police, who are awaiting word from Portland concerning the case.

SLUPSKY SIGHS FOR DAYS WHEN BEER WAS BEER

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 15.—(AP)—White beer proponents are testifying at hearings in Washington on the beer bill. "Col." Abe Slupsky, 73-year-old philosopher, sighs.

"Why don't they ask somebody who knows his beer, to testify?" the "Colonel" asks. "I could tell 'em about it."

And he opened a frayed scrap book to show some newspaper clippings describing his demonstrations of quantities of the robust St. Louis beer of 1899. Early in that year Slupsky drank 20 pints of beer a day for 30 consecutive days. The score was attested by downtown bar keepers, who watched him drink, and was checked daily by newspaper reporters.

In those days the percentage of alcohol in beer was not much discussed, but Slupsky is sure it was more than four per cent.

"Anything less than four per cent isn't beer," asserts "Col." Slupsky. "I could drink those 20 pints a day because I knew how to drink beer. I didn't gulp it from small glasses. I sat down and sipped it from big lemonade glasses, eating a few salt pretzels. I was overweight at the end of 30 days, but I felt fine."
