Mine Association Holds Great Possibilities for Industry's Development

(By A. E. Kellogg)

Perhaps the greatest potential possibility of co-operation in bringing the small mine owner and capital together lies in the local mining associations or congresses. If some means of permanent registration of meritorious prospects and mining properties could be provided, as well as a registration of consultants located in the territory served by any particular organization, it would simplify the problem.

For the property owner, himself, a service similar to this might prove a decided asset in bringing his list before prospective purchasers. By the establishment of such bureaus persons interested in obtaining properties would have but to make their desires known in order to be supplied with a list of worthy mines, together with brief extracts of their salient features and terms of sale.

California Cited

The California state bureau of mines at the present time approaches this ideal by publishing a monthly bulletin of current information, with a view to bringing mine owners within the state in contact with parties interested in securing such information. Likewise, it is designed to bring mineral producers and consumers in contact with one another.

Listing of properties with chambers of commerce usually fails the purpose for which it is intended because of this very fact. Chambers of commerce, because of their nature and functions, must of a necessity be forced to list all properties within their respective areas, but with a local mining association functioning it is a clearing house for all mining inquiries passing through the chambers of commerce.

For a considerable period of time financing has been ready to undertake the examination of new, potential gold mines, with a view of placing them on a production basis. Should the results of the examination so justify. In fact, the demand for new gold properties of merit may be said to exceed the supply.

Prospector Complains

On the other hand, the prospector may raise the cry that the capitalist fails to heed his pleas for succor with the result that neither he nor the financier profits from his discovery.

The result of the above attitudes on the part of the prospective operator, on one hand, and the disgruntled prospector on the other, many arguments can be advanced in favor of each, but it seems to the writer that the money man may be correct in his attitude of caution in the majority of cases.

In by far greater number of instances the prospecor has a grosaly inflated idea of the value and extent of his prospect, and any attempt on the part of a technical person to invalidate his opinion is equivalent to a statement of enmity. The prospector is, in fact, usually so insistent about the potential value of his undeveloped holdings that it frequently is wasted effort to express any opinion whatever, unless it should be one of agreement.

On the other hand, a large number of prospectors have a keen and sincere desire to sell their locations at a figure or on terms well within reason. These miners usually poesess an even tempered disposition, with technical knowledge gleaned from study and experience. They are an ideal type with whom to do business and possess considerable knowledge of the geology of the property which they are attempting to finance.

Engineer Sought

The mining engineer scout, in the employ of capital, and the independent consulting engineer, who is generally called upon to locate properties of merit for interested financiers, are the ones most commonly approached by the prospector who solicits financial aid. The scouts and the consultants are the first and usually the final stumbling blocks in the eyes of the prospector, for upon the two responsibility of further investigation or of dismissal.

The first question the scout will ask is "Is the property actually as the owner pictures?" In order to arrive at any conclusion to correctly solve the problem, it may be possible to check up the verbal statement of the property owner through such concrete evidence as he may possess in the shape of affidavits or reports on his property made by such engineers as have actually examined it or the particular district it is located in. Now here is where the local mining association steps in and assists in promoting the mineral resources of the region.

GO TO CHURCH ON SUNDAY, JAN. 1ST, PLEA OF PASTORS

Dear Mr. Editor:

May we have a little space in your paper to urge a few things which we deem of great importance at this time? At its last meeting, the Rogue River Ministerial association took definite action to inaugurate a "Go to Church Movement" for Sunday, January 1, 1933. We believe that all our people should go to church twice on that day. We believe this to be a most opportune time.

We believe that there is a spirit of worship, and a heartfelt need of God in all normal people that will call them to begin the new year in right attitude of mind and heart that will make nearly all of them feel that the first, and the right thing to do in the new year will be to honor God with their presence at some church service. We believe that if we can reach all and make the proper appeal to them, that the most of our people will gladly respond.

Practically all of the churches of the valley are represented in the ministerial association. We are appealing to those who are not represented just the same as to those which are. The needs are just the same. God is interested in all. In the association we feel the need of each other. Here we are trying to find more of the common ground that we all stand upon most of the time, and here we feel that anyone's problems are the problems of all.

We are not seeking to build up our churches from the ranks of other churches, so we are urging all people to attend somewhere, and asking them to invite all other people to attend somewhere, at both services of the day, Sunday, January 1. If my neighbor does not care for my church service, I am going to ask him to attend some other church service, and to take someone else if he can. Is that fair? And, Mr. Editor, I am sure that you are going to be asked to take a hand in this. You stand in a place where you may reach a lot of our people; and, of course, you have influence. We want you to use it for all that it is worth in this effort.

We want to appeal to the outstanding leaders in every department of life. Will not our judges, lawyers, state, county and municipal officers, and leaders, school teachers, officers, pupils, editors, printers, writers, players, singers, business men and women, sportsmen, and all others lend us a hand to put this over in a really beneficial way? If all who feel that the year 1933 should be made safer, better, and happier, will attend church service someplace, and seek God's good graces, and His guidance in all the affairs of life, we shall feel the results of the movement all through the new year, and whatever we may have will mean more to us.

We know that the wisest men and women and the deepest thinkers in all departments of life believe that unless there is a deepening of the spiritual life of the people, and a consequent turning to righteousness, we are in danger of having no business in a little while. This seems to be the note sounded everywhere. Will you all join to help us?

The association is asking that each minister, and all church leaders do their very best to make the services of the day all that is posible. Keep out all sectarianism, and preach and teach the gospel of the grace of Christ just as nearly as you can as you believe He would do if He stood in person in your place of service.

Sincerely,
JOS. M JOHNSON,
President Ministerial Association.

NATIVE SONS AID DIAMOND JUBILEE

Endorsement of the proposed Diamond Jubilee to be held here in June 1934 in celebration of Oregon's seventy-fifth birthday by the Native Sons and Daughters of Oregon was reported today by the local chamber of commerce. A letter announcing endorsement by this well known organization of pioneers was received this morning and in it the Native Sons and Daughters promise they will give the celebration their support 100 per cent, as well as their official endorsement.

Willing cooperation in the observance is volunteered and every possible aid to make it a statewide success. The letter is signed by John J. McCall, secretary, of Portland.

The same organization sponsored the jubilee celebration held in observance of the seventy-fifth constitutional convention in Oregon.

ROTARIANS ENJOY CHRISTMAS PARTY

A large number of Rotarians and guests enjoyed the annual Christmas party of the local Rotary club at the Hotel Medford Tuesday noon. There was a splendid program of Christmas music and a special menu provided by Rotarian Emil Mohr for the occasion. Each Rotarian brought a gift for a small child and these were turned over to the "Women of Rotary" for distribution.

The program which was in charge of Dr. William Holt was opened with an invocation by Rev. Wm. Baird followed by a musical program presented by the double mixed quartet from the Presbyterian church. Selections from the cantata "The Incarnation" were given as well as a soprano solo by Maurine Duncan. A short talk on the real meaning of Christmas by Rotarian William Holt concluded the program.

Guests included the following members of the vocal ensemble: Elsie Carleton Strang, Maurine Duncan, Nora Howell, Jean McAllister, Dr. William Holt, K. G. Denman, P. L. Strang and L. F. Kuenhle and Dorothy Reynolds, accompanist. Other guests were the Misses Doris Patton, Molly Brown, Alice Prock and Margaret Warner and Dr. Walter Kresse.

Visiting Rotarians included Jack Tubin of Roseburg and C. A. Duncan of Klamath Falls.
