

WIFE DISCOVERS SUDDEN END ON RETURNING HOME

(Continued from Page One)

which were revealed in the naval oil leases, the justice department and the office of the custodian of alien property.

With severity and calmness he rode out these storms and meanwhile instituted a policy of governmental economy and mutual helpfulness in assisting Europe to work out its post-war problems.

The manner of his leaving the presidency aroused a national interest comparable with that of his induction into that office by his father in a lamp-lit room of the latter's Vermont farm home.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge on the afternoon of the inauguration of Herbert Hoover, his successor, left Washington for their old home in Northampton, Mass., to occupy the same modest house where they started life in 1895.

As early as the spring of 1927 there was widespread opinion that if Mr. Coolidge wished to be re-elected he had only to indicate it. By his own confession, this view was shared by Mr. Coolidge himself, regardless of the popular tradition that a president must retire after his second term.

After a magazine article published after his retirement, Mr. Coolidge declared he wanted to retire for several reasons, which he proceeded to enumerate.

"It is hazardous," he wrote, "to attempt what we feel is beyond our strength."

In addition, he considered it impossible for one man to serve successfully in the presidency for more than eight years as a review of the careers of those who had served two full terms had shown him that the latter part of their tenure of office was devoid of constructive accomplishments.

The nation was startled when on August 2, 1927, the president issued his famous statement: "I do not choose to run for president in 1928."

It was interpreted variously throughout the country. Many saw in it a sincere wish for retirement, but still a willingness to accept the nomination should an insistent demand arise. Others looked upon it as a final decision that he would not be a candidate for re-election.

This confusion was clarified by Mr. Coolidge in an address before the Republican national committee the following December. In six crisp sentences which were added at the last minute to a prepared speech the president declared that he had "eliminated" himself entirely from the presidential race and advised the party to continue "the serious task of selecting another candidate."

This decision, he asserted, "must be respected." But Mr. Coolidge did not stop there. When the Republican National Convention met at Kansas City in June, 1928, he dispatched his secretary, Everett Sanders, to the session with instructions "to notify several leaders of the state delegations not to vote" for him.

"Had I not done so," he said in his magazine writings, "I am told I should have been nominated." Mr. Coolidge is on record as having said that he had never formulated in his own mind what his attitude would have been had he been nominated.

"But I was determined," he added, "not to have that contingency arise." One of the major issues of that convention had been a principal subject of contention during the latter part of the Coolidge administration and one that the president had teased squarely into the center of the presidential campaign. It was farm relief.

Signs of unrest in the farming sections of the middle west were apparent when Mr. Coolidge took office. The farmers of that section were confronted with a serious depression and called upon the federal government for help in finding a way out.

Their spokesmen in congress clamored for legislation and the passage of a measure which Mr. Coolidge felt he could not support. That was the original McNary-Haugen bill, containing the famous and much discussed equalization fee provision.

Urging the development of co-operative marketing organizations as the best solution for the depression, Mr. Coolidge declared he must oppose any form of price fixing, either direct or indirect, and called for the measure's defeat. It was passed twice by congress and on each occasion it received a presidential veto. With the second veto the president sent to congress a scathing message in which he termed the measure "economic folly."

The Coolidge administration was characterized by peaceful relations with the rest of the world and attempts by the president to make that peace a lasting one. Early in 1927 he asked the principal naval powers to meet for a discussion of the limitation of auxiliary vessels of war, to supplant the Washington treaty of 1921 which applied only to capital ships.

Japan and Great Britain accepted and representatives of the three nations gathered at Geneva. It has been said that the conference was not preceded by a sufficient amount of preliminary consideration of technical methods of disarmament, but at any rate, irreconcilable differences of opinion arising from the widely varied needs of the United States and England caused the conference to end in a deadlock that continued to the end of the Coolidge administration. Mr. Coolidge also sought to preserve peace through the Kellogg multilateral treaty for the renunciation of war, which he declared the most important subject to be discussed by the senate during his time in the White House. In spite of determined opposition from a group of senators, who regarded the act as an "entangling alliance," and one destined to lead eventually to membership in the League of Nations, the pact was formally ratified by an overwhelming vote.

The president also was of the opinion that peace could be preserved through the maintenance of a strong national defense and he was a consistent advocate of a large, but non-competitive navy. In the last year of his administration he vigorously endorsed a measure authorizing the construction of 13 new 10,000-ton cruisers and a 16,000-ton aircraft carrier. Although the bill encountered stiff opposition it finally was approved by congress.

Another major Coolidge policy was that of reduction of the high tax schedules that came with the war. Three cuts were effected during his administration, which relieved thousands of citizens of the burden of a federal levy, in addition to sharply decreasing the amounts paid into the government by the large corporations and big business generally.

Long before he retired from office, Mr. Coolidge had made it his business to make professional and business connections at the expiration of his term, but consistently declined to entertain any of them. After he returned to Northampton he engaged in literary work temporarily, writing for magazines the story of his administration and an autobiography. About two months after leaving the White House he made his first business connection when he accepted election as a member of the board of directors of the New York Life Insurance company. He was chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France.

Calvin Coolidge was born on Independence Day, July 4, 1897, in Plymouth, a country village in the Vermont hills, the son of John C. and Victoria Moor Coolidge. His father was descended from John and Mary Coolidge, who had settled in Watertown, Mass., about 1830, and his ancestry ran through a long line of farmers who lived in Massachusetts until his great-grandfather moved into Vermont. His father was the village storekeeper as well as a farmer, and the son had a double training under his father's care, plowing and digging in the fields, and selling and figuring behind the counter. Here were developed in him the industry, frugality and self-reliance which shaped the course of his life. His mother died when he was 13 and four years later he lost his only sister, but a warm bond of sympathy developed between him and his step-mother.

Between "chores" on the farm and in the store, the future president attended the ungraded school at Plymouth, a single room with a wood stove. Afterward he attended the Black River Academy at Ludlow and the academy at St. Johnsbury before going to Amherst college. He was a keen student, but only in a modest way did he enter into the activities of college life.

During his senior year, in open competition with students of all American colleges, he won the first prize, a gold medal, for the best essay on the causes of the Revolutionary war. He was graduated in 1899, with the degree of A. B., and at the commencement was given an oration. He had money enough to go through law school that fact might have changed his whole career. As it was he moved across the Connecticut river to the nearby town of Northampton, Mass., and found a position in the law office of Hammond and Field. Within 20 months he was admitted to the bar and began practice.

Mr. Coolidge never had time to prove to the world whether he would have made a great lawyer, for he was drawn almost immediately into politics and with few intervals that thereafter was his life work.

On October 4, 1905, Mr. Coolidge married Miss Grace A. Goodhue of Burlington, Vermont, making a home for his bride in a two-family house in Northampton. They continued to occupy that until Mr. Coolidge became vice-president and returned to it at the conclusion of his services as president. They had two sons, John and Calvin, Jr. The latter's death which occurred after a brief illness during the summer of 1924 was the first of two bereavements in Mr. Coolidge's family during his occupancy of the White House. Early in 1926 his father died at his Vermont home, while his son was speeding from Washington to his bedside.

Katherine Stang to Have Headquarters Dance Studios Here

Katherine Stang, who has been conducting a dance studio in Eugene for some time, announced today that she has closed her office there and will hereafter make her headquarters at Medford in the Hotel Holland, where she has established the Kay Kestle Kiddies' dance studio.

Mrs. Stang's season opens January 7, her schedule shows, with the following class arrangements: 9:30 a. m., rhythmic class for children 3 to 5 years; 10:15 a. m., tap acrobats for children from 6 to 10 years; 11:15 a. m., tap acrobats for students over 10; and 7:30 p. m., junior high and high school ballroom.

TEXACO DEFEATS BT. FALLS 58-25

The Texaco All-Stars defeated the Blue Falls team with a score of 58 to 25 last night when the two basketball teams met in the lumber town.

Swanson, Lang and Harrington starred for Texaco, while Poole made most of the losers' points, according to sport talk here today. A large and enthusiastic crowd of fans cheered the game.

Society and Clubs Edited by Eva Nealon

Glenn Concert Well Attended. The concert presented by Medford Glenn last night at the Bivoli in Grants Pass was attended by a large and appreciative audience. About 42 singers made the journey to the neighboring city with their director, James Stevens and accompanist, Sebastian Apollo.

Numbers were from the concert program presented here in the first formal appearance. They met with the same high wave of approval in Grants Pass as was accorded the construction of 13 new 10,000-ton cruisers and a 16,000-ton aircraft carrier. Although the bill encountered stiff opposition it finally was approved by congress.

Another major Coolidge policy was that of reduction of the high tax schedules that came with the war. Three cuts were effected during his administration, which relieved thousands of citizens of the burden of a federal levy, in addition to sharply decreasing the amounts paid into the government by the large corporations and big business generally.

Long before he retired from office, Mr. Coolidge had made it his business to make professional and business connections at the expiration of his term, but consistently declined to entertain any of them. After he returned to Northampton he engaged in literary work temporarily, writing for magazines the story of his administration and an autobiography.

As early as the spring of 1927 there was widespread opinion that if Mr. Coolidge wished to be re-elected he had only to indicate it. By his own confession, this view was shared by Mr. Coolidge himself, regardless of the popular tradition that a president must retire after his second term.

After a magazine article published after his retirement, Mr. Coolidge declared he wanted to retire for several reasons, which he proceeded to enumerate.

"It is hazardous," he wrote, "to attempt what we feel is beyond our strength."

In addition, he considered it impossible for one man to serve successfully in the presidency for more than eight years as a review of the careers of those who had served two full terms had shown him that the latter part of their tenure of office was devoid of constructive accomplishments.

The nation was startled when on August 2, 1927, the president issued his famous statement: "I do not choose to run for president in 1928."

It was interpreted variously throughout the country. Many saw in it a sincere wish for retirement, but still a willingness to accept the nomination should an insistent demand arise. Others looked upon it as a final decision that he would not be a candidate for re-election.

This confusion was clarified by Mr. Coolidge in an address before the Republican national committee the following December. In six crisp sentences which were added at the last minute to a prepared speech the president declared that he had "eliminated" himself entirely from the presidential race and advised the party to continue "the serious task of selecting another candidate."

This decision, he asserted, "must be respected." But Mr. Coolidge did not stop there. When the Republican National Convention met at Kansas City in June, 1928, he dispatched his secretary, Everett Sanders, to the session with instructions "to notify several leaders of the state delegations not to vote" for him.

"Had I not done so," he said in his magazine writings, "I am told I should have been nominated." Mr. Coolidge is on record as having said that he had never formulated in his own mind what his attitude would have been had he been nominated.

"But I was determined," he added, "not to have that contingency arise." One of the major issues of that convention had been a principal subject of contention during the latter part of the Coolidge administration and one that the president had teased squarely into the center of the presidential campaign. It was farm relief.

Signs of unrest in the farming sections of the middle west were apparent when Mr. Coolidge took office. The farmers of that section were confronted with a serious depression and called upon the federal government for help in finding a way out.

Their spokesmen in congress clamored for legislation and the passage of a measure which Mr. Coolidge felt he could not support. That was the original McNary-Haugen bill, containing the famous and much discussed equalization fee provision.

Urging the development of co-operative marketing organizations as the best solution for the depression, Mr. Coolidge declared he must oppose any form of price fixing, either direct or indirect, and called for the measure's defeat. It was passed twice by congress and on each occasion it received a presidential veto. With the second veto the president sent to congress a scathing message in which he termed the measure "economic folly."

The Coolidge administration was characterized by peaceful relations with the rest of the world and attempts by the president to make that peace a lasting one. Early in 1927 he asked the principal naval powers to meet for a discussion of the limitation of auxiliary vessels of war, to supplant the Washington treaty of 1921 which applied only to capital ships.

Japan and Great Britain accepted and representatives of the three nations gathered at Geneva. It has been said that the conference was not preceded by a sufficient amount of preliminary consideration of technical methods of disarmament, but at any rate, irreconcilable differences of opinion arising from the widely varied needs of the United States and England caused the conference to end in a deadlock that

Rebekahs Install New Officers

Olive Rebekah lodge held a regular meeting Monday evening and installed the following officers: Noble grand, Ethel Higgenbottom; vice grand, Lucretia Whitlock; recording secretary, Mary Wiley; financial secretary, Maud Stickle; treasurer, Carrie Rickert; chaplain, Beale Thompson; conductor, Ethel Humphries; warden, Beatrice Stubbfield; B. S. N. G., Ella Rogers; L. S. N. G., Edith Prescott; R. S. V. G., Lily Clark; L. S. V. G., Ella Gould; outside guard, Nellie Gibson; outside guardian, Elsie Mallard; musician, Margery Pearson. Carrie McDannel was re-elected degree staff captain. Trustees elected were Grace Hamlin, Ethyl Weed and Anna Bateman.

The Past Noble Grand club served refreshments, Josephine Hall is chairman of the committee.

The spirited numbers, sung by the splendidly blended voices under the inspiration of Mr. Stevens, are particularly appropriate when "all the world is waiting" for something cheering. There has always been the answer to this need, so organization of Medford's male chorus is greeted by many folk in the valley as one of the finest things growing out of the year 1932.

Edison Marshall Honor Guest. Mr. and Mrs. Vern Marshall of 938 South Holly street entertained last evening at their home honoring their house guest, Mr. Marshall's brother, Edison Marshall, prominent explorer and author, who is in the valley for a few days.

Guests of the Marshalls were Mr. and Mrs. V. E. O'Neill of Klamath Falls and Mrs. Don Colvig and sons, Richard and David of Weed. Mrs. G. E. Marshall and Mr. and Mrs. Amos Turnbow of Medford. Mrs. O'Neill and Mrs. Colvig are sisters of the Marshalls.

H. T. Hubbard Honored at Surprise Party. Mr. H. T. Hubbard was honor guest last evening at a no-host dinner and bridge party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Reames, the affair being planned as a surprise on the occasion of his birthday. Places were arranged for 18 at dinner, which followed bridge.

Prizes at cards were awarded Mrs. H. T. Hubbard, Mrs. John Wilkinson and Mrs. Raymond Mikache.

Dr. Gilliland, Host to Dental Society. Dr. D. J. Gilliland of Grants Pass was host Monday evening at turkey dinner to members of the Southern Oregon Dental society. Following dinner a paper was read by Dr. B. R. Elliott of this city and a general social time enjoyed.

Dentists of Grants Pass, Ashland and Medford were in attendance.

Contract Club Meets With Mrs. Harding. Mrs. B. G. Harding was hostess this afternoon to the Thursday contract club at dinner bridge. There were two tables in play and a very pleasant afternoon enjoyed.

Pan Hellenic Plans Saturday Dessert Bridge. Dessert bridge will be enjoyed by members of Pan Hellenic Saturday afternoon at the C. A. Whitlock home, 30 Ross Court. Guests are asked to arrive at 1:30 o'clock. Hostesses for the occasion will be Mrs. Frank Peri, Mrs. Aubrey Dean and Mrs. Chester Hubbard.

Phonix Thimble Club of Oak Circle, No. 242, will meet at the home of Mrs. John Roberts on Friday afternoon of this week. Miss Lulu Roberts will assist Mrs. Roberts with entertaining. All members are urged to be present.

Mrs. Webber and Son Visit Here. Mrs. Chas. Webber and daughter of Portland were guests here over the holidays of Mrs. Webber's parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Gillis. They left yesterday for their home.

Stop Your Cold Quickly. Don't let a cold keep you out of the fun. Try this new liquid cold prescription. Many say it brings relief in 30 minutes. That's because the system absorbs it almost instantly. Liquocold is good for children too! It's perfect and easy to take. Get a box at your drugist today—have it on hand.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Most girls in their teens need a tonic and regulator. Give your daughter Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for the next few months. Teach her how to guard her health at this critical time. When she is a happy, healthy wife and mother she will thank you. Sold at all good drug stores.

REPORT OF CONDITION OF THE Farmers & Fruitgrowers Bank at Medford, County of Jackson, Oregon, at close of business Dec. 31, 1932.

Table with columns: RESOURCES, LIABILITIES, Total. Values include Loans and discounts, Bonds, Securities, etc., U. S. Gov't Bonds, Warrants, Bank deposits, Furniture and fixtures, Real estate owned, Cash, Due from banks and cash items, Deficit in earnings, Other resources, Capital stock paid in, Surplus, Undivided profits-net, Reserve, Due to banks, Demand deposits, Time certificates, Savings deposits, Bills payable and rediscounts, Other liabilities.

State of Oregon, County of Jackson, ss: I, F. E. Wahl, cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. F. E. WAHL, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 4th day of January, 1933. MYRTLE PANKEY, Notary Public for Oregon. My commission expires January 23, 1935. Correct-Attest: C. E. Gates, Gus Newbury, Delroy Getchell, Directors.

FLAMES DESTROY HUGE DAIRY BARN BEYOND ASHLAND

In a spectacular fire early last night viewed by many residents of the valley, the famous Balfour-Guthrie dairy barn, just south of Ashland, one of the largest in the state, was destroyed. Flames were still licking the remains of the $30,000 construction today. Origin of the fire which threatened to spread to two neighboring farms, was reported unknown in Ashland today, where many rumors of incendiarism were being investigated.

The barn was recently purchased by George High at public auction and insurance on the building was cancelled yesterday, because of the fact that it was located outside the city limits, and without fire protection. It was not being operated at the time by the owner. Seventy-five tons of hay, a modern milking machine, stanchions and a complete supply of all equipment, necessary to the modern operation of the dairy industry, were destroyed in the flames, which had gutted the entire west end of the building when discovered by Stanley Page, resident of the district. There were fortunately no cows or other stock occupying the building at the time.

The Ashland fire department was called and sent a chemical truck to the scene to prevent spread of the conflagration to the Butler-Walker and George Andrews ranches.

Crowds from Ashland and Medford were drawn to the scene by the flames, which lighted the whole south end of the county. The stanchions and other metal equipment added beauty to the scene, turning many colors under the influence of the intense heat.

The barn was the largest structure of its kind in southern Oregon and was built in 1929 by the Balfour-Guthrie interests at a cost in excess of $20,000.

BIRTHS

Born to Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Hughes a daughter, weighing eight pounds, at the Community hospital today.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Furry of Phoenix are the parents of a son, weighing 8 1/2 pounds, born today at the Purucker maternity home.

Be correctly corrected. Prices $5.75-$7.75 and up. ETHELWYN B. KOPPMANN, Sixth and Holly.

LAMKIN, BURSSELL ARREST ORDERED BY COUNTY JUDGE

The 1932 budget. It will be the contention of the former officials that their actions were valid and legal, made in accordance with Oregon law, and that the fact that the minutes of the proceedings were not spread on the journal in course of business, until two days later, in no way affects the legality of the Nealon appointment.

The decision Oats with County Judge Fehl, and friends of the county officials indicated that an appeal to the higher courts would be taken in the event of an adverse decision.

Court was called to order shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, with County Judge Fehl and Commissioner Ralph Billings present. Shortly thereafter, Commissioner Nealon arrived. Commissioner Nealon and Judge Fehl shook hands cordially and exchanged a pleasanter.

At the opening of court, Attorney M. G. Williams arose and announced that he was appearing as "a friend of the court." Commissioner Billings interrupted the attorney to ask: "Does your appearing as a friend of the court obligate the county in any way—that is, as far as remuneration or anything like that is concerned?" "Absolutely not," replied Attorney Williams.

The proceedings were then delayed until noon, due to Attorney Briggs preparing papers.

Nealon in Grand Jury. Commissioner Nealon was called before the grand jury. Judge Fehl and Commissioner Billings testified before it yesterday afternoon.

In the meantime, Judge Fehl and Commissioner Billings transacted county business, one matter being the naming of viewers for the Cinnabar road.

Pewer people gathered in the courthouse this morning than yesterday, and there was ample signs that the political storm that broke Wednesday was beginning to subside.

The issuance of the bench warrants came late Wednesday afternoon, following the organizing of the county court, with Commissioners Billings and Nealon functioning. Judge Fehl left the room. The district attorney ruled that the appointment of Nealon was valid, and that two members of the county court could transact county business.

The issue will now mark time, pending an opinion by the attorney-general on the legality of Nealon's appointment. This is expected sooner than ordinarily.

WEED TO BATTLE TIGERS HERE ON SATURDAY NIGHT

A fast and a close game is forecast for Medford fans Saturday night, when the Weed high school team will meet the Tigers on the Medford high school floor. The main game will start at 8 o'clock with a preliminary scheduled for 6 o'clock between the Phoenix high school and the Tiger Cubs.

Medford's main string is in fair condition and putting forth some fine plays according to the dope outlined. Bill Lewman is gradually working upward as a forward and Red Scheel is in top form. Little information can be obtained on the northern Californians, but a lot of good material is expected to invade this city Saturday and the Tigers are prepared to meet whatever the Golden State puts forth.

Fender and body repairing. Prices right. Bill Sheet Metal Works.

STAINLESS Same formula, same price. In original form, too, if you prefer 20¢ for COLDS VICKS VAPOR 21¢ OVER 17 MILLION JARS USED YEARLY

REPORT OF CONDITION OF THE First National Bank Of Medford, in the state of Oregon, at the close of business on Dec. 31, 1932.

Table with columns: RESOURCES, LIABILITIES, Total. Values include Loans and discounts, Overdrafts, United States Government securities owned, Other bonds, stocks, and securities owned, Banking house, Furniture and fixtures, Reserve with Federal Reserve Bank, Cash and due from banks, Outside checks and other cash items, Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer and due from U. S. Treasurer.

State of Oregon, County of Jackson, ss: I, Ora Crawford, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. ORA CRAWFORD, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 5th day of January, 1933. ROBERT C. HART, Notary Public for Oregon. My commission expires June 7, 1933. Correct-Attest: B. E. Harder, H. S. Deuel, James Owens, Directors.

Lindy's Milk Depot 532 EAST MAIN ST. GRADE A MILK 20c gallon BRING YOUR CONTAINERS All milk furnished by L. H. Linville, W. C. Blankenship and Leota Thompson Dairies. Cows 100 percent Tubercular and Abortive Tested

CLINE Piano Factory Warerooms Wholesale and Retail MAIN and RIVERSIDE MEDFORD, OREGON OPEN EVENINGS NEW BABY GRANDS Built to Sell at $600 $287 DELIVERED $3 DOWN DELIVERS ANY PIANO DOUBLE TRADE IN ALLOWANCE FOR THE OLD UPRIGHT PIANO OR PLAYER, radio, phonograph or other musical instruments in exchange as part payment. Take 3 Years To Pay DAINTY NEW SMALL UPRIGHT PIANOS Regular $295 value. $159 DELIVERED Come in and see these tiny new uprights, brand new with full keyboard, the size for the apartment or studio. Trade in the old piano then easy terms. PAY $1.50 A WEEK FREE MUSIC LESSONS A recent census shows that students of school age taking music with their other studies average 24 percent better grades than those without musical training. Our FREE music lesson certificate with every piano sold in this sale, new or used, allows you to select any competent teacher you prefer. Better Hurry --- Make Your Selection Now EASY TERMS $1 WEEK $49 BEAUTIFUL TONE USED PLAYER PIANOS UNUSUALLY FINE USED UPRIGHT PIANOS Watch Our Windows For Bargains Not Advertised OPEN EVENINGS During Sale Main and Riverside Phone 426 Medford, Oregon Largest Exclusive Piano Distributors on the West Coast CALL, PHONE OR WRITE FOR COMPLETE BARGAIN LIST

CLINE Factory Distributor-to-Home PIANO SALE Buy Your Piano Direct--Save the Ordinary Dealer or Agents Profit One Week Only--Come Bring the Family NEW BABY GRANDS Built to Sell at $600 $287 DELIVERED $3 DOWN DELIVERS ANY PIANO DOUBLE TRADE IN ALLOWANCE FOR THE OLD UPRIGHT PIANO OR PLAYER, radio, phonograph or other musical instruments in exchange as part payment. Take 3 Years To Pay DAINTY NEW SMALL UPRIGHT PIANOS Regular $295 value. $159 DELIVERED Come in and see these tiny new uprights, brand new with full keyboard, the size for the apartment or studio. Trade in the old piano then easy terms. PAY $1.50 A WEEK FREE MUSIC LESSONS A recent census shows that students of school age taking music with their other studies average 24 percent better grades than those without musical training. Our FREE music lesson certificate with every piano sold in this sale, new or used, allows you to select any competent teacher you prefer. Better Hurry --- Make Your Selection Now EASY TERMS $1 WEEK $49 BEAUTIFUL TONE USED PLAYER PIANOS UNUSUALLY FINE USED UPRIGHT PIANOS Watch Our Windows For Bargains Not Advertised OPEN EVENINGS During Sale Main and Riverside Phone 426 Medford, Oregon Largest Exclusive Piano Distributors on the West Coast CALL, PHONE OR WRITE FOR COMPLETE BARGAIN LIST