Roadside Beautification

Interests Garden Club
The Medford Garden club, in meeting last night, elected officers for the coming year and initiated an extensive program for preservation of southern Oregon's trees and flowers by joining the Oregon Council for Protection of Roadside Beauty. The local club will be a charter member of the state organization.

Mrs. A. E. Beames, who has so successfully led the club to new achievements during the past year, was re-elected president. Other officers chosen for the new year were: Mrs. T. W. Miles, vice-president; Mrs. E. W. Wilson, secretary; Mrs. Ralph Woodford, treasurer, and Mrs. L. E. Williams, new member of the board.

The roadside beautification work will be the major project of the coming year. Mrs. Beames stated, and asked the hearty cooperation of the southern Oregon public in an intensive campaign to conserve the natural beauty of this region.

Thousands of Oregon trees are hauled out of this section to California each holiday season. It was pointed out, and wild flowers are constantly being uprooted and moved both by flower culturists of other sections and by careless individuals with no particular aim in view.

Danger of depleting the forests, and of mutilating the garden of wild flowers, nature's greatest gift to Oregon, was emphasized as reason for an immediate drive to cultivate within in the state appreciation of its greatest assets.

There are few states in the union which can boast of such natural beauty, and not one whose forests compare with Oregon's, where there remain many almost virgin regions, unspoiled by civilization but accessible to persons who are willing to make an extra effort to see trees and flowers growing as nature wished them to grow, not according to the design of man.

The wild flowers within the forest and along the southern Oregon roadsides are as important as the trees. It was also pointed out by the Garden club members, and every possible effort will be made by the local organization to aid in keeping Oregon the wonderland of east and west.

The recently organized state council is headed by Mrs. Jessie M. Honeyman of Eugene, and many other prominent known persons in other sections of the state are members of the board.

Following the discussion last night of roadside beautification, the Garden club members turned to seed catalogs and magazines and the remainder of the evening was devoted to plans for spring gardens and a general social time.
