HUNGER HIKERS PLEAD FOR AID BEFORE SOLONS

The dirt farmer, and his present futile struggle for existence. His application on behalf of the farmer, besides being the best organized and logical of the talks, reached the most consistent heights of eloquence.

As he painted the "class of Americans who have spent their lives "rubbing out the stumps and building rail fences" there were more than one member of the agricultural committee whose eyes began to moisten.

Looking over the shoulders of some of the unshaven boys during the hearing, were four smoothly finished faces from Medford. They were George Porter, W. M. Clemenson, S. A. Kroschel and Frank Farrell, who upon being interviewed, denied having consciously joined the hunger marchers to the capitol city.

The leader of this band of 300 marchers appeared to be scarcely out of his 20s. Black hair, black eyes with a glint of bitterness in their expression, Fred Walker is a fluent and dynamic speaker, and dominated the consciousness of that entire assembly as he presented a kaleidoscopic view of the wants of his organization.

He was followed by other speakers from the unemployed ranks, representing the separate fields from which they were recruited, former industrial workers, farmers, veterans and others.

A young girl, introduced as spokesman from the Young Girls' Communist group, made a hectic plea on behalf of "the youth of the land," those, whom she explained, were trained for jobs that do not exist.

These, she declared, were forced into the bread lines, the "best incubator for crime in the land."

But most dramatic of all was the talk of Floyd Ramp, bushy-haired little farmer from Roseburg, who pictured the lonely, isolated misery of

SWITCH IN DATES AND LEADERSHIP BRING CONFUSION

The official count and records of the clerk's office show that Clerk Carter received 8692 votes at the last election. Commissioner Billings received 6777 votes, County Judge Pehl 5741 votes, and District Attorney Coddin 5141 votes.

Lowell Zundell, independent candidate for sheriff at the general election, reported as enlisting officer for the "resignation march" told friends yesterday that he had nothing to do with the agitation. Zundell was in the city all day.

May Submit Legality A proposition to have the question of the legality of Commissioner Nealon's appointment referred direct to the state supreme court, by stipulation will probably be broached to the county court, as the quickest and best means of settling the legal question around which the political storm rages.

The attorney-general in an opinion Monday held that the appointment was legal and valid, and the old county court was within its rights in making the appointment, and signing the court journal three days later.

The attorney-general's opinion has been vigorously questioned. The referring of the question to the supreme court is a matter of agreement, the county paying the expenses, it was said.

The outstanding and pronounced sentiment today throughout the county was for political peace, without delay.
