on the literary map. Most of these letters have found a place in the senatorial waste basket. Today, he passed on to a stenographer by the same name who happened to be interested.

Life is sometimes a basket of fish. This was the opinion expressed by Representative East Day of Jackson county, as he sniffed the contents of a container carelessly left on his legislative desk for an hour or so today. Whether this was a subtle reminder of his duties on the game committee by a river closing lobbyist or not, Mr. Day wouldn't venture to guess. The basket was removed by its mysterious owner during a recess.

Charged With Murder

There is nothing particularly humorous about crabs, human or marine. But any piece of legislation concerning them brings a chuckle from house or senate members. Crabs and snickers intermingled yesterday as a bill prohibiting the catching of crabs under seven inches from point to point across the back, was introduced. The author of the bill thought it no laughing matter.

Power Law Defined

Machinery to carry out the provisions of the state development of hydroelectric power for which the voters of the state authorized bond issues at the last general election is set out in a bill by Representative John H. Lewis, of Multnomah county, and other members of the legislature. The measure is modeled after the Ontario, Canada, plan and follows its provisions exactly after some modification to meet the needs in Oregon. It provides for state development and transmission with municipal distribution on a cost basis and is designed to encourage industrial development. Its sponsors claim that power can be distributed to municipalities at an average rate of about one-fifth that now charged. Economy in the proposition lies in the transmission of the power through public ownership of the transmission lines and equipment.
