CRATERIAN HAS REDUCED PRICES

Fox Craterian movie fans will welcome the announcement today by James Carey, manager of that theater, that reduced prices are now effective.

This assures the same high-class, first-run attractions which are being featured by the Craterian at substantially lower prices, according to Mr. Carey. All Craterian seats will be priced at 15c for matinee showings, with the usual dime admission for kiddies. Evening prices will prevail on Sundays and holidays, according to the Craterian announcement.

Of added interest to Craterian patrons is Mr. Carey's announcement that outstanding features produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox, R. K. O., Paramount, Universal, Warner Bros. and Columbia have been booked with added popular Vitaphone and educational features in store for southern Oregon cinema fans.

Included in the early attractions which have been secured by the Craterian management are: Norma Shearer and Clark Gable's new hit, "Strange Interlude"; Helen Hayes and Gary Cooper's dramatic masterpiece, "Farewell to Arms"; and Richard Dix' remarkable screen version of "Hell's Highway."

Tomorrow and Saturday the Craterian will show the season's outstanding mystery-comedy, "The Penguin Pool Murder," which includes in its excellent cast such laugh-producing artists as Edna May Oliver, and James Gleason. In this rollicking mystery film Stuart Palmer's tale is adroitly manipulated to place suspicion on everyone, including Miss Withers, whose hat pin is the murder weapon. Investigation further involves the aquarium director, whom Parker had sold out in the stock market; Mrs. Parker, and her lover, who had planned to elope, and a pickpocket, found in possession of the murdered man's watch.

Miss Oliver's convincing performance neatly couples humor and drama. With James Gleason as Inspector Piper, she promotes grand hilarity. Mae Clarke sympathetically portrays a harassed wife, and Donald Cook makes a likeable lover.
