

SECOND SHOWING LEGION'S COMEDY ADDS TO PRAISE

Playing to a larger audience than on the first night, the cast of "Jim's Girl," comedy-drama offered under auspices of the Medford post of the American Legion, put increased enthusiasm into the play last night and held the crowd at the Craterian intoxicated with spontaneous glee from first to last curtain.

Miss Ethel Chord, as Madelon Pons, the French war bride-to-be, gave the comedy-drama the sweetness and romance expected of "Jim's Girl," playing the role in a natural and decidedly pleasing manner, adopting the foreign accent without any obvious effort. Her "Mon Cher" and "beaucoup" were made the more convincing by the own pettiness.

Mrs. I. E. Schuler, as mother of Jim, "Mrs. Manley," gave a splendid interpretation of a woman torn between joy and anxiety, dominated by the strong will of Judge Penton, a type which arises during most wars, to empty the purses of unsuspecting widows. The latter was well portrayed by Don Newbury, who appeared with all the seriousness his face might assume in a murder trial, speaking very naturally in legal terms which were made more emphatic by silk hat and swallowtailed coat, marking him definitely the "town's boss."

Bob Nelson lost all hint of youthfulness playing the role of "General Bang," Civil war veteran afflicted with rheumatism and a few other things, which did not dampen his Republican ardor. His constant row with "Jonah Jones, Democrat," played by Robert Lorraine, director of the show, furnished a perpetual incentive for laughter.

A queer combination of sweetness and flapperism was splendidly accomplished by Nell Green as "Molly Bawn," who vied with the little French girl for honors in the masculine hearts.

Gene Wright as "Marshall Brady," did a good job of assuming governmental importance and appeared at ease in all situations.

Adra Edwards as the flashy "Sophia Higgins," with a passion for strawberry soclala, used her red hair to the greatest advantage, giving a realistic interpretation of the small town belle, entranced with uniforms.

Max Carter, as Jim, the hero of the play, was sufficiently handsome in uniform and civilian togs to demand the rights of hero, and his talk with "Steve U. Capers," Max Pierce, rang true to buddy boys. Pierce also gave a natural performance, spicing the play with the indifferent banter which grew out of the war.

Bob Carter as "Sport Penton," appeared the very good alderman, and Don Root as "Jem," came in at the proper time with his fish.

Round-Toed Shoe Revival Predicted In Fashion Of 1933

ST. LOUIS, (AP)—A revival of round-toed footwear for milady is predicted as one of 1933's fashion innovations by W. G. Hunt, designer for a large St. Louis shoe company.

Broad-strap sandals and ties in pigskin will feature the new "blunt" models, he prophesies, with even high-heeled sandals and pumps influenced by the change.

Hunt doesn't expect the round toe to shove the narrow toe into the background, however, at least not this year.

CERMACK MAKING STUBBORN BATTLE FOR HOLD ON LIFE

ably will rest with the outcome of the condition of Cermack and Mrs. Gull. Authorities have withheld charges in these cases indicating if either dies Zangara will be charged with murder.

Yesterday, Zangara was brought before the court after the murder attempt charges were drawn and Judge E. C. Collins informed him he had a right to counsel to represent him.

"I don't want anybody to help me," the little Italian shot back defiantly. "You are the judge and you can do what you want to do."

Denies Anarchy
Judge Collins, however, delayed arraignment so counsel could be selected.

"I am not an anarchist," said Zangara.

"I want to kill all presidents," he said. "In Italy, 10 years ago, I want to kill the king, but I cannot get to him. Sometimes I get bees pain in the stomach, too, and then I want to kill these presidents who oppress the working men."

He has no grudge against policemen, even when he has the stomachache, he said.

"I no care to kill police," said Zangara—was quite loquacious for a while yesterday—they work for leaving."

Thinks Presidents Idiots
Apparently, he thinks presidents and kings are men of leisure.

GRAND JURY GRIND CONTINUED TODAY

The grand jury continued its sessions today, with no signs of when it would make a report. The current grand jury will complete its term February 27, when a new grand jury will be drawn. A number of Ashland residents were scheduled to appear before the grand jury today. A number of Medford and valley residents were called as witnesses yesterday.

William T. Orieve of Prospect is foreman of the grand jury. Other members are H. O. Butterfield, Ashland; J. M. Hughes, Ashland; Kurt Jeschke, Medford; G. L. Knight, Medford; Mrs. Hamilton Patton, Medford, and Paul McCurley, Medford.

ELKS TO MARK 65TH BIRTHDAY

Announcement was made last night by J. F. Fiegel, exalted ruler of the Elks, that the Medford lodge would celebrate the 65th birthday of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, February 18th. A program of special interest to every Elk has been arranged and the exalted ruler especially invites and urges all Elks to be present, whether dues are paid up to date or not.

"This is one lodge session that should stand out in the memories of every Elk," continued Fiegel, "and should increase their pride in their membership in the order. I am counting on every member of the lodge to make this a real birthday party."
