

SONS WIN TWO FROM BEARCATS OF WILLAMETTE

The Sons rallied in the final half of their game last night with the Willamette University Bearcats to win 34-32 in the final seconds of play after having been completely outclassed in the first half. The score at the half was 10 to 10 in favor of the invading Bearcats.

ASHLAND, Ore., Feb. 26.—(AP)—Continuing to display the remarkable form that has characterized their play this season the Southern Oregon Normal basketball team defeated Willamette University, 38 to 37, here Friday night.

At the start of the last period the Sons had only a one-point margin at 23 to 22. But it was then that William Jones, Normal forward, instituted a scoring rally that won the game. He was high scorer with 13 points. Haiser, guard, was high for Willamette with 8 points.

RIFLE CLUB SHELLS AT OWN EXPENSE AS FEDERAL FUNDS CUT

Medford Rifle club members who plan to attend rifle practice Wednesday evening are requested to bring their own ammunition, as the club's supply is exhausted.

Due to reduced finances of the war department, the local club was issued only 7,000 rounds of .22 cal. ammunition for the winter shooting.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Score. Lists scores for various rifle club members.

RIFLE RANGE OPENING SCHEDULED FOR TODAY

This morning at 8:30 o'clock, the outdoor target season for the National Guard opens at their rifle range two miles east of Medford near the Hillcrest orchard. It was announced Saturday.

Broken windows glazed by Trowbridge Cabinet Works.

Flowers For Grandpa

Vivian Graham, favorite granddaughter of Mayor Anton Gerkak of Chicago, takes flowers to his hospital bedside in Miami, Fla. (Associated Press Photo)

INTRAMURAL HOOP TOURNEY IS NEAR END AT HI SCHOOL

Intramural basketball at Medford high school is now in the semi-final round, with the next week.

The Red Rats and the Gas House gang meet for the semi-finals of the winners and the Slaughter House five meets the winner of the Rinky Dink and Sidelinders game for the semi-finals in the consolation.

Following are the games played last week.

Table with 2 columns: Team Name, Score. Lists intramural basketball game results.

PHOENIX, BUTTE FALLS QUINTS WILL CLIMAX SEASON COMING WEEK

With nine conference wins to their credit, members of the Phoenix high school basketball team will enter competition with Butte Falls this week for the B-school championship of the district.

Central Point has suffered two defeats this season, while Phoenix has not lost a single game.

Lineups for the tilt were.

Central Pt. Grange Will Produce Play On Tuesday Eve.

Thursday evening, February 28th, "Friday for Luck" will be presented by the Central Point Grange in the grange hall in that town and the general public is invited.

The play will be given in competition with those of other clubs and granges in the county.

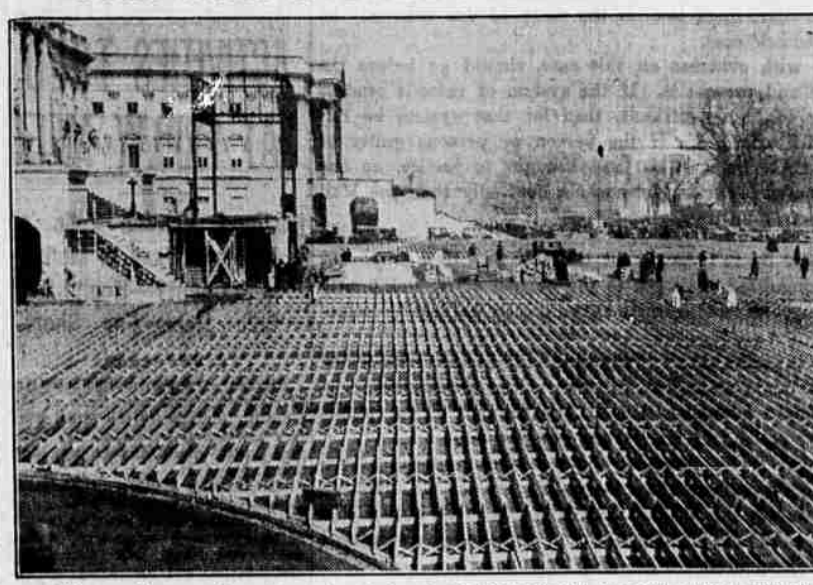

Phone 542. We'll haul away your refuse. City Sanitary Service.

Sleep in a Real Bed.... IN PORTLAND OREGON

HEATHMAN HOTELS

RUSH WORK ON STANDS FOR INAUGURATION

Citizens who come from far and wide to witness the inaugural ceremonies will occupy these seats which are being completed in front of the national capitol. In the background is the platform where Mr. Roosevelt will take the oath as President. (Associated Press Photo)

GRAND JURY SAYS DUE CAUTION NOT USED IN GUNPLAY

(Continued from Page One)

also widely used as "copy" in the fevered journalism that has kept the county in a turmoil for the past two years.

Only indictment found. The indictment returned at the sheriff's appearance, Goetschen and Smith, now residents of Portland, were brought here as witnesses.

SCHERMERHORN IS HELD IN SURPRISE MOVE BY OFFICERS

(Continued from Page One)

Arrested by Coroner. When this procedure was finished, Sheriff Schermerhorn was asked to step into Chief of Police Clatus McCredie's office.

The arrest took the sheriff by surprise. He was immediately placed in the city jail, in the city hall.

Breechen "Congress" Leader. T. L. Breechen was arrested in mid-afternoon when he came from Ashland for questioning.

The two youths held in custody, are said by authorities to have been steadily around the courthouse for the last six weeks, and were minor satellites of the "Good Government Congress," and regular attendants at meetings of that organization as "cheer leaders."

A hammer, thought to have been used in smashing the vault window, was found in the room occupied by the pair. The room was atop the courthouse.

Glenn New Arrival. Jailer Glenn is a comparative recent arrival in the valley. He formerly lived in Coos county. He was appointed by Sheriff Schermerhorn last January when he assumed office.

Sheriff Schermerhorn has been a resident of the county for more than 30 years, and is well-known among the older residents.

Evidence Valued. The district attorney's office, the state police, and city police last night declined to give any report on the evidence they have collected.

A number of matters were examined by the grand jury, since it started its session last October.

The theft and destruction of ballot boxes was discovered Tuesday morning at eight o'clock when Attorney Elton Watkins of Portland, Attorney Frank DeSousa of this city, counsel for Sheriff Schermerhorn, and Charles Fischer went to the courthouse first floor.

The trend of the times is to better value at a lower price. That speaks for Fortune Shoes — Genuine full grain calfskin — Prime oak bend backbone soles — genuine leather quarter linings — in black or brown, oxford or high shoes. All of this for — a better shoe at a lower price.

EVERY STYLE $3.50

The Toggery

FORTUNE SHOES

Hotel Maryland and BUNGALOWS Pasadena, California

A truly charming atmosphere in which to rest for a day, a week or to live and dream away the winter months.

For Booklet and New Low Rates Write to H. M. NICKERSON, MANAGER

Fingerprints Taken.

Tuesday morning the two unidentified youths were taken into custody. That afternoon a search of the court house furnace revealed that the ballots had been burned therein.

"Strange" Actions. Wednesday and Thursday evidence of a valuable nature poured upon the authorities, from people living across the street from the court house, and from outside spectators at the "Good Government Congress" Monday night.

Public Aroused. The news of the outrage against constituted authority shocked the county and aroused citizens of all classes, including many members of the "Good Government Congress."

Recount Delayed. The Jennings recount was first launched on December 3, but this was blocked when Sheriff Schermerhorn absented himself in northern California for nearly a month, and service of summons was impossible.

Theft Discovered. The theft was discovered Tuesday morning at eight o'clock when Attorney Elton Watkins of Portland, Attorney Frank DeSousa of this city, counsel for Sheriff Schermerhorn, and Charles Fischer went to the courthouse first floor.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

Don't Blame the Banker— when he won't lend you money

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

HOW THE BANK CONTRIBUTES TO COMMUNITY WELFARE

one or two men entered the vault, after the window was broken, and passed out the ballots, and they were then relayed to the furnace room, and burned. It is figured that some of the smaller ballot pouches were passed out unopened, carried to the furnace, and then rifled.

Public Aroused. The news of the outrage against constituted authority shocked the county and aroused citizens of all classes, including many members of the "Good Government Congress."

Recount Delayed. The Jennings recount was first launched on December 3, but this was blocked when Sheriff Schermerhorn absented himself in northern California for nearly a month, and service of summons was impossible.

Theft Discovered. The theft was discovered Tuesday morning at eight o'clock when Attorney Elton Watkins of Portland, Attorney Frank DeSousa of this city, counsel for Sheriff Schermerhorn, and Charles Fischer went to the courthouse first floor.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

The money the banker lends belongs to his depositors—he is simply custodian of that money. Therefore, when the banker insists upon guarantees that loans will be repaid promptly, he is simply safeguarding the "other fellow's" money exactly as you would want him to safeguard yours—were you the depositor instead of the prospective borrower.

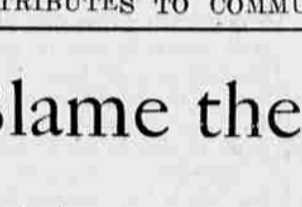

MAIL TRIBUNE

PHONE your want-ads

YOU have something to sell, trade or buy. Let our intelligent Want-ad takers help you word your message for best results.

You'll like this courteous service. Simply lift the receiver and ask for—

Phone 75

Phone 75