Comedy Team At Craterian

There seems to be something cockeyed in what Victor McLaglen and El Brendel are seeing through that party opened door. The scene is from "Hot Pepper," the new comedy from Fox depicting the further adventures of Flagg and Quirt.

A new Quirt and a new Flagg in gorgeous night club settings in which the colorful, vivacious Lupe Velez makes whoopee with Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen and El Brendel, are featured in "Hot Pepper," the new and uproarious comedy that opened at the Craterian theatre today.

Beautiful girls and snappy music add incidental entertainment in this fast-moving, uproarious offering, depicting the latest adventures of the fighting devil dogs who cast aside their Marine uniforms, appear in conventional evening clothes and ride in bar-equipped limousines.

As Quirt and Flagg, Lowe and McLaglen have become one of the most famous teams of the screen. They scored in "The Cock Eyed World," "What Price Glory" and "Women of All Nations."

STUDIO WILL GIVE FREE YO YO TOPS

Manager John Snyder of the Studio theatre announced today that the first hundred children attending the Saturday matinee will be given one of the new Yo-Yo tops. Besides the Wheeler and Woolsey comedy hit, "Caught Plastered," the Studio is featuring, tonight and tomorrow, the first chapter of "The Hurricane Express," a mystery thriller of the roaring rails, starring John Wayne, Shirley Grey and Tully Marshall.

SHRINERS ENJOY TALK BY JENKINS AT NOON SESSION

Government guarantee of deposits and the adoption of a plan restricting withdrawals were suggested as two important and necessary steps in the restoration of public confidence in banks, by Frank Jenkins, president of the Southern Oregon Newspapers, at a meeting today of the Medford Shrine Luncheon club. A group of 75 Shriners from various southern Oregon communities assembled in the basement banquet room of the Hotel Medford today to listen to Mr. Jenkins' intensely interesting address.

"In my opinion, neither the establishment of the Farm Board nor the Reconstruction Finance corporation accomplished the desired results in bringing about a return of normal conditions and the essential return of public confidence. Sweeping changes in banking must be effected to bring hoarded wealth again into circulation," Mr. Jenkins said.

The common belief that the present economic depression is more severe than those of the past was disproved by Mr. Jenkins, who devoted a portion of his address to a brief sketch of panics and depressions of the past century. Periods of rapid expansion and wild speculation have invariably resulted in economic reactions, every one of which teaches the American people new lessons, he said. The American people are, by nature, plungers and their industrial expansion and extensive speculation during the peak years of 128 and 129 have naturally resulted in the present economic conditions, according to Frank Jenkins, who explained that a remedy would be the slow but inevitable balance of production prices with the markets of raw materials.

"There is no such thing as over-production," Mr. Jenkins emphasized. "There will be an unlimited market for everything that can be produced if we can create a condition when the farmer and working man can receive a profit for his products in balance with other industries." Past depressions have left us wiser and it is a certainty that we shall profit by the present economic situation and build upon this added knowledge a new and more substantial prosperity for the future.

The regular meeting of Hillah temple at the Ashland Masonic hall occurs tonight, and Albert K. Cass, newly elected pontiate, will preside.

MEDFORD JOINS REST OF STATE CURTAILING COIN

MERCHANTS ASK CURB ON SALES

holiday to reopen after having been closed four months, banks in Bend, Medford and Astoria were closing, and one of two in Marshfield did not open.

At Salem legislators continued today the work that carried them far into the night on the "regulatory and stabilizing legislation" suggested by the governor. State officials and financiers willingly worked with the legislators in shaping the emergency measures. These were expected to be patterned after the Couzens national act, giving the comptroller of currency all the authority over national banks, which the states vest in their respective bank superintendents.

No Cause for Alarm.

"There is no cause for alarm, over the condition of Oregon banks," Superintendent Schramm declared.

Every bank in Portland today was open for limited operation and it was announced this policy would be continued Saturday. Similarly, banks throughout the state were permitting depositors to withdraw funds for necessary expenses, legitimate emergencies and payroll requirements.

The city of Portland met all payroll from local banks and business was conducted as usual at the Portland branch of the state tax commission office where state income tax returns were being filed and payment made. The office accepted checks dated March 6.

Banks Praised.

Appreciation of the service rendered by the banks in remaining open in the face of the holiday order was voted last night by leading retailers, wholesalers and jobbers who met to discuss the matter with Portland bank officials.

Unjustified public alarm was the chief danger seen in the present situation, they said. The merchants pledged themselves to combat this alarm to the best of their ability.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 3.—(AP)—Banks in eight far western states were closed or operating under restrictions today while general business carried on despite the handi-caps of approximately $3,000,000,000 in frozen deposits and legislators studied proposed relief measures.

"Bank holidays" proclaimed by governors prevailed in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico.

The various governors, following the lead of Governor James Rolph, Jr., of California, who acted Wednesday night, stressed the threat of heavy withdrawals as the reason for their actions.

One state executive, Lieutenant Governor George E. Hill of Idaho, who acted in the absence of Governor C. Ben Ross, declared the situation was "a national problem." He predicted "national legislation within the next few days after the inauguration to deal with the condition."

Generally Observed

Banks in all states, with the exception of Oregon, were reported generally observing the proclamations which reached seven last night as Governor Henry H. Blood of Utah placed that state on a holiday basis.

The extent of the holiday periods varied in the several states. Monday was specified in California, Oregon and Arizona as the day on which banking was expected to be resumed, probably on a restricted basis. Washington's moratorium will end at midnight Monday. Idaho will continue for 15 days until midnight of March 17. Nevada's was for four days starting yesterday.

The Utah proclamation specified March 3, 4, 6 and 7 as legal holidays. New Mexico declared a four day holiday starting today.

The proclamations were all statewide though they varied as to the extent in which they affected business. In Oregon, the question of observing the holiday was left to the discretion of individual banks. Washington's moratorium was not mandatory. Idaho's was limited to banks and trust companies.
