

BANKS OF 'FRISCO OPEN WITH LIGHT BUSINESS NOTED

Amount of Deposits Proves Surprise—No Gold, Gold Certificates Or Currency Being Paid Out Under Ban

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—(AP)—All San Francisco's banks reopened today for normal business. They received licenses from the federal reserve bank here shortly before 9 a. m., and some opened immediately, others waiting for the regular opening hour, 10 a. m.

Business was quiet. One vice-president said: "We expected the lobby to be full of people, but to our surprise there are only a few here now."

This was shortly before 10 o'clock. Another said: "You would be amazed to see the amount of deposits we are taking in—especially of gold."

No Gold Goes Out. There are five national banks here, and they all opened. There are 10 banks licensed under state banking laws, and they were operating on a regular basis. Some state banks, however, had little contact directly with the public, being agencies of foreign institutions.

The only restrictions were that no gold, gold certificates or "currency" could be paid out. The "currency" provision was added by the secretary of the treasury to the previous restrictions against paying gold and gold certificates.

This was taken as assurance that the new federal reserve certificates had arrived and had been made available to banks, although the federal reserve bank had "no comment" to make on that point.

San Francisco will be the only Pacific coast city with full banking facilities today, it being the location of the 12th district reserve bank, the only one on the coast.

Many Resume Tuesday. Operations were scheduled for resumption tomorrow in 50 cities in the seven far western states. There are 50 clearing house associations in the twelfth federal reserve district, and the executive order prescribed that banks in cities having clearing house associations might resume operations if licensed by national or state authorities.

On the following day, Wednesday, all banks which have been given licenses will be in regular operation, subject only to the restrictions as to the type of money they may pay out.

PROCLAIM DAD'S NIGHT AT ROOSEVELT SCHOOL OUTSTANDING SUCCESS. Annual "Roosevelt Dad's Night" event held at the Roosevelt school Friday, more than exceeded expectations. Nearly 200 dads and mothers attended.

The program was given a rousing start by an unexpected appearance of about 40 Roosevelt Rough Riders, all in cowboy attire, who rushed into the auditorium, yelling and yipping lustily and firing their six-shooters. This was followed by several well rendered selections by the Roosevelt Glee club under the direction of Miss Eleanor Curry.

Speaker of the evening, Rev. William Howell, gave an inspiring address, during the course of which he stressed cooperation in character building among the parents, teachers and children.

Mrs. Elsie Carlton Strang sang two soprano solos which were well received. She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Dorothy Reynolds. Following delightful program, the ladies of the refreshment committee, Mrs. L. D. Inskip as chairman and Mrs. Donald Libbey in charge of the decorating committee, served refreshments.

The attendance prize for the largest number of dads present, representing any one room, went to Mrs. Maxwell's room. All present reported a wonderful time, and it is believed that the Roosevelt Dad's night event of this year surpassed any similar occasion held in the city.

ACTION FILLS AIR SINCE INAUGURAL AT WHITE HOUSE

Twelve long lean years out of office and with their appetites whetted to a point where a sack of peanuts looked like a feast, the Democrats descended upon the White House executive offices the morning of the first working day the new president was at his desk.

They came in through the front gates, through the side gates, and one of them almost kissed a colored furnace-man who, hearing a commotion outside, inadvertently opened a basement door.

They were armed with letters from everybody but the Pope. Nothing like it had been seen since the day after Harding was inaugurated, when a delegation of Ohio office-seekers took possession of the place and stayed a week.

Not a peep was heard from F. D. until about noon, when, showing his old naval training, he discharged a depth bomb. That there was also a moratorium on job seekers and that he would not concern himself with distribution of plums until he had finally acted on the emergency banking legislation shocked the faithful.

As a result the exodus of the job seekers army there was an air of tranquility about the White House Tuesday morning which has not been equalled on the second morning of any president's occupancy in forty years.

When a new man goes in usually there are taxicabs dashing up to the door discharging passengers who are bursting with importance. Many of these will, upon the slightest pretext, confide the fact that he carried his own state for the successful candidate.

Also missing were the thousands of sightseers usually running higher and thither about the White House for several days after an inaugural.

Taking their cue from the president the men about the White House were smiling, after his banking edict Mr. Roosevelt appeared to be like a man with the weight of the world off his shoulders.

Rare Stones Collected And Cut by Local Man

(By Irva Fewell) Rocks, by every other name. That's what the collection of over 1,000 cut stones, and hundreds of unfinished specimens might be called, which E. R. Santo of 620 South Ivy street has arranged in his tiny workshop in the back of his garage. The more valuable of his stones are kept in glass-topped cases in his home.

During the past two years, Mr. Santo has been making a search through the southern Oregon hills for specimens of the various types of rock formation, and those of the more rare varieties are exchanged with traders who visit his little shop.

Through this bartering, Mr. Santo now has stones from many countries—the gorgeous green malachite of the Philippines, the uncanny tiger-eye of south Africa, and marble from Mexico, which might easily be mistaken for butterscotch.

But inside the cigar boxes, arranged neatly in rows in the workshop, are hundreds of southern Oregon rocks, which compare favorably with those from any other section. Among the collection is one large group of amethyst crystals, taken from the Little Butte district.

Fossilized sandstone, with clamshells in it, a large rock crystal belonging to the group often used as "diamonds," taken from the Black Hills, and a petrified oecetus from Texas, make up a part of the array, as do a leopard onyx from Nebraska, some green marble and Jasper from South Dakota, rose quartz and formations with little garnets imbedded.

Other southern Oregon specimens which Mr. Santo has found in his continuous searching, are an ivory tusk from the Antelope district, petrified bulbs, and a petrified deer or elk horn which was brought from the Dead Indian country.

A desert rose, in the hues becoming such a flower, is among the most beautiful of the rocks. Some black agates of South Dakota have been polished by Mr. Santo in his shop, and some natrolite from Dead Indian and Little Butte make up a portion of the group of local formations. There is also some white marble, brought from Miller creek in Josephine county.

Views in some of the polished agates are quite unusual, one having a beautiful sunset, another a woodland scene, and still another a perfect view of Roxy Ann. A little but-complete, he said, Mr. Santo plans to display them to the city of Medford.

Oregon Weather. Generally fair tonight and Tuesday, except probable showers northwest portion; colder east portion tonight; moderate changeable winds offshore.

ILLUSION: A large packing case is exhibited on a raised platform. A young woman climbs into the box. Head, hands and feet protrude, and are held by spectators while the magician takes a crosscut saw and, with the help of an assistant, saws through the center of the box and apparently through the woman.

EXPLANATION: There are many explanations for this illusion. One method of performing this illusion requires the presence of two girls in the box. One girl curls up in the left half of the box with her head and hands protruding, giving the effect you see illustrated above. The other girl is doubled up in the right half of the box, with only her feet showing. Nobody is sawed in half.

It's fun to be fooled... it's more fun to KNOW

Cigarette advertising, too, has its tricks. Consider the illusion that "Flavor" can be achieved by some kind of magical hocus-pocus in manufacturing. EXPLANATION: Just three factors control the flavor of a cigarette. The addition of artificial flavoring. The blending of various tobaccos. And the quality of the tobaccos themselves. Quality is by far the most important. Domestic cigarette tobaccos vary in price from 5¢ a pound up to 40¢ a pound. Imported tobaccos vary from 50¢ a pound to $1.15. No wonder, then, that cigarettes differ in taste—since distinctive, pleasing flavor depends so largely upon the blending of the costlier tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Try Camels. Give your taste a chance to sense the subtle difference that lies in costlier tobaccos... a difference that means all the world in smoking pleasure... in pure, unalloyed satisfaction.
