No One Connected With Project Receiving Compensation — 6,294 Meals Served — 2,381 Beds.

There is perhaps no charitable project in the county which receives more whole-hearted support from the general public than the community shelter and kitchen sponsored by the Medford Lion's club.

Due to the fact that it is managed entirely without compensation to anyone concerned with its functioning, there is a widespread feeling that contributions to it reach directly those for whose aid it was established.

Among those who have contributed either by cash donations, food, clothing, fuel, plumbing, lumber, hardware, medicine, furniture or bedding are:

Fine Dairy Cows Starved Because Owners Are Broke

ASTORIA, Ore., Mar. 15.—(AP) Farmers said here today that because of lack of feed, large herds of fine dairy cows face starvation in Clatsop county. More than 25 already have died, it was said, because of inability of dairymen to purchase feed. Dwindling finances and lack of pasture have conspired to bring about the critical condition.

On the other hand, feed dealers declare they are unable to extend further credit because they already have pushed themselves to the limit.

NEWCOMERS FROM LONG BEACH TELL HORROR OF QUAKE

Leaving behind them the horror and suffering brought on by the severe earthquake Friday evening in Long Beach, Cal., Mr. and Mrs. George Ehrheart and their two children, whose home and restaurant were completely wrecked, drove immediately to Medford, and already have announced the opening of a restaurant at 204 South Central avenue.

They registered their car at Ashland, the second from Long Beach after the earthquake.

The Ehrhearts left Long Beach at 10 p. m. Friday, the first severe shock affecting the city at 5:55 p. m. Mr. Ehrheart stated that his restaurant, a one-story structure on East Fifth street, was destroyed. At the time of the shock he was in the kitchen cooking, and pots, pans, dishes and crocks all tumbled off the shelves onto his head.

Two men were killed by falling bricks across the street from the Ehrheart restaurant, and a woman in the beauty shop across the street had her scalp torn from her head when electric curling attachments were jerked loose by the tremors.

The Press-Telegram building, a short distance from his place of business, was put out of commission by a huge water tank and a large electric sign falling through three stories of the building, Mr. Ehrheart stated.

Upon leaving Long Beach, the Ehrhearts went to Glendale, a distance of 50 miles, in order to send telegrams. Rows were lined up a half block in each direction from the telegraph office, with police in charge, and five or six operators sent messages out on the wires as rapidly as possible. All telephone lines were completely wrecked.

EDUCATION AIMS TOLD BY HEDRICK AT ROTARY MEET

E. H. Hedrick, superintendent of schools, was the principal speaker of yesterday's meeting of the Medford Rotary club, which was attended by a large group of local and visiting Rotarians and guests.

Professor Hedrick gave a splendid address on "Education," bringing out many interesting facts and figures to substantiate his statements. "What is the function of education?" was answered by the speaker, who gave the seven cardinal aims of education which have been prepared by the leading educators and statesmen of the nation. These aims were enumerated as follows:

- 1. To teach and promote health.
2. To train for worthy home membership.
3. To give pupils command of the fundamental processes of learning, including reading, writing, spelling, arithmetic, how to study, habits of work, etc.
4. To lay a basis for vocational training.
5. To prepare pupils for citizenship duties.
6. To train pupils for wise use of leisure time.
7. To build ethical character.

Prof. Hedrick analyzed each of the above aims and told his hearers why they formed the basis for the modern curriculum in the schools.

In speaking of the teaching of health, he cited figures showing that life expectancy in the time of George Washington was 35 years and 100 years later had increased to only 43 years.

However, in 1930 health education was instituted in the schools and in only 10 years the expected span of life increased to 49. In 1930 it was 51, in 1920, 55, and in 1931 life expectancy reached a record figure of 58.

The fallacy that business supports education was exploded by the speaker, who showed that education supports business, through knowledge of higher standards of living and increased earning power.

An educated person is a better customer, according to Prof. Hedrick, who drew a striking comparison of an American citizen with a Chinese coolie to illustrate his point.

Education costs must be reduced along with costs of doing business, stated the speaker, citing a number of instances where substantial savings have already been made in the local schools. It is expected that only $179,000 will be raised by taxes this year as compared with $254,000 last year, which means a reduction of seven or eight mills in the school tax, according to Superintendent Hedrick.

Glenn Smith, chairman of yesterday's program, announced an open forum on the subject of education for next week's meeting, at which time a general discussion will be held.

Visiting Rotarians at the session were G. A. Allen of Tacoma, Clayton Long of Corvallis and Chas. Cooley of Grants Pass. Guests included A. Naab of San Francisco, J. H. Cooley of Medford and A. H. Banwell, secretary of the Medford Chamber of Commerce.

"Cabin Home Minstrels" Thrill Record Audience

The First Christian church was filled to capacity and all standing room taken last evening when the "Cabin Home Minstrels" were produced by the church choir under the direction of Mrs. Effie Herbert Yeoman. The production was the third of this particular contribution to music lovers and met with even more enthusiastic applause than its two predecessors.

Each song of the evening was characterized by the sentimentality, the religious fervor and freedom of emotion and expression symbolic of the black race. A cabin doorway formed the setting, which was converted into the scene of a camp meeting for the second act. Upon the stage appeared "Mammy and Pappy" and many pickaninnys, always picking up the strain of a tune dear to the hearts of all who have known associations with the southland.

"Old Black Joe," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "Dem Golden Slippers," and many other old favorites, blended into a perfect pattern of song, appealing one instant to sweet sentiment, the next arousing hearty laughter.

Between acts, Rev. W. E. Baird entertained with several readings of negro character, mixing Biblical stories with humorous tales.

All members of the cast appeared in blackface and colorful costumes, the elaborateness of which aroused many laughs, when enthusiasm at the camp meeting reached its highest apex.

Numerous requests for repetition of the minstrels have been received by the chorus and director, but it was not known today whether or not the production would be presented again here or in a neighboring community.

Following last night's production, the members of the cast enjoyed the chicken pie, frequently mentioned during the show. Prepared by Charley Smith, experienced chef, it was served in the church dining room.
