

CHINOOK SALMON SEASON WILL BE LATER—WHARTON

Almost invariably, in a normal season, the first chinook salmon caught on rod and line is taken from Rogue river near the We-Aak-U Inn at Savage Rapids, about March 15. Season after season, the time seldom varies more than a day or two. Last season, and many other seasons in the past 10 years, the first salmon was taken on the exact day, which proves how regularly the cycles in nature occur. This season, it may be later before the first one is taken, not because the water will still be high and roily on that day. This is a late spring and the creeks and tributaries are running full and strong, with lots of snow on the higher elevations still to melt and run out.

Placer mining is the one big industry that is bringing revenue to southern Oregon during these times of depression and the people of this section would feel the depression and hard times even more keenly were it not for the thousands of dollars worth of gold dust that is being brought in every day from the placer workings in almost every gulch and tributary that empties its waters into the Rogue. With all the banks of the nation closed, and all kinds of business dormant, awaiting settlement of the confusion in financial circles and the return of confidence in our banking institutions, old nature's banks are still open and the amount that can be drawn is only limited by the efficiency of the methods used to draw the money out. And this is surely a Godsend to the people of southern Oregon.

From all indications the Applegate, Hills and other tributaries below Grants Pass will likely be muddy until quite late in the season. Most of the small streams above Grants Pass are emptying a steady flow of highly colored water into the river. That which comes from Pleasant creek and Evans creek is particularly rich in color, a deep yellowish red, the color of good mineral paint. Once this substance is in suspension in the water it does not settle or precipitate but continues to discolor the water as long as there is movement. The water from the mine on Sardine creek is of a darker hue, being mostly sand and loam, and settles more quickly. Some muddy water is still coming in from Foothills creek as all the small placers on both forks are still working, and will continue as long as the present flow of water keeps up.

However, in an interview with D. H. Ferry, superintendent of the Rogue River Gold company, operating the big dredge on the right hand fork of Foothills creek, the writer was assured that as soon as the water in the river clears sufficiently to permit salmon fishing, he would cause all the muddy water coming from the placers on both forks, as well as the overflow from the dredge pond, to be diverted into the settling basins that have been prepared and that no serious discoloration from the waters of Foothills creek will be allowed to reach the river.

Mr. Ferry's elaborate clarification system has prevented any discoloration from Foothills creek affecting the river in fishing season for the past three years. A sudden deluge from the Foothills watershed during one of the heavy winter storms washed out part of the diversion system that had been in operation for the past two years, but this has been replaced and a new dam built that will take care of the normal flow of the stream. This hearty cooperation on the part of Mr. Ferry and the company he represents is sincerely appreciated by all in this community who are interested in fishing, either from a business standpoint or as a recreational sport. With a plentiful water supply in all streams, the placer miner is having his day and work in the mines will continue later than usual. Let us all be thankful that we have one industry that is producing revenue. The fishermen can wait.

Bowmer Writes Play On Life of Jackson.
Southern Oregon's dramatic groups are welcoming the announcement that Prof. Angus L. Bowmer of Southern Oregon Normal school, who has already established a reputation here in the field of drama, has written a play about the life of Andrew Jackson, which will be produced in the near future for the pleasure of the local public.

The play promises to be the most elaborate bit of home produced entertainment ever offered southern Oregon's theater-goers, and is far from amateur, in plot and lines.

Professor Bowmer, whose ability is well known to the Medford public, is also directing the play and the cast has been chosen from Southern Oregon Normal school's most seasoned actors.

The play makes vivid the picturesque life of Andrew Jackson, who was destined to set a new goal for American democracy. Of the production a local critic has said: "Jackson's life was like a story—a pathetic story filled with misfortune, disappointments and struggle—always filled, however, with a great love for a woman whom the world looked upon as an outcast. But in the end it was Jackson who became the idol of the masses. As the first president from the common people, he stands out as a glorious achievement in the history of America. And now the pen of a southern Oregon dramatist, Prof. A. L. Bowmer, has caught and recorded the incidents of Andrew Jackson's life."

MILK DEGRADING IS EXPLAINED BY CITY'S INSPECTOR

Owing to several inquiries as to the significance of a producer or distributor of milk being graded, I offer the following:

Medford's milk ordinance provides for four different grades of milk. Those in attendance at the grading period are published after each grading period and also in cases where anyone is degraded for cause; should this occur the party so affected is placed in a lower grade than he was in, until such time as he can again comply for a higher grade. Fundamentally, the milk ordinance, like any other ordinance, is a regulatory measure and is made primarily for the protection and safety of the consuming public, therefore, if confidence can be established with this same public that the ordinance is being complied with, both in spirit and letter, by producer, distributor, and its surveillance, just to that extent it stimulates consumption and makes Medford a more desirable place in which to live, both for those now here, and for all who enter our midst.

Viewed rightly, we are all associates, the consumer, producer and distributor, and each should appreciate the sincere efforts of the others to cooperate in furnishing a milk supply second to none at a price equal and just to all.

Electricity and Ice Cream
Do YOU KNOW
That for every dollar spent for domestic electricity in the United States $1.60 is spent for Ice Cream? There is no other source of energy at any price that will take the place of electricity. Electricity not only produces perfect light but is the most efficient cooking fuel as well. Electricity is a perfect laundry servant and gives the most dependable refrigeration in use today. It even furnishes the family with entertainment through the radio and so greatly shortens household tasks that the housewife spends much of her time in recreation and pleasant association with her family instead of in the kitchen. Yet... although electricity is the world's most perfect servant, it is cheap... so cheap that the average family spends much more for Ice Cream than for Electricity.
