SOLONS' REVOLT THREATENED AS F. D. DRIVES ON

authority to do nearly anything he desires by using the allotment or acreage-leasing schemes as a basis. It proposes to fix the price of wheat at about 92 cents a bushel, nearly double what it has been the last few months.

All the farm leaders are for it except Simpson of the Farmers' Union. He thinks it is too mild. Lobbyists got after the bill strongly from the start. Representatives of the packers, processors and textiles besieged congressmen on benched knees asking a chance to be heard.

Nobody paid much attention to them. After defeating the American Legion lobby, everything else will seem easy. It was obvious Mr. Roosevelt would be required to pull new strings to get his bill through. The first rebellion was clearly brewing in this measure.

Before the fight started his congressional leaders whispered in his ear that they could ram the bill through the house without trouble. They doubted their ability to get early action in the senate.

In the end the bill will be passed. It has been months since feeling here has been so hopeful as it is now about the business outlook. That is especially true of men and women in the street who do not know the technical difficulties ahead. They are confident Mr. Roosevelt can fight his way out. A different atmosphere is noted throughout the business district. Department stores are calling back their help. Sales are improving.

From the inside it looks like a long hard pull. Measures already taken are only a beginning. A vast amount of executive and legislative work remains to be done before industrial wheels start turning at anything like their old-time pace. The government experts will tell you privately their estimates for steel, the railroads, automobiles and farmers, from a statistical standpoint. These are cold indeed.

All that can be changed by a new public psychology. Meanwhile hopefully optimistic caution seems to be in order. You will see a Roosevelt railroad plan pop out soon after the human relief bill goes up to the hill. The fixing has already been done. Among those who were in on it were: Eastman and Mahaffey of the I. O. C., Prof. Berle of Columbia and Swaggar Sherley.

Sherley is slated to head the new setup. Josephus Daniels and Walker Hines turned down the post when it was first offered to them in that order. The new scheme will break up the I. O. C. into four parts. These separate departments will handle (1) everything on wheels; (2) telephones and telegraph; (3) waterway transportation and (4) airplanes. They will all be under one head.

Unquestionably the legislation will take a while in congress. It may not be enacted before the summer adjournment. Mr. Borah persisted in his little joke with the beer bill. He induced the senate to adopt an amendment providing jail for anyone who gives 3 per cent beer to a minor.

under 16. That means a father could not give it to his son in his own home. There would be no use for a provision like that if the beer were non-intoxicating. Borah is looking forward to the time when constitutionality of the measure will be laid before the supreme court. Then you will hear it broadcast that the amendment was a confession that the beer is intoxicating.

FARMER BILL TO TRY HOG CALLING

A few more entries from those who wish to compete in the chamber of commerce hog calling contest were received this morning, according to chamber of commerce officials.

Most of the entries, so far, have been from men, but it is hoped that there will be more women entrants for the prize before Saturday. W. N. Carl of Applegate, who enters himself as "farmer Bill" has entered the contest and states: "The last couple of days I have had quite a cold and if I am over it by next Saturday and I am myself again, why, I warn you that it will show better to build a couple of hog pens on the main street of Medford instead of a speakers' stand, as I will have all the hogs within miles of Medford coming into town. They will have to be taken care of, as I intend to win first prize. You will be seeing and hearing me on Saturday."

During 1932 the number of telephone calls originating in the London area was 745,000,000. Only 10,406 veterans of the Confederate army were living at the beginning of 1933.

PEAR GROWERS OF ROGUE VALLEY TO GET RELIEF FUNDS

Governor Meter had pointed out to the president that the R. F. C. had planned to extend loans only on a basis of 50 cents a box on both pears and apples. A committee of "careful men" the governor said, had advised him that loans up to 80 cents on pears and 62½ cents a box on apples were imperative if the industry was to be saved. While no one officially connected with the local effort to secure "adequate relief" for valley pear growers, would comment today upon the above dispatch, there is no doubt that this assurance of "some relief" to all pear growers in the state is the best news that has been received regarding this important matter for several weeks. Relief from the R. F. C. to pear growers in the state of Washington and Hood River, Oregon, to the extent of 80 cents per box, has already been officially extended. But this is the first official notice that relief will be granted to all pear growers in the state, including the growers in Southern Oregon. Precisely what this relief will be is not yet known. But that some relief will be extended is now certain. Whether this will be 50 cents a box, or 62½ cents, will probably be definitely known in the near future. Until then, however, the exact interpretation of "some relief" for local pear growers remains a matter of conjecture. Ringlette Permanent Wave. If you get it here it must be good. 1933 prices.
