Why Parr Elected Fehl

THE text for today's discourse is furnished by Mr. Bert Harr of Jacksonville, his communication being printed in another column of this issue.

When Mr. Harr confesses that his sympathy for Judge Fehl can be traced back to the Parr libel judgment against Fehl's paper, the Pacific Record Herald, he points out a common malady.

It is, in our judgment, scarcely an exaggeration to say that the libel judgment against Fehl elected him county judge. Or in view of certain doubts concerning that election, that same idea might be more accurately expressed, by stating that but for that judgment Fehl would have come no nearer being elected county judge than he came to being elected Mayor of Medford,—which except on one occasion, was not very near.

IN THE light of recent tragic developments, Mr. Harr has looked into that Parr judgment more carefully, and we take it, has come to the conclusion that the judgment in question was not so far out of the way after all,—that HAD he looked into it as carefully BEFORE this tragedy, as he did AFTER, he would never have allowed himself to become either a Fehl sympathizer, or a Fehl supporter.

We are not only certain that Mr. Harr is absolutely correct in his present judgment, but any fair minded person who will do as he has done, will look into Fehl's past record, and the place this Parr judgment occupied in that record, will, we are confident, come to the same conclusion.

The Lesson to Be Learned

THE above, in a sense is water over the dam. Nothing can now bring the dead back to life, the crimes committed can't be recalled. But we heartily agree with Mr. Harr, that if the people of Jackson county will profit by the lesson they have learned, and hereafter investigate both sides of a question before they take any political action concerning it, then "George Prescott did not die in vain."

This does not mean a Polyantha complacency, it does not mean letting things slide, it does not mean abandoning every legitimate effort to correct evils and working for every desirable reform.

But it DOES MEAN adopting the same attitude toward future political issues, that should have been adopted toward this Roy Parr issue,—withholding judgment, refusing political action, until all the facts are known,—in short insisting at all times, and under all circumstances, on a SQUARE DEAL, and all that term implies.

That's all. But if as a result of this tragedy, this should be the corner stone of political action in the future, then indeed this calamity will have been "converted into an instrument of good."—be worth to this and future generations, the terrific price that has been paid!

Personal Health Service

By William Brady, M.D.

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address Dr. William Brady in care of The Mail Tribune.

TOBACCO SMOKE AND CARBON MONOXIDE

There is reason to believe that the poisonous effect of tobacco smoke is chiefly due to the carbon monoxide in the smoke. This is the same gas that makes the exhaust of an automobile engine so deadly in a closed garage, and the odorless fume from gas stove, coal stove or other fire with faulty flue or none, the creeping death that gives the victim no warning of its approach.

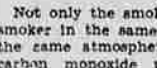

Not only the smoker but the non-smoker in the same room, breathing the same atmosphere, is subject to carbon monoxide poisoning. Some years ago Dr. Collins of Wilkes-Barre and Mr. Walsh, mines inspector, made tests of air laden with cigarette smoke and found approximately 2 per cent of it in various samples. Normally fresh air contains no carbon monoxide though the air of a street with heavy automobile traffic usually shows traces.

Recently Alexander O. Gettler, Ph. D., and Marjorie R. Mattice, A. B. Sc. M., made a study of the carbon monoxide content of the blood. Ideally the blood should contain none, but in these days almost every person's blood contains at least a trace. Most city dwellers tested showed an average of 0.27 per cent, country residents 0.25 per cent, New York street cleaners 0.69 per cent, two taxi drivers 1.47 per cent and 4.33 per cent. These investigators found that smoking causes a marked increase in the carbon monoxide content of the blood, a cigarette quickly jumping the rate up to 0.70 or 0.80 per cent.

One of the street cleaners, whose duties expose them to greater hazard of carbon monoxide poisoning than traffic police encounter, had three times as much carbon monoxide in his blood as another who had spent the same number of hours at work on the street but had not smoked. The man with the high carbon monoxide had consumed six cigarettes while walking and riding several blocks to the hospital where the blood tests were made.

Many studies of the CO hazard, now in the literature, become questionable now, because it must be known whether the subjects had smoked before the analyses of the blood for CO were made. If we are to draw a conclusion from the tests. Heretofore this factor has not been considered and in few if any such observations has the smoking factor been checked.

The untoward effects produced by mild gasping with carbon monoxide are strikingly like those of tobacco smoke poisoning, whether of the smoker or a non-smoker exposed to the smoke-filled atmosphere. Habitual or excessive smokers seem to become heedless of the amenities; this loss of consideration for others is naturally more noticeable in the case of the feminine addict. It is not that the person is really a bold hussy nor is she giving her imperiousness of the sophisticated movie star; she is just forgetful of the fact that the secondhand smoke really poisons non-smokers who have to inhale it and is sufficient to bring on the symptoms of mild poisoning in sensitive individuals unaccustomed to it.

What are the symptoms of mild carbon monoxide poisoning? They are quite the same as those of tobacco smoke poisoning: tightness across forehead, headache, flushing of the skin. If the victim is not rescued at this stage, the headache increases in severity, throbbing in the temples, weakness, dizziness, dimness of vision and nausea follow. A few more inhalations of the poison and vomiting, fainting and collapse follow.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Great Air Bubble Mystery.
 Much interested in occasional allusions in your column to mystery story plots. . . I am guilty of a few. How about the air bubble thing—injecting a bubble of air into the victim's veins? Is this a deadly thing, and would post-mortem investigation discover any evidence of the cause of death?—O. S. A.

Answer—Air embolism from serious injury or occasionally from ravages of disease, is a well recognized cause of sudden death, and it is readily recognized in necropsy. But the accidental or intentional injection of a few air bubbles into a vein is harmless. In experiments D'Arbois found that it required injection of 1 1/2 pints of air to kill a 500-pound bull, so a man weighing 150 pounds would need six or seven ounces of air to polish him off, and such a dead man tells an interesting story to the medical examiner.

Blood Making.
 How is the best way to get blood in your body? What to eat, that makes blood?—J. W.

Answer—Eggs, particularly the yolk, wheat bran, or unpolished or home ground wheat, oatmeal, spinach, lettuce, prunes, beef, peas, liver, grapes and raisins are comparatively rich in iron. If one has a fair ration of one or two of these (or various other foods) in the daily diet, that will insure all the iron the body needs or can assimilate. For the rest, let the food be.

Our Children, aged two and four years, refuse to eat cereals. They take whole wheat bread with a sauce made of milk thickened with flour. The only sugar they get is that naturally present in their fruit, which they have twice a day, and candy once a week. Are cereals necessary for them?—Mrs. J. P. B.

Answer—No, the bread and flour supply everything cereals as such can supply.

Fehl Reaping the Whirlwind
 To the Editor:
 While mourning the loss of Mr. George Prescott at a time when officers of his characteristics are sorely needed many of us wonder why such a thing should be. Believing there is an opportunity to convert this calamity into an instrument of good we are moved to speak our hopes it may help to accomplish this.

Every attainment worth while seems to have called for human sacrifice. By Mr. Prescott's sacrifice many have been awakened to their personal responsibility as citizens who could have been aroused by no less violent means.

If the people of Jackson county had thoughtfully analyzed in a conscientious manner the slanderous utterances made this tragedy would never have occurred. To illustrate this point is affecting every citizen of Jackson county.

If any number of us have learned to withhold action until we have carefully investigated both sides of any question whether it be a slanderous utterance against a neighbor or a public official then we say that Geo. Prescott did not die in vain.

BERT HARR,
 Jacksonville, March 25.

Draft Jennings Now:
 To the Editor:
 Permit me to humbly congratulate and to thank you for your wise and timely editorial in Sunday's issue—"Jennings is the Man."

To any reasonable human there seems no question that Ralph Jennings, because of his BALANCE OF QUALITIES, is the choice of the people for sheriff. This is true, emphatically. Otherwise, why would the MAJORITY of voters go to the TROUBLE of writing in his name on the ballot?

If there ever was a time that Jackson county should SEARCH for a man of poise, composure, perspective in his duty, intelligence, experience, fearlessness, and just fairness to all THAT TIME IS NOW. We should select Ralph rather than HE the job. That, perhaps, is the case.

In my humble opinion, those responsible and empowered by law to appoint a TEMPORARY or PERMANENT sheriff, if and when such appointment is legally necessary, would be recalcitrant in their duties, to consider any other than the proven TYPE OF MAN as represented in Mr. Jennings.

If Mr. Jennings will take the job, then all good citizens should get back of him NOW. Let's not give up-state papers any further opportunity to justify call us complacent and STUPID.

is raised concerning them, it will not be by Japan.

Japan will continue to participate in the world disarmament, economic and other league-sponsored meetings but will be only perfunctory because of the lack of sympathy shown the Nipponese empire, a government spokesman said.

Recognition Lost.
 Japan has not only quite the great body of more than 50 nations making up the league, but has cast aside the greatest recognition it ever received from the western world by simultaneously removing itself from the council or directing body of the league. It was given a place with the British Empire, France and Italy as one of the four permanent members of the council, on January 10, 1920. Six years later another permanent seat was given Germany.

The notice of resignation is an accordance with paragraph three, article one, of the league covenant, providing "any member of the league may after two years' notice of its intention to do so, withdraw from the league, providing that all its international obligations and all its obligations under this covenant shall have been fulfilled at the time of its withdrawal."

Thus the league will not recognize that Japan is no longer a member until it has paid its dues to this date in 1935.

goodwill. She may need it before long. That will be the prime motive for payment of the December debt installment if it is made.

Schacht's appointment as head of the Reichstag to replace Luther was forecast in this column more than a month ago. This does not imply German inflation nor good news for Germany's foreign creditors. Don't be surprised if a general moratorium is declared on all of Germany's private debts—possibly with the reservation that payments may be made into blocked mark accounts which cannot be taken out of Germany.

Several New York banks will then give an imitation of a chorus in a Greek tragedy.

Albert Wiggin's resignation as a director of the Federal Reserve bank of New York was not as surprising as reports make out. Mr. Wiggin is expected to remain in Europe for some time. His resignation as a director of the Chase bank is expected in the near future.

The only inflation in sight, from the New York viewpoint, will be via the federal credit route. There seem to be extensive possibilities in that direction.

From the bankers' angle the government has made its obligations the virtual equivalent of cash and there will be a ripe and ready market now for practically anything the Treasury chooses to offer.

There is head-shaking in financial quarters over the proposed farm relief legislation, but no one is voicing opposition out loud. It is referred to privately as "Wallace's tonic for tired tillers—everything in it but the kitchen stove." The main criticism of it is that it won't work.

THIRTEEN DEATHS IN PLANE SMASH FAULT OF SQUALL

OAKLAND, Cal., Mar. 27.—(P)—A fast moving storm was blamed today for the transport airplane crash which took 13 lives near here Saturday night. The bodies were burned beyond recognition.

Only three of those killed were in the plane, including Pilot Noel B. "Jack" Evans, considered one of the best "tough weather" fliers in the country.

The others were gathered in a happy group at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Arisa. The Arisa family—parents and four children—was wiped out. Arisa, changing to be upstairs when the plane struck his house, exploded, and burned it and one other dwelling,umped from an upstairs window, but was sprayed with flaming gasoline, and died here yesterday in a hospital.

The other four killed, all young men, were neighbors and friends of the Arisas.

"The squall that hit our ship was a seasonal, rapid-moving storm, moving unpredictably," said President Franklin of Varney Speed Lines, operator of the wrecked plane. "Apparently it was the one that had been reported from Oakland airport ten minutes before."

"Five minutes after the crash occurred, the storm had passed and the ceiling had lifted. Evans was in the wrong place at the wrong time. Five minutes later, five minutes earlier, he'd have come through."

All our faces should get red. A low-down no-account New York paper has called the local "struggle for human rights" a "riff."

FAT AND FLIRT BESET (Agony Column)

I am rather good looking, and don't use any cosmetics as I have natural complexion, but I am a little stout. I am reducing now and I have reduced quite a bit, but I am now about ten pounds overweight. I expect to lose that, too. What I am really trying to get to is, do you think that because I am stout that I don't get any engagements. I am very sociable, and all my friends like me, and even married men that I meet, expect to take me out, but they wouldn't go out with a married man, but why is it that the married men like me and not the single ones?

The number of new 1933 roan colored autos scooting over the country lanes shows an increase. The drivers are alive. They say they don't know how they got 'em. One such, who unaccountably acquired a new machine, admits he don't know how he is going to pay.

ALL FOOLED DAY

Next Saturday, April 1, is All Fooled day. It is sincerely hoped it will be confined to that date, and not run into next January. It is fun to be fooled, as the cigarette ad claim, but it is no fun to stay that way against one's better judgment. Last year proved to be an exceptional year in which to be fooled, and there seemed to be something about the process that was delightfully thrilling. In several instances several who were completely fooled, were in great fear nobody would find it out, and acted accordingly.

Last year most of the wholesale fooling was done by home products, but occasionally a well dressed and glib stranger would come down the road from the south, and cash a few bank checks, sell stock in a Bolivian gold mine, and take the family back to Frisco to determine if the numbers were correctly registered. One stranger who did so, is well on his way towards fooling around a prison for some time. Others bought lots in Costa Rica. They could have a lot at home, and been fooled just as well, if not better. Thus come under the hand of a fool and his spindulicks not getting along well, until divorced.

It is claimed there is no fool like an old fool. It has been demonstrated that it is not necessary to be aged. The young and middle-aged can be good at getting fooled. The old would rather pitch bromsides than be fooled. On the other hand, if one must be fooled, it might as well be a first-class job, as a botchy one. The opportunities to be fooled this year will be few. There will be no elections.
