Chinese and Tibetans War Over Village, Prize in 200-Year-Old Boundary Dispute

By Morris J. Harris

SHANGHAI—(AP)—A 200-year-old boundary dispute between China and Tibet again has flared into active warfare, marked by renewed slaughter and the laying waste of productive country.

The battle prize in this long dispute is Batang, a Chinese Tibetan village hidden in the mountains of extreme West China, some 3500 miles west of Shanghai.

Britain Once Took Hand

As the maps show it today Batang is in the Chinese province of Szechuan. The Tibetans for 200 years have been saying it is a part of Tibet. The present warfare is an outgrowth of an attempted settlement of the dispute in 1918 when officials of the British government took a hand in negotiations that put Batang in Szechuan. Tibetans say it must be a part of Tibet.

The trouble has caused the closing of an American mission station in Batang and the departure of M. H. Duncan, his wife and three children for their home in East Liberty, Ohio.

For the past 11 years Duncan has represented the Disciples of Christ mission, a branch of the United Christian Missionary society.

Family Hid in Dugout

When the Batang fighting started a few months ago with an onslaught by Tibetan horsemen swooping down from the very roof of Asia they fired on the mission station and hospital, virtually destroyed the place and forced the Duncans to live in a dugout for a month before they were allowed an opportunity to escape.

After leaving it took them three months to get to Shanghai, their journey across the immense province of Szechuan being perilous and slow.

This rekindling of the fires of hatred between the Szechuanese and the Tibetans threatens to throw the whole of Central Asia into increased disorder, Duncan says.

It is his opinion that the Tibetans will never accept the 1918 settlement of the boundary dispute, which they claim was brought about principally by British nationals and did not allow sufficient consideration for the interests of the Tibetans.

The Tibetan forces warring against the Szechuanese are led by Brigadier General Shi Ga, a horseman and expert commander of his hard riding cavalrymen.

China, engaged in major conflict with Japan, faces another foe in the far west where Tibetans under General Shi Ga, shown with two of his bodyguards, are fighting for the border town of Batang, of which a birds-eye view is given above. The map shows location of this far-off conflict.

LUMBER NEEDED TO MEND QUAKE DAMAGE IN CAL.

PORTLAND, Mar. 28.—(AP)—At least six million dollars worth of lumber will be needed to rebuild the buildings destroyed and damaged by the Southern California earthquake, and dealers and producers of the Pacific northwest expect this region will be called upon to provide most of the requirements.

Advices received here from lumber association representatives in the Los Angeles area indicate the reconstruction program will call for about 300,000,000 feet of lumber. There is said to be less than 100,000,000 feet in stock in entire southern California, about one-third of the normal supply. Cargo mills of Oregon and Washington will naturally be looked to to furnish a great part of the material, dealers here say, to the extent of probably $6,000,000.

A. A. Keyser, grade inspector of the West Coast Lumbermen's association at Los Angeles, former Portland resident, reported to his organization in connection with the earthquake that "no finger will be pointed at the lumber industry either through wood failing in carrying its load or its ability to resist fire." He said damage to wooden or frame buildings was confined to family homes of the small, exceedingly cheap type of construction, and that generally faulty buildings by "carpetbag" contractors was responsible.

REFERENDUM ON OLEO PREPARED

SALEM, Mar. 28.—(AP)—The ballot title for the proposed referendum on the oleomargarine tax law was prepared today by Attorney-General I. H. VanWinkle. Sponsors of the referendum now will start circulation of petitions to secure the necessary 16,667 signatures to place it on the ballot July 21. The petitions must be completed by June 8.

The ballot title is as follows:

"Oleomargarine Tax Bill—Purpose: To levy an excise tax of four cents per pound on the sale of all oleomargarine sold in the State of Oregon, except for exportation, the proceeds to be apportioned to the several counties in proportion to their respective population; also to require every person, firm and corporation who shall distribute, sell, or offer for sale oleomargarine in the state of Oregon, to pay an annual license fee of $5 and secure a permit therefor."
