

Nearly Always "Moving Day," But She Finds Time to Write

Slender, stary-eyed young woman, with blond-gold hair, is not the conventional idea of a description for a successful writer of adventure and mystery thrillers, but it fits Mignon G. Eberhart. Her latest story, "The White Cockatoo," is now appearing in The Mail Tribune, the first installment being published yesterday.

Mrs. Eberhart (her husband is a civil engineer) has the unique distinction of having sold every story she ever wrote. Her first novelette was hidden, unseen and unread for two years before she gathered enough courage to submit it to a publisher. It was accepted immediately, to be followed by half a dozen stories and novels.

A native of Lincoln, Neb., Mrs. Eberhart is the daughter of W. T. Good. Three years at Nebraska Wesleyan university were followed by a special library course, then marriage. Although her novels are distinguished for masterful suspense and vivid, exciting action, Mrs. Eberhart insists on maintaining a respectful distance from everything but the calm and placid life. Pistols are familiar weapons in the hands of her characters, but a paper bag exploded behind the author produces a realistic hop, step and jump from the scene.

Their home now nominally in Chicago, the Eberharts are almost constantly "on the move" to meet the nomadic demands of the engineering profession. But whether she is at her apartment or in a construction camp Mrs. Eberhart writes.

"The White Cockatoo" is a story of adventure, mystery and romance. Its setting is a sinister summer resort hotel in an obscure French town. A cleverly-contrived plot brings the actors in this drama together in the middle of the winter, almost cut off from the outside world, practicing their hates and intrigues on each other. A fast-moving novel, "The White

PORTLAND, Ore., April 7.—(AP)—New business reported by the Western Pine association for the week ending April 1 amounted to $9,420,000 feet, or 2 per cent under the previous week and 25 per cent below the three-year average for March, the association said today. Only 34 of the 121 reporting mills were in operation.

In Medford today—Included among out-of-town callers in Medford today, who visited the county agent's office were William (Farmer Bill) Carl of the Applegate, and John Anderson of Central Point.

MORE INFLATION NEEDED IS HINT FOR ROOSEVELT

of confidence in the farm bill. It was a pointed left-handed slap at that measure and intended as such. The senators did not care to hold up Mr. Roosevelt's plan. They did not dare. They did want to point to another way of raising prices which they thought might prove better. They would have split up 15 different ways if they had any specific inflation proposal before them. They all want inflation, but no two will agree how to get it.

That is why there will be no inflation until the public or Mr. Roosevelt demands it.

More consideration is being given the idea than you have heard. It came up at a secret meeting of the senate banking and currency committee the other day. Treasury Secretary Woodin was testifying. He was closely pressed for his views. He readily admitted that everything tried so far had not come up to expectations. Senator Couzens asked him the direct question: "Isn't it the next step to issue about ten billion in greenbacks?"

Woodin covered his ears with his hands and rolled from side to side, saying: "Oh, Lord, I hope we do not come to that."

The dollar revaluationists are not getting very far.

A new scheme is current in congressional classrooms. It may take the form of legislation to be introduced by a Republican senator shortly. It calls for issuance of a new kind of paper money upon which payment in gold is NOT promised. It would merely be an obligation of the government like a free bond. Advocates of this scheme would make veterans' payments and such things with this type of money. It would have less value than existing paper money, but probably not much less.

You can't say the minds of these boys in congress are sluggish at any rate. Mr. Roosevelt played a little joke on Wall street in connection with securities regulation. Everyone read his message to congress on the subject. It said nothing about purging the list of existing securities. Indeed, it even hinted that subject was to be left for future recommendation. At least that is what the Wall Streeters thought. They smiled to themselves and cheered loudly.

If it applied only to new issues nobody would oppose it. There hasn't been a new issue since the old days when Mitchell was considered a great banker. There will not be any soon. Wall Street papers patted Mr. Roosevelt on the back and said what a great man he was. Two days later the text of Mr. Roosevelt's bill came out. That stated plainly all securities, new and old, must be vouched for by those selling them.

No such meaning and groaning has been heard since the animals stampeded for the ark.

The evidence indicates Mr. Roosevelt did not plan the deception. It is no violation of confidence to disclose that when he talked the bill over with newsmen BEFORE sending it to congress he mentioned old securities, as well as new. One of his secretaries, however, announced it applied only to the new ones. That impression was unanimously accepted.

What Mr. Roosevelt has back in his mind, on banking reform will prove even more startling than what he has done so far. His announced goal is to separate commercial banking from all other phases of the business. He would even take the trust and fiduciary business out of commercial banks. That would leave them little more than checking and savings accounts.

This idea will be sent to congress in the form of recommended legislation before the session is over. It means the Glass bill now is obsolete.

LOUISIANA BANDIT WAS EX-JACKSONVILLE MAN

Search of the state police records show that Sam Beardsley, fatally wounded yesterday in Louisiana while engaged in a bank robbing attempt, was a former resident of the Jacksonville district and with a man by the name of Clifford Davey was sentenced May 14, 1926, to serve 30 days in the county jail on a larceny charge. He was not well known in the Jacksonville section, having lived there but a short time.

Trace Recorded—The U. S. weather bureau reported today that a trace of precipitation was recorded at the airport between 5 p. m. Thursday and 5 a. m. Friday.
